The Collection of Hindu Law Texts Vol II. Part II.

YÂJŇAVALKYA SMRTI

WITH THE COMMENTARIES OF

(1) The MITÂKSHARÂ by Vijnanesvara Bhikshu

AND

(2) The VIRAMITRODAYA by Mitramis'ra Âchârâdhyâya

Chapters VIII-XIII.

An English Translation with notes

15083

BY

J. R. GHARPURE, B.A., LL.B., (Honours-in-Law.)

Principal Law College, Poona, Advocate High Court, Bombay.

Fellow of the University of Bombay.

Sa3S Yāj/Gha First Edition

(All rights reserved).

CENTRAL ARCHAEOLOGIGAL

Printed by S. V. Parulekar at the Bombay Vaibhav Press, Servants of India Socity's Home, Sandhurst Road, Girgaon, Bombay,

AND

Published by V. J. Gharpure, at the office of the Collection of Hindu Law Texts, Girgaon, Bombay.

02/2/81.

2000

Shi aces

40

1

The second part of the Acharadhyaya of the Smṛti of Yajñavalkya with the two Commentaries viz. the Mitakshara and the Viramitrodaya containing Chapters VIII to XIII are now being presented to the readers. In pursuance of the plan cutlined for this Series, important and leading works on Hindu Law and which are recognised as authorities in the several parts of this vast country, were to be selected, and their texts in the original Sanskrit published, together with the English Translations also, but after the publication of the texts. With a few exceptions, the texts in the Sanskrt are nearing completion. As the Smṛti of Yajñavalkya forms the basis almost for all the Schools of Hindu Law, that Smṛti was taken up first for translation, together with two of the most important of its commentaries, viz. the commentaries of the Mitakshara, and the Viramitrodaya.

The next part will contain, the Vyawahârâdhyâya and it is proposed to give the translation, not only of the two books, but of the commentary known as S'ulapâni together with liberal extracts from Aparârka and Viŝvarupa.

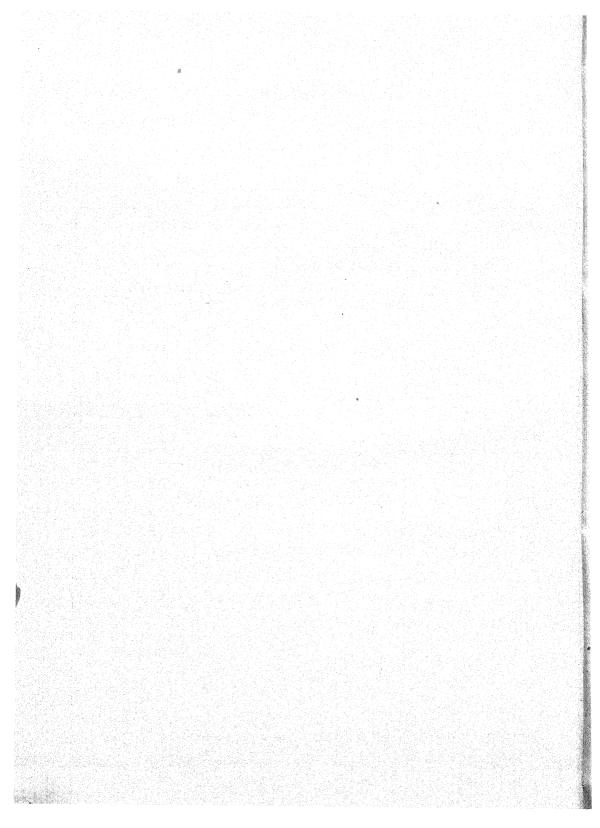

The publication of the present part had to be done under great pressure, and but for the readiness and promptitude of the press, it would not have been possible to present it within the appointed time.

The assistance of my son Bal at considerable sacrifice has also been of substantial help in the completion of this Volume.

After the remaining two Books are completed, a separate volume containing a general preface to the work and the General Index will be published as the last of this work.

29th March 1937 } Girgaum, Bombay. }

J. R. GHARPURE.

LIST OF CONTENTS.

Chapter VIII.

PURIFICATION OF THINGS.

	P	AGE.		P	AGE.
Things purified by hot water	988	397	Metal vessels		414
Valuable articles		398	Impure substances		415
Sacrificial objects		399	Excretions and exudations	•••	416
Purification of large quantities		401	Unknown defilement	•••	417
Defiled objects		402	Contact with body		418
Cutting. (takshanam)	•••	403	Water-tanks built by Chandalas		419
Stained objects	•••	404	Drawn out by dogs	•••	"
Coloured stuff	•••	405	Objects always pure		420
Ever-pure things		406	Pure and impure parts		421
Clothes of silk, wool etc.	•••	407	Drops issuing from the mouth	400	422
Purification of lands		408	Stickings in the teeth	•••	423
Things impure		409	Hair on the face	•••	42 4
Sweeping and smearing		,,	Sipping the water		425
Scatttering of earth		4I 0	The occasions for this	•••	,,,
Purification by an overflow		411	The process of sipping		"
Copper and other metals		412	Street and mud waters	•••	426
Falling of insects etc	•••	413	Purification of the body	•••	427
	(!hant	er IX.
		GH
Origin of Brāḥmaṇas		427	Gift of a cow	•••	435
Praise of the Brahmanas	44.	428	Fruit of a cow's gift	•••	436
Greatness of Brahmanas		429	Of a two-faced cow	•••	437
To whom gifts should be made		430	What is a two-faced cow?	•••	438
The fit recipients	•••	431	Equivalent of a cow's gift	•••	439
What should be given		"	Other gifts	•••	440
The Fruit of Donations		432	Gifts yielding happiness	•••	441
Prohibition in regard to the unfit	· · · ·	431	Gifts of religious merit	•••	442
Prohibition of acceptance		433	Gifts of Brahma		44 3
Voluntary Donations	•••	434	Fruit of non-acceptance	•••	444
Special rule of gifts	•••	434	Unsolicited offers	•••	415
Time for a donation	•••	"	Other acceptable things	•••	446
		Chap	ter X.
			ÂDDHAS.
The meaning of Śrâddha		447	장면과 이름이는 학교 회사를 가장하는 것이 되었다.		448
[일 하다면 20] 경향 경기에 하늘 없어 크리바스 경영 (65.2021) 전 등에 다른 생각이 되는 생각			Times for Vrddhi Śrâddhâ		449
The kinds of Śrâddhâ		n. ,,	Times for a Śrāddha		45(
The definition of Śrāddhā		>?	1 Times for a bradema 		30/

	7 7	PAGE.		F	AGE.
The Yugas	PRE	451	The day to be respected		494
During the Eclipse		452	Observance of abstinence		495
The 'Wealth of Śrâddhâs'		453	The Vrddhi Śrāddha	•••	496
Bråhmanas eligible for Śrâddhâ		454	The number of Pindas		498
Their relative merits	•••	455	Ekoddishta		499
Avoidable Brahmans	•••	457	Sapindi Śrâddha		502
A eunuch, an accused etc.	100	458	Meaning of the word "Preta"	•••	503
The Kundasis etc	•••	459	Sapindikarana Śrāddha		504
Persons unfit for Śrāddha	•••	460	사무장이 아내로 하게 된다면 하는데 그리면 하는데 얼마에서 사용하는데 그리고 하는데 되었다.		505
Improper recipients		,	이루 살이 사람이 나를 들었습니다. 이 그리고 있는데 그리다니?		506
The Pârvaṇa Śrâddha		461			507
The Invitation	•••	462			508
Treating the Brahmanas	•••	463	0.00		509
The Kutapa	405	464	Sapindikarana of the mother	•••	510
Even and uneven numbers	•••	465	A		510
At the Daiva		466			511
For the Pitriya		"		,	512
For the maternal grand-father		467			513
Options for a smaller number	•••	468	m· · · · 1.1	• • •	514
Food for the Visve-Devas		469	Sapindikarana and Masikas	•••
Invocation of Visve-Devas	•••	470			515
The Arghya	990	471	and the second of the second o		516
Worship of the Brahmanas		472		•••	517
The lamp, the garment		473	031	•••	518
And the seats		24	mr	• • •	519
Invocation of the Pitrs		474	A reconciliation	•••	520
Arghya for the Pitrs	788	476	The Author's conclusion	•••	521
The Daiva Śrāddha		477		•••	522
Agnaukaranam		478		•••	523
The Eight Śrâddhas	• • • •	480		•••	524
Offerings on the hand		481		•••	524
The offering of the food		482			525
Food for the Devas		483	요즘 하는데 이 교육을 하셨다는 그리고 있다고 있는데, 하는데 없이 그리다는 사람들이 다른	• • •	526
Abhis'ravana		484	Offerings yielding endlessness	•••	527
Acceptable and non-acceptable for					529
mi com i si		485		• • •	530
The "Vikira"		486	Kâmya Śrâddhas		531
		487	Specific fruits for specific asterism	ns	532
Swastivâchyam		489	AT 1.11		533
Swadha pronouncement		490	17-421- 3 11 A ATTY A		534
The Prayer	•••	491	The Vasus, the Rudras, and Adity		535
The Farewell	•••	492	Pitr devotes	•	5 3 6
The 'Visarjanam'	•••	493	The fruit	•••	536

Chapter XI.

RULES RELATING TO GANAPATI.

그리다 그리다 남의 생각이 되었다. 그 분인 얼굴에 밝혔다며?			아님이 얼마나 그를 되어 이 시험을 되지 않는데 어
Origin of the Vinâyaka		537	The Bhadrasana		546
The two sources of obstruction	•••	,,	Performance after the bath	•••	547
Symptoms of attack		538	Bali Offering		5 4 8
Actual sights		539	Mantras for Vinâyaka	•••	549
Dreams	2 10 20	540	Mantras for Ambā		550
When awake		541	Ritual for the Vinâyaka bath	4	551
Rites for abatement		93	The prayers & bali		552
The Bath ceremony	•••	542	Another fruit of the Vinâyaka	bath	553
Invocation to the Vinâyaka	•••	543	The resulting fruit	68.0	554
The bath mantras	•••	544	Nitya & Kâmya fruit		555
Bath for one possessed	•••	545	Acts conducive of the fruit		556
	C	Chapt	er XII.
PROP	ITIA	TION	OF PLANETS.
Who should propitiate	48)	>)	Kinds & numbers of Samidhs	480	563
The Graha Yajña		22	The oblations		564
The nine planets	>	557	The food for Grahas		565
The images of planets		558	Appropriation of Bali articles	-	566
Description of the images		559	The Dakshinā		567
Method of worship of planets		560	The Santika & the Paushtika		568
The Pujā ceremony	•••	561	Gautama's view		569
The nine Mantras for nine pl	anets	562		.,,	570
	C	hapt	er XIII.
OF T			ES OF A KING
His special duties		570	Rule regarding Corrody	•••	582
His special qualifications	•••		era 27. 4 . 7		583
The Vyasanas		572	 * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *		584
The qualities of a King			mi TZ! 1 O.00		585
His External attributes	800	- P7 /			586
The King's Purchita	699		기상 그 이 얼마나 그 같아 나는 것 같아. 그는 그는 그 때문에 다른 것이다.	369	2,
Qualities of a Brāḥmaṇa pries			시 [시 [15] 전화로 시계 시설 등 전 경우 이 전환 때 이 시간 이 분들이 있다.		587
The inexhaustible treasure of I		577	지는 하람이 교육으로 하는 하고 하셨다면서 얼마나 되었다.		588
The merits of a gift to Brahma	na	578		•••	"
Acquisition and preservation	of		Persons exempt from attack	·	589
wealth	•••	579			590
Disposal of wealth	•••		20 4. 마루마르 기대민리를 위로 즐겁는데 얼마나는 다른 바람들은 모양	420	591
			Reccoveries to be deposited		592
Drawing the document of a gif			TETHOR OF HIGHBOILEOID	•••	593
The Contents of the Royal Ord	ier	. 581	The Army	933	999

Reports of the Spies	•••	594	A combination of the two	612
Retirement		595	Acquisition of a friend	613
The King's Diary	•••	596	Prakṛtis of an Administration	614
King's attitude towards friends		597	Origin of Danda	615
Fruit from protection of Subjects		598	Purpose of Danda	615
King's responsibility for sins	of		The wielder of Danda	616
subjects		599	Result of its proper use	617
The reason of the rule		600	No immunity from punishment	618
Banishment of corrupt officers		601	Merit equal to sacrifice	619
Result of an unjust rule		602	Trials with the help of councillors	620
His duty towards the conquered		603	Śreņis, Gaņas etc	621
Strict secrecy about mantras		604	Punishments and their measures	622
Kinds of friends and enemies		605	The Gold measures	623
Neutrals		606	Nishka and Krshnala	624
The Royal circle		,,	Silver measures	625
Sâma & other means	• • •	607	Uttama Sāhasa etc	626
Result of Sâma		608	Gold, Silver & Copper	627
Expedients such as Sandhi etc.	•.•	609	Kinds of Punishments	628
Time for making Sandhi		610	Principles of awarding punishments.	629
Destiny Vs. Human efforts		611	Regard to time, place etc	630

CHAPTER VIII.

On the Purification of Things.

The Author now declares the purification of things.

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 182, 183.

Of golden and silver (articles), things produced in water, sacrificial vessels, the ladle, the stone-vessels, vegetables, ropes, roots, fruit, cloth, split bamboo, hides; 182.

Of vessels and of chamasas, with water is the purification intended; and of the charu, sruk, sruva, and oil vessels, by hot water. 183.

im, nch, sels, ted

5

10

20

25

Mitakshara.—Sauvarņam, golden, made of gold; rājatam, silver, made of silver; abjam, produced in water, such as pearls, conch, shell, mother of pearl &c.; u'rdhwapatram, sacrificial vessels, such as the sacrificial mortar &c., on account of their being associated with the grahas &c.; grahah, ladles such as the shodasi, and the rest; as'mâ, stone vessel, such as the flat stone for grinding &c.; s'akam, vegetable, such as pot-herbs &c.; rajjuh, rope, made of grass, water-moss &c.; moolam, root, such as ginger &c.; falam, fruit, mango &c.; vaso, cloth, garment; vidalam, split-bamboo,

Page 52* of goats &c. The mention of split bamboos and hides is indicative by implication of articles made of these, such as umbrellas, clothes. &c.

Pâtrâni, vessels, such as the sprinkling vessel and the like others; chamasas, the chamasas, for the sacrificial priest &c.

Of these i. e. of the golden vessels and the rest, if free from stain, and if they have only been touched by the unwashed after meals, warina, by water, i.e. by washing with water, is the purification, s'uddhih.

^{1.} चन्त्र:-a can or a ladle used at sacrifices for drinking the soma juice.

^{2. 3} See One who has not washed himself after meals.

Charu i. e. the charu vessel. Sruk and Sruva are well-known; sasnehapâtrâni, oil vessels, containing oil, such as Prâs itraharana &c.

These also when free from stains are purified, by hot water, ushnena varina, as ordained by Manu⁵:—

"A stainless golden vessel becomes pure by water; simply likewise what is produced in water, what is made of stone, and a silver vessel not enchased." "Not enchased" i. e., of which the cavities are not filled with impurity.

As regards the purification of vessels having stains, the rule stated by Manu⁷ should be followed:—

"Of all objects made of precious metals, or of gems, and of every thing made of stone, the purification is stated by the wise to be by ashes, water, and earth."

As ashes and earth produce the same effect, there is an option. But water must always be added. When, however, touched by the mouth of a crow &c. this rule must be observed viz.: "When touched by the mouth of a black bird, a vessel should be rubbed; and when rubbed by the mouth of a beast of prey, that vessel must not be used". This,however, with the exception of a cat, since Manu⁸ has observed: "The cat, and the ladle, and the wind, are always pure".

^{1.} বৃহ্যালী—the pot for boiling rice; the sacrificial rice.

^{2.} सुक—a wooden ladle, usually of Paldsa or Khadira trees, used for pouring oblations of ghee into the fire.

^{3.} स्व-also a ladle.

^{4.} Prâsitra—haraṇa—্বাহাির is the portion of the oblation to Brahman at a sacrifice; and the vessel in which this is placed.

^{5.} Ch. V. 112.

^{6.} अद्यर्क्टतम्—Medhâtithi and Nandana—'not defiled very much'; not adorned or carved in.

^{7.} Oh. V. 111.

^{8.—}Not found in the published editions of Manu.

อ

10

20

30

35

Viramitrodaya.

Now considering that the duties of the Varnas and the Aśramas generally consist of the purification of things, and also that the duty regarding sipping is also intended for purification, incidentally mentioning the means of the purification of gold, silver, and like other articles also, or their natural purity, the Author mentions the duty in the form of sipping commencing with the text¹, "Of gold, silver etc," and ending with the text² "structures of baked bricks also", on account of the variety of the means of purification, he commences with the chapter on Purification, reached in due course

Yajnavalkya, Verses 182, 183 (1).

Gold and Silver, i. e. any forms of gold and silver; things produced from water, such as the conch, mother of pearl &c; sacrificial vessel, such as the sacrificial drona, jar, pestle, by reason of their association with graha; grahas i. e. the ladles such as the shodasis, particular vessels used at sacrifices; asma, the stone slab; sako, vegetable, such as pot-herbs &c.; rajju, rope, made of grass, water-moss &c; vidalam, split-bamboos and the like; the mention of split-bamboo and hides is also inclusive, by implication, of umbrellas, bags &c. made of these; Patrani, vessels, such as the sprinkling vessels, and the like; chamasah, the chamasa for the Hota and similar other sacrificial utensils. Of these, if simply used for eating, or besmeared with ghee and other unctuous substance, if free from stain, the purification is by a mere washing with water.

Yājnavalkya, Verse 183 (2).

Charuh i. e. the pot (for charu); sruk, such as the juha and the like; sruvah, is well-known; sasnehani, with unction i. e. vessels smeared with ghee &c., such as the djyapatra and the like. These when not used for eating, or when free from any stain, become pure by heing washed with hot water; this is the deduction. As regards those, however, having a stain, the purification is stated by Manu³ thus, "Of all objects made of precious metal and of jewels, and of everything made of gold, with ashes, water, as also with earth has the purification been stated by the wise". Here, between the earth and ashes, there is option, as both mean the same; water, however is to be added, owing to the difference in action. (182, 183).

1. Verse 182.

^{2.} Verse 127.

^{3.} Ch. V. 111.

25

The purification of sacrificial vessels &c. is by sprinkling with water

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 184.

For the sphya, the winnowing basket, the deer-skin, the grains, the pestle, the mortar, and the cart, sprinkling with water; as also of solid things, and of large quantities of grain, and of cloth. 184.

Mitâkṣharâ—Sphyo¹, the thunderbolt, a sacrificial instrument; anaḥ, cart, i. e. carriage. The rest are well-known; of these the purification is by hot water. The repetition again of the word ajina-deer-skin-is to indicate the particular one used as a sacrificial accessory; samhatânâm, of solid things, of the above-enumerated objects requiring purification, and, bahûnâm, of large quantities, of grain, and also of cloth. The mention of clothes is illustrative of the above enumerated objects requiring purification. Of the objects mentioned as requiring purification i. e. of large quantities of grain and cloth &c., when made in heaps, by sprinkling simply is the purification. The expression 'Large quantity' is relative viz., by regard to the quantity defiled by touch.

This is what purports to have been said: When grain or clothes are piled in heaps and those touched by Chandala or the like are less in number, while a large quantity are untouched, there, of those touched, the purification is by the method already described, and of the rest by sprinkling with water. So also another Smṛti:— "Of heaps of grain or cloth &c., when a portion has been defiled, that much only being taken away, the rest may be by sprinkling with water".

Moreover, when the proportion of the portion defiled by touch is great, and the portion not touched is small, then all must be 30 washed. As is said by Manu': "Sprinkling with water, however,

 [—]A sort of a wooden implement of the shape of a sword used in a sacrifice. "वज्रो वे स्पय;" थ्रातिः

^{2.} Ch. V. 118,

15

25

is of large quantities of grain and of cloth; but by washing has been prescribed the purification of small quantities'.

Even when the quantities of the touched and of the untouched are equal, (the purification is by) sprinkling alone.

By ordaining sprinkling for large quantities, the purification of small quantities by washing was established, still the repetition again of washing of the small quantities is with a view to exclude the text as to washing in the case of equal quantities.

When, however, it is impossible to discriminate what portion has been touched and what has not been touched, washing alone 10 (is the rule), as it is necessary to remove the taint in the other half.

According to the Nibandhakâra¹: "While being carried by many persons, for grains, cloth &c., some of which are touched and the rest untouched, sprinkling with water alone (is the purification.)" 184.

Viramitrodaya.

Sphyah, the sword made of the Khâdira wood; S'arpa, the winnowing basket, is well known; ajinam, the hide; of others than these, other modes of purification having been mentioned; dhânya, grain, such as paddy &c. used at a sacrifice; musala and ulûkhala, the pestle and the mortar, are well-known; anah, car; samhatam, stored in heaps; bahu, many; i.e., grain such as can be carried by many people (alone), and also cloth even the unsacrificial also; of these, prokshanam, the sprinkling, is the process of purification. That has been stated by Baudhâyana: "For having been touched by the Chandâla or the like, when in quantity to be carried by many persons, sprinkling".

Here, in this connection in the Mitakshra another rule of adjustment has been stated thus: when grain, and clothes also, are in heaps, and there, those touched by the Chandala and the like are small, and those not touched large, then of those touched, the purification is as has been already stated; while for those not touched, by mere sprinkling alone is the purification. When, however, those touched are large and those not touched are small, then for all is the washing. When,

^{1.} Digest writers, as will appear later on Cf. बौधायन (१-५-४७) देशें कालं नथाऽऽस्मानं द्रव्यं द्रव्यप्रयोजनम् । उपपात्तिमवस्यां च ज्ञात्वा सुद्धिं प्रयोजयेत् ॥

ŏ

moreover, there is an equality between those touched and the untouched, then sprinkling only. When, moreover, a discrimination cannot be made as to what has been touched and what has not been touched, washing alone. 'Even a partial impurity has to be removed', to this effect are some of the texts recited in the rule of adjustment in such a case. (184).

Having described the manner of the purification of objects not stained but defiled merely by touch, the Author now describes the purification of objects bearing a taint

Yjñavalkya, Verse 185.

Paring in the case of wood, horns, and bones; by cow's hairs, the objects made of fruits; sprinkling by the hand, of the sacrificial utensils while performing a sacrifice (185).

Mitâksharâ.—Takshaṇamiti, paring &c., daruṇâm, of wood, of the s'ṛngâṇam, horns, of the ram, Special rule for buffalo, and the like, &c., asthnâm, of bones, purification of of elephants, wild boar, conch &c. By the stained objects. use of the word bones are also included the teeth; these when stained by leavings of food, oil &c., are purified by earth, ashes, water &c. till the stain is removed, vide the general rule of purification: "As long as the foul smell does not leave impure objects, as also the stain caused thereby, so long must earth and water be applied in cleaning the objects".

Takshanam, paring i. e. the purification is by removing that much of the portion. Phalasambhavam, Page 53 * made of fruits, vessels made of the shells of the fruits of bel, gourd, cocoa-nut &c., the purification of these is by brushing them with cow's hair, gobalaih.

Yajñapâtrânâm, of sacrificial vessels, such as the sruk, sruva &c., at the time of being used in a sacrificial performance, by being rubbed with the right hand by means of the darbhas, or with the ends of the Pavitr (stainer) sprinkling should be made according to the S'astra, as a part of the principal Act. This instance from a S'rutra sacrifice, moreover, is with a view to indicate that the purification of other vessels such as of gold &c., while employed in Smarta, or secular performances, though already cleansed, also is a part of the principal ceremony. On the other hand, of those vessels which form part of a sacrifice though already cleansed, this sprinkling with the ends of the Pavitra is by way of a Sanskâra.

^{1.} Manu, Ch. V. 126.

^{2.} i. e.—as may have been rendered impure.

Viramitrodaya.

Dâru, 'wood'; śṛngam, 'horns' i.e., belonging to a ram, buffalo &c.; asthi, 'bones' i.e., of the elephant, hog, and the like. According to the Mitâkṣharâ the word bone is indicative, by an extension, of tusk &c. Of these when contaminated in a portion by urine &c., takṣhanam, paring, the cutting off of the contaminated portion only is the process of purification. When, however, the whole is defiled, Yama says: "Of vessels made of the wood of the bottle-gourd, as also of split bamboos, when entirely defiled. abandonment has been ordained."

Of vessels 'made of fruit', Phalasambhuvam, i.e., produced from the fruit of bilwa, bottle-gourd, and the like, when defiled by the leavings at meals or the like, gobalaih 'by the cow's hair' i.e., rubbing with the cow's tail is the purification. Of these, moreover, when defiled in one part by urine &c. the Vâyupurânam declares: "Similarly, of hide, bones and wood, as also of horn, cutting off." On an entire contamination, however, by urine &c. according to the text of Yama quoted before, abandonment alone (is the way).

Of the sacrificial utensils such as the sruva etc. to be used in the sacrificial performance, sprinklnig by the hand, and removing the taint is the purificatory process; thereafter, moreover, washing, with hot water has been stated before, so holds Sûlapâṇi. According to the ^{1.} क्मींगतपा—treating it i. e. the sprinkling, as a part of the sacrifice itself.

^{2.} The meaning is that although this illustration is taken from a Śrauta performance, the rule of procedure and its incidence i. e. being only a part, or an interlude in the principal one, is equally applicable to performances other than Śrauta, such as Śmârta or Laukika.

^{3.} संस्कारार्थ—i. e. a necessary संस्कार for these before they could be used at a sacrifice.

15

Mitakshara, of those purified by washing, sprinkling with the darbhas or the ends of the Pavitra according to S'astra is as a Sanskara. (185)

The Author now describes some special means of removing stains of certain objects which have been stained

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 186.

With alkaline earth, water and cow's urine are purified woolen and silken stuffs; with the S'ri fruit the ams'upaṭṭa; and with pounded ariṭṣha fruit woolen blankets. 186.

10 Mitakshara.—With alkaline earth with water, and cow's urine or with water, according to the stain.

Awikam, woolen, i. e., made of wool; kaus'ikam, silken, i. e. made of such coconnus as tassar &c., when washed, are purified. "Water and cow's urine" is in the plural number with a view to have water (wash) after again. Amsupatta, made of the threads of the barks of trees; Sas'riphalaih, with s'ri fruit, i. e., with the bel fruit; kutapah, a woolen blanket, i. e., a blanket made of the wool of the hilly ram. "With the arishta" (fruit) water and cow's urine, (is purified); (this word) is implied.

This rule must be understood to be applicable to cases where the impurity is caused by contact with the leavings of food and oily substances or the like. In cases of small defilement (purification is attained) by sprinkling, as a washing cannot be borne. As a general rule, purification is intended without destruction of the objects. And so also Devala having premised: "Woolen and silken stuffs, blankets, patas, linen, and woven silk are purified by light methods such as drying or sprinkling" goes on to say: "These even when defiled with impurities must be washed by the following special method of purification viz., by bran, or alkaline fruit-juice." Like linen, s'ana' also has the same process.

^{1.} अरिष्ट—Marathi रिठा-

^{2.} ज्ञाज-Mery स्व-hemp.

15

20

25

The mention of wool &c., is with a view to include quilts &c. made of those meterials. They also, when slightly defiled, are to be washed. When besmeared with impurities, elsewhere Devala has stated: "The quilt, the pillow, and cloth dyed with flower colours, after being dried for a time in the sun, one should sprinkle with the hands; and then having sprinkled with water, one may use it in the performance; and even these when extremely unclean one should properly cleanse." 'Flower colours' i.e., tinged with red-flowers and Kusumbha. The use of the expression flower-colour is with a view to include by extension others also such as those dyed with turmeric &c., which cannot bear washing, but not those of madder, that being capable of being washed.

It has also been declared by S'ankha: "Coloured stuffs when sprinkled become pure".

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 187.

With the white mustard, the linen cloth; by a second burning, an earthen vessel; the hand of an artisan is pure; so a marketable commodity, things obtained by begging, and also the mouth of a woman. 187.

Mitâksharâ.—Gaurasarshapasahitaih, mixed with white mustard, water and cow's urine; kshauma, the linen cloth; kshumâ i. e., atasi, the hemp plant cloth manufactured of the threads of the plant, becomes pure; Punaḥpâkena, by a second burning, earthen vessels, like pots etc. This is the rule only in cases of impurities caused by contact with the leavings of food, oily substances &c. because there is a Smṛti¹: "When defiled by spirituous liquor, urine, ordure, saliva, pus, drippings of blood, an earthen vessel cannot be purified by being burnt again."

When, however, defiled by the contact of the Chandalas &c., they must be abandoned, as says Paras'ara: "If defiled by the touch of the Chandalas and like others, grains, so also clothes may become pure by a sprinkling; but by abandonment the earthen vessels."

^{1.} Of Manu, Ch. V. 123.

10

15

Kâravah, artisans, such as the dyer, the washerman, cook, and the like &c.; their hand is always pure. The purity is relative to their peculiar department of work, such as the washing of clothes &c., even if there occur¹ birth or death or the like. So also in another Smṛti.²: "Artisans, artists, physicians, female slaves, and male slaves; the king, and the servants of the king, are declared to be always pure."

Panyam, a marketable commodity, which can command a price and which is for sale³, such as barley, paddy Page 54* &c., which are to be purchased and are to be sold. Although handled by various persons desirous of purchase, these do not become impure; also on account of untouchability due to birth or death in the case of grocers.

Bhaiksham, things obtained by begging, the collections through begging. On account of coming into the hands of a celibate or the like, or by reason of being given by women who had not performed ablutions, as also on account of the crossing through impure streets &c. these do not become impure.

So also yoshinmukham, the mouth of a woman, at the time of intercourse, is pure. As has been declared by a Smṛti: "woman also during sexual intercourse".

Viramitrodaya. Yâjñavalkya, Verses 186,—187 (1).

Deshah, 'alkaline earth', saltish earth, with waters, along with these; or when the stain is great, with cow's urine. Avikam, 'woolen', i.e., full of wool; Kauśikam, 'silken', made of Kośa, such as tusser cloth &c., by washing is purified. Ansupattam, 'made of fibre from the split barks of hemp', with the śri fruit together with the bilwa fruit, with water and cow's urine; Kutapah 'blanket', a special kind of blanket prepared from the hair of a ram, with the foam of the arishta nut and with water and cow urine. Kihuma means hemp; cloth made

^{1.} स्तक -on account of birth or death, जननाशीच and शावाशीच.

^{2.} Parâsara, III. 27.

^{3.} quq-any article exhibited for sale in market overt.

25

of its fibres, becomes pure with water and cow's urine mixed with the paste of white rye. This, moreover, when the defilement is very great. Otherwise, however, Devala: "Of woolen, silken, and hemp clothes, when soiled, the purification is brought about by drving and washing, if the impurity is small; these also when besmeared with impurities, one should cleanse by rubbing with salts?". Here: 'must be washed with the special method, viz., by decoctions of grains and with alkaline fruit-juices, so is written in the Mitakshara. An earthen pot, however, becomes pure by being burnt again in fire. This, moreover, on a defilement by the leavings at meals, as says Manu1: "When besmeared with spirituous liquor, wine, ordure, spittings, or by the pus and blood, an earthen vessel cannot be purified by being burnt again." Here, also Devala: "The quilt, the pillow, and cloth dved with flower-colours, after being dried for a while in the sun, one should sprinkle with the hands; and then having sprinkled with water, one may use it in the performance; even these when extremely unclean, one should properly cleanse."

The Author mentions things pure in themselves,

Yâjñavalkya Verse 187 (2).

Karuh, 'an artisan', a skilled workman such as the garland-maker. barber &c; his hand, although a cause may occur for a wash, even without a wash, is pure, suchih, i. e. fit for proceeding with the work. Panyam, 'a marketable commodity', a vendible article spread out at the sale stall-excepting cooked food, such as barley, paddy &c. although touched by the impure, is pure. Bhaiksham 'beggings' i. e. the collections of alms, that, even on a crossing through the street, is pure "Food obtained by begging, which a student holds (in his hands) is always pure; that is a settled rule", So says Manu. Yoshinmukham. 'the mouth of a woman' at the time of intercourse is pure, "The mouth of a woman at intercourse and kissing" vide this text of Paithinasi. Yoshit, 'woman', means one's own wife. By the word tatha, 'also', are added by inclusion the back of a cow &c., as pointed out in this text of Yama: "Free from fault is the mouth of a woman, the back of cows, the mouth of a goat; these are always pure; that likewise which is praised by speech" (187) (2).

10

15

20

30

The Author now describes the purification of land

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 188.

Purification of land is by sweeping, by burning, by time, by cows passing over it, by sprinkling, by scraping, and by smearing; the house by sweeping and by smearing. 188.

Mitâksharâ—Mârjanam, sweeping, is clearing away of dust, straw, &c., with the broom; dâhah, burning, with straw, fuel &c.; kâlo, time, i. e. such period of time by which the besmearment &c. would vanish; gokramaṇam, cows' passing over, i. e. being trodden by the feet of the cows; sekah, sprinkling, pouring of milk, cow's urine, cow-dung and water; ullekhanam, scraping, i. e. paring or digging; leho, smearing, with cow-dung &c.

By means of these methods i. e. by sweeping &c. either severally or jointly, land which is impure, defiled, and even unclean, becomes purified. Moreover, Devala:—"Where a woman parturates, or dies, or where one is burnt, or where Channdalas &c. have dwelt, or where fæces &c., are collected; and thus land which has much of impurity is said to be an 'impure' amedhya land." "The land which has had the contact of dogs, hogs, asses, camels, and the like becomes 'defiled' dushta; by charcoal, straw, hair, horns &c. it becomes unclean malina;" having thus stated the three kinds of land viz., impure, defiled or unclean, which require purification, further declares the several methods of purification:— "By five times, or by four times, land which is even impure becomes pure; that which is defiled by contact with the bad, by three times or two times; and by one process, the unclean land".

Where human bodies are burnt and where Chandalas have dwelt, these two kinds become pure by burning, time, passing of the cows, sprinkling, and scraping. Where men are born, and where also they die, or where also there is excessive accumulation of fæces, &c., such places are purified by the same four methods, exclusive of burning. Of the land on which dogs, hogs, and asses have stayed for a long time the purification is by the three methods, viz., passing of a cow, sprinkling, and scraping. And of that on which the camels, village cocks &c. have dwelt long, the purification is by sprinkling and scraping. That land on which charcoal, straw &c. have been kept for a long time becomes pure by scraping. Sweeping and smearing are always to be taken in conjunction with the above processes.

10

30

Similarly grham, a house, is purified, marjanalepanat, by sweeping and smearing. The separate mention of the house is for the purpose of indicating that sweeping and smearing must be daily performed.

Viramitrodaya.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 188.

Marjanam, 'sweeping' removing the dust; dahah, burning, immersion into the fire all round; Kalo, 'time' so much time by as much as the vanishing of the stain the cause of impurity takes; gokramanam. 15 'passing of the cows', the constant treading of the foot of cows; seks, 'sprinkling', washing with sprinkling water; ullekhanam 'scraping' i.e. paring; lepa, 'besmearing', i.e. besmearing with cowdung. With these i. e. sweeping &c. either by each separately, or by all combined, is the 20) purification of land. For, (defiled) land is of three kinds, amedhya 'impure', dushta, defiled', and malina, 'unclean'. There, of the impure, by burning and other, in all five or four, methods; of defiled land by three, such as burning &c, or by digging and smearing; and of the impure land, however, by besmearing alone is the purification. That 25 has been stated by Devala: "In five ways, or in four ways, an impure land becomes pure; land which has been defiled is purified by two or three methods; and the unclean by one process. Burning, digging, besmearing, or furrowing, and the rain showered is the five-fold purification of land laid down."

The characteristics of 'impure' &c. have been stated by him also: "Where a pregnant woman delivers of a child, or where a human being dies, what has been dwelt into by the Chandalas, and where a dead body is thrown, where ordure and urine have been accumulated, where a corpse is seen, thus land which is full of impurities, is characterised as 'impure' amedhya. Where land is defiled 35 by worms, insects, or by the treading of the feet, by the decomposed phlegmatic discharges, scattered, or vomits, becomes defiled dushta.

30

When covered by the impurities from nails, teeth, hair, skin, husk, sand, and dust, or by ashes, mud, or straw, the land becomes 'unclean' Malind.''

Drapsam, phlegm, i.e., concentrated phlegm; tanujam, 'hair'. Here, moreover, according as the defilement may be great or small, five times, or four times &c. There is an option. Here of the unclean land, by once besmearing is the purification. The sprinkling and besmearing are to be taken as applicable in all cases; so holds the Mitakshara.

A house, however, is purified by sprinkling and smearing. The mention of the house separately is with a view to include the sprinkling 10

In regard to the purification of a house defiled by a corpse, Samvarta states a special rule; "I shall describe the purification of a house defiled by a corpse lying within: having cast off the earthen pots as also cooked food, all that having thrown out from the house, one should besmear it with cow-dung. After having besmeared with cow-dung, the wise man should have it smelt by a goat. And purified with the (recital of) holy hymns by the Brâhmaṇas and with water mixed with gold and Kuśa, the entire house should be sprinkled over, and then undoubtedly it becomes pure." The corpse here is of the cow, or a man, or the like, so it appears from the usage of the good. (188).

Yâjñavalkya Verse 189.

In the case of food which has been smelt by cows, as also (which is) defiled by the hair, flies, or insects, water, ashes, or even earth must be scattered over it for purification. 189.

Mitâksharâ.—Goghrâte, smelt by cows, i. e. defiled by the breath of cows; anne, in the case of food, i. e. all sorts of edibles; tathâ Kes'amakshikâkiṭadûshita, as also that which has been defiled by hair, flies, or insects. The use of the word kes'â is with

1. केश and लोम.—Both mean hair. लोम is hair generally on the human body or of any animal; (Keśa) केश—means hair on the head. Note the following from Amara II, VI. 95-99. for this distinction as well as of other terms indicative of hair. चिकुर: कुन्तलो बाल: कवः केश: शिरोहहः (९५)

तद्दर् द्वे केशिकं केश्यम् अलकाश्चर्णकुन्तलाः । ते ललोटे भ्रमरकाः काकपक्षः शिखण्डकः ॥९६॥ कवरी केशवेशोऽप धम्माद्धिः संयताः कचाः । शिखा चुडा केशपाशो त्रतिनस्तु जटा सटा ॥९०॥ वेणिप्रवेणी शीर्षण्यशिरस्यो विशदे कचे । पाशः पक्षश्च हस्तश्च कलापार्थाः कचात्परे ॥९८॥ तद्वरुहं रोम लोम तद्व्दी श्मश्च पुंष्ठाखे ॥९९॥ a view to include hair on the head; loma, hair on the body; kitah, insects, such as ants &c., water for purification; bhasma mṛdwâ, ashes or earth, as far as possible should be scattered over it. As to what Gautama, has said: "Never is to be eaten food in which hair or insect has fallen," that has a reference to the food which has been cooked with hair and insects in.

Viramitrodaya.

Yâjñavalkya Verse 189.

Goghrâtâdâvanne. 'in regard to food smelt by cows'; i. e. all eatables; water, and ashes, or earth and water, should be scattered for the purpose of purification, "Never is to be eaten food in which hair or insect have fallen"—this text of Gautama however, has a reference to that which has been boiled with hair etc. in it; mṛdwâpīti, 'or even earth' is the reading at some places. There in the alternative of scattering 'the earth' also; by the use of the word api 'even', is included water. (189).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 190.

Of Tin, lead, and copper, by alkaline substances, acids and water, by ashes, or water; of brass and iron, and of the liquids, the purification is (by) an overflow. 190.

20 Mitâkṣharâ.—Trapu, tin, &c. are well-known; of these by alkaline water, or by acidised water, and also

* Page 55 by water, or by all, or severally by any of these processes according to (the extent and nature) of the defilement, the purification is to be made. Kânsya-lohânâm, of brass and iron, by ashes and water. By the use of the word tâmra, of brass and iron, by ashes and water. By the use of the word tamra, copper, are also included pewter metal and brass, as they have the same origin. This rule of purification of copper &c., by acids, water &c., is, however, not restrictive; for a Smrti declares a general rule viz.

25

30

"By whichever substance defilement caused by contact with impurity or produced by it is removed, that is said to be its purifier generally, the purificator of a thing."

^{1.} Oh. XVII. 8-9.

^{2.} Meaning thereby that not but defiled by contact merely, hair &c. had fallen in before cooking.

10

15

20

25

Therefore, when copper, &c. are defiled by being besmeared with (the leavings of food) impure water &c. and the same is possible to be removed by other methods, it is not that compulsorily the purification is to be made by acids and water &c. And therefore Manu has ordained generally:

"Of copper, iron, brass, pewter, tin, and lead, the purification should be made with alkali, acid, and water as may be necessary."

As to the text:—"By ashes is purified brass, and copper becomes pure by acids, that is with the object of demonstrating the last degree of purification of copper and the like, and not as excluding other processes. Where, however, the defilement is excessive, there, the alkaline water &c. are to be resorted to, vide the following Smṛti: "Smelt by the cow the brass vessels, as also those defiled by eating by a S'ûdra, become pure by ten times being rubbed with alkali, as also those defiled by dogs and crows."

S'uddhih plavo dravasya tu iti, the purification, by an overflow, is of the liquids. Dravasya, of a liquid, i. e., liquid substances such as clarified butter etc. of greater quantity than a prastha2 when defiled by dogs, crows &c. as also when touched by impure substances, plavah, overflow, with a liquid substance of the same kind the vessel to be overfilled until overflown, is the purification, s'uddhih, is what follows. Of less than the flow, is an abandonment. Greatness or smallness of quantity is moreover to be determined also by regard to the place and also to time. As says Baudhâyana;

"Place, time, as also oneself, the object, and the substances to be employed, after knowing all these, the cause of the defilement and the condition (of the thing or the person defiled), one should determine the process of purification".

^{1.} Oh. V. 114.

प्रमु—a measure—see Amara II. IX. 88-89.

अस्त्रियामादकद्रोणी खारी नाही निकुञ्जकः। कुडनः प्रस्थ इत्याद्याः परिमाणार्थकाः पृथक् ॥ Note also the following passage cited in the Râmas'rami Tika on Amara पलं प्रकुञ्चकं प्रिष्टिः कुडवस्तचेतुष्टकम् । चत्वारः कुडवाः प्रस्थश्चतुःप्रस्थमथाढकम् ॥ अष्टाढको भवेद्देद्रोणौ द्विद्रींणः सूर्पं उच्यते । सार्धसूर्पौ भवेत्स्वारी द्विद्रोणा गोण्युदात्हता ॥ तामव भारं जानीयाद्वाहो भारचतुष्टयम् ॥ 3. Dharma Sutra I. V. 53.

15

30

Of Liquids rendered impure by the falling in of insects &c., by straining. As said by Manu¹: "The purification prescribed for all sorts of liquids is by straining."

Straining, moreover, here is the process of passing a liquid from one vessel to another through a cloth, because otherwise it is impossible to remove² the insects &c.

Of honey, water &c. contained in a vessel of a S'ûdra the purification is by pouring it into another vessel. As ordained by Bâudhâyana:

"Honey, water, milk and its various modifications become 10 pure by being poured from one vessel into another."

Honey, clarified butter, &c. from the hands of one of the lowest nama, ought to be poured into another vessel and heated again as ordained by S'ankha: "Of eatables prepared in clarified butter, cooking again; so also of all oily substances and of liquids resembling oil."

Vîramitrodaya.

Yajnavalkya, Verse 190.

Trapu, i. e. rangam, both mean tin; sisaka, 'lead' &c. are well known; of these the purification is by alkalines &c.; but of brass and iron, by ashes and water; Kṣhāraḥ, alkaline i. e. alkaline powder; amlodakam, 'acidified water', the liquid juice of 'citron' jambira &c. Here with regard to defilement, the means of purification should be determined all together or severally. Here the Brahmapuranam: "Gold, silver, conch, stone, the mother of pearl, and all things made of jewels, when not having a taint, become pure by simple water. When polluted on account of being used by a Sudra, these should be purified by alkaline and salt water. Those, moreover, defiled by touch with a woman who has delivered, or with a corpse, or by ordure, urine, or the menses, these should be thrown into the fire, so much as each may bear."

^{1.} Ch. V. 115.

^{2.} There is a misprint at l. 16 on page 55 read कीटायपगम for कीटायुगगम.

^{3.} I. VI. 47.

Baudhayana:-"Of vessels made of metals and defiled by leavings, thrice seven times washing, the washing materials being earth, cow-dung, and ashes."

Of those defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen and the like, manufacturing again, or placing immersed in cow's urine for seven nights, or in a great river. S'ankha: "Of a vessel defiled by the leavings of food, or by a woman who has recently delivered, or which has been contaminated with wine or spirit, the purification is by washes three or seven times; but not for a vessel of lead." Thereby of a lead vessel, on one defilement, heating in the fire, on a defilement more than once, manufacturing again. Angirah, "One who dischanges a girgle, or cleanses the feet in a Kaneya vessel, should throw it in the earth for six months, and direct a re-manufacture of it." "Direct a remanufacture" i. e. should burn in the fire. A Smrti: "Kansya vessels smelt by cows, and those defiled by the leavings at meals of Sudras become pure by ten salts, as also those which have been defiled by crows". Manu': "Of copper, iron, Kansya, pewter, tin and lead, the purification should be made with alkalines, and acidified water. "As may be necessary," i. e. that which can remove the stain of a particular metal, by that, 20 of that; vide this Text: "By whichever substance the defilement caused by contact with impurity or produced by it is removed, that is said to be its purifier, generally the purificator of a thing", and others. Thus enough of prolixity. The special rule of adjustment is to be written afterwards.

Place dravasya tu iti, "the overflow of a liquid". Of a liquid sub-25 stance such as ghee etc. defiled by dogs, crows, etc. overflow, i.e. overfilling the pot containing it with a substance of the same kind, until the vessel overflows; (that) is the purification; this is the context. The means of purification, is the meaning of it. This process of purification, however, is for a large quantity of ghee &c. vide the Brahmapurana "Liquid 30 substances in large quantities should be overflowed with water." Here the word water' is used in the sense of a substance of the same kind, otherwise there would be the difficulty of the substance when purified, not being fit for its purpose. Of a small quantity, abandonment 35 Greatness, moreover, is to be determined by regard to the place, time. etc. vide this text of Baudhayana:2 "Time, place, as also oneself, the object, and the substance to be employed, the cause of the defilement,

^{1.} V. 114.

^{2. 1.} V. 58.

10

20

25

and the condition; after knowing all these, one should determine the process of purification'.

For a substance defiled by an insect, etc., Manu¹ has prescribed straining: "Of all liquid substances, the purification is by straining." "Straining" is there pouring into another vessel covered with a cloth, otherwise it would be impossible to remove the insects.

Of honey and the like in a pot belonging to a Sudra, Baudhayana mentions the purification: "Of Honey, and water, and milk and its preparations also, the purification is by transferring from the pot into another pot". Yama also: "Raw meat, ghee, honey, oils produced from fruits, which are impure when they are in the vessel of a Mlenchha, are declared to be pure when poured out." Here also cleaning is necessary, vide this text of S'ankha: "Of eatables prepared in clarified butter cleaning again, also of oils and of liquids." (190).

Thus having declared the method of purification of gold, silver &c. of all treated of in this chapter upon a defilement by leavings or oils &c. the Author now describes their purification when defiled by impure substances.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 191.

For objects defiled by impure substances, with earth and water is the purification by removing the smell &c.; what has been commended by word, what has been washed by water, as also what is not known, are always pure. 191.

Mitâkṣharâ.—Amedhyâ, impure substances, bodily excretions, such as fat, semen, &c., as propounded by Manu, Devala and others: 2—"The marrow of the flesh, semen, blood, the fat in the brain, urine, fæces, the ear-wax, nails, phlegm, tears, the rheum of the eyes, and sweat are the twelve impurities of human bodies". Similarly "Human bones, corpse, fæces, semen, urine, menstrual discharge, oily exudation, sweat, tears, the rheum of the eyes, phlegm, spirituous liquor, are called impure (amedhya) substances."

^{1.} V. 115.

^{2.} Manu V. 135.

^{3.} Devala.

10

15

20

25

With these i. e. oily exudations &c., aktam, defiled, i. e. besmeared, is amedhyâktam, an object defiled by impure substances; of that, with earth and also water the purification must be performed by removing the smell¹.

By the use of the word "ádi", &c., is included a stain also as declared by Gautama: "By the removal of stains and smell is purification of a substance besmeared with impurities".

In all varieties of purifications, first with earth and water alone must the removal of stains and bad smell be made. "When ineffectual, then by the other process, that first with water and also with earth" as ordained by Gautama.

The specification of fat &c., is for the purpose of demonstrating the impure nature of all⁴ the substances and not to indicate an equality of defilement, as a special rule has been stated in regard to defilements thus: "When defiled by spirituous liquor, urine, fæces, phlegm, pus, tears, and blood, never can be purified an earthen vessel by a fresh burning."

From the text "In the case of these, the impurity occurs only when these excretions fall off from the body", it follows that those are impure only when detached from the body and not while they remain at their own place.

When any portion of the human body above the navel with the exception of the hands is rendered impure by contact with impure substances, a bath is prescribed, as says Devala—"By having

* Page 56. menstrual discharge, urine, semen, marrow or blood of another, one should perform a bath.

Even these if one's own when touched, by a wash and sipping water one becomes pure.' For, "Whenever a portion of the body above the ^{1.} i. e. in गन्धादि—smell &c.

^{2.} Ch. I. 45.

^{3.} Ch. I. 46.

^{4.} i. e. of all the objects enumerated in the text.

^{5.} i. e. not that the extent or intensity of defilement is equal in all cases,

10

15

20

25

30

navel is rendered impure with the exception of the hands, there a bath; for a portion below, however, one becomes pure after washing that portion, by and sipping water."

Where even after performing the prescribed purification one does not get a mental satisfaction and a doubt exists as to the purification, there when commended by words, vaks'astam, it is pure. The meaning is, 'Let this be pure,' with these words of a Brahmana it becomes pure. Ambunirniktam, washed by water, where the prescribed purification cannot be obtained, the purification of that is by washing. If it is incapable of bearing a wash, by sprinkling.

Ajñâtan cha sadâ, and also what has been not known always. That which is defiled by crows &c., and is used without ever being discovered, is pure. The meaning is that by using it, there is no invisible fault.

It may be objected that this is contradictory to the text¹:

"Once a year the best of the twice-born should An objection, perform a krehhra penance as a purification of things unknown, and consumed for eating those known, particularly he must ", wherein even for an unknown fault a penance has been prescribed.

The answer is, no; because the penance has a reference to eating, while the absence of a fault has a reference to a use of any other. (191).

Viramitrodaya.

Yâjñavalkya Verse 191 (1)

Amedhyâh, 'impure substances', enumerated by Manu, Devala and others thus: "The marrow of the flesh, semen, blood, the fat in the brain, urine, ordure, ear-wax, nails, phlegm, tears, the rheum of the eyes, and sweat are the twelve impurities of the human body. Human bones, corpse, fæces, semen, urine, menstrual discharge, oily exudation,

^{1.} Manu Ch. V. 21.

^{2.} The meaning is, that the penance is incurred only if the substance is eaten, and not for merely using it.

15

25

30

35

sweat, tears, the rheum of the eyes, phlegm, and spirituous liquor are called impure (amedkya). By these aktam, 'defiled' viz. besmeared, vessel, body &c.: of that with earth and waters also. The word gandha, 'smell', is placed first; therefore after the removal of the stain i. e. complete obliteration, there is purification. Here, a special rule about twelve times not stated here, has been propounded by Manu and Devala: "He who takes the earth for the first six for purification, and for the last six becomes pure simply by waters. 'The impurity as to the fat &c', is only when they are fallen from their own place. Since Manu has said 10 "The impurities only when fallen from the body". For a touch of the impurity of another, Devala says, "If one has contact with human bones, fat, ordure, menstrual discharge, wine, semen, marrow of the brain, or even blood of another, one should have a bath, and after the stain &c. are wiped off, one becomes pure; These even when one's own are touched, he becomes pure by a sprinkling". 191 (2).

In regard to a special rule, which has not been mentioned, the Author mentions the process of purification.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 191 (2).

Vákšastam, 'commended by word', declared by the four varnas as pure. According to the Mitakshara, 'Let this be regarded as pure'. 20 so declared by speech. By the use of the word cha, 'and' are indicated substances incapable of bearing a sprinkling, such as sugar and the like. Aiña 'unknown i. e. not known to oneself as impure. Sada suchi, always pure', i. e. even though a cause for impurity has arisen, pure without a contact with salt &c.. This, moreover has a reference to substances whose use is small. "In a year at least one krchhra, he should perform. the best of Brahmanas, by way of purification for having eaten unknown things; and of known ones in:particular". 'Thus even for eating unknowingly, a penance having been prescribed', 191 (2).

Yajnavalkya, Verse 192.

Sufficient in quantity to satiate a cow, water which is in its natural condition, and is collected on ground, is pure. So also is flesh felled down by dogs, Chandâlas, carnivorous animals, and like others. 192.

Mitakshara: Mahigatam, collected on ground, water which is on land, and which is sufficient to bring about the satisfaction of one cow, which is not touched by a Chandala &c., prakriistham,

10

15

25

30

which is in its natural condition, i.e. which has not undergone any change in regard to its form, taste, smell, or touch, s'uchi, is pure, i.e. is fit for performing the âchmana &c. The clause 'collected on the ground' is used to negative non-purity of water when collected on an impure ground, and not for denying the purity of water in firmament, nor of that which is drawn out, because of the following text of Devala.—" Even though drawn out, water becomes pure, if brought up by means of pure vessels. Water that has been kept for one night must be thrown away though in itself pure."

So also there is no fault in the water of a tank &c., made by a Chandâla and the like, vide this text of S'âtâtapa:—"Although a well, a defile, or a tank &c. be made by others, for bathing there and drinking its water, there is no penance." Tathâ Mânsam s'wachândâla Kravyâdâdinipâtitam, solalso flesh felled down by dogs Chandâlas, carnivorous animals and the like, is pure. By the use of the expressioh âdi, and like others, are included the pulkasa &c. The use of the word, nipâtita felled down, is for the exclusion of what has been devoured.

Viramitrodaya.

Yajñavalkya, Verse 192.

Although impure, because of its having collected on the ground, water which is sufficient to bring about the satisfaction of a cow, and is in its natural condition, is pure. The state of being in the natural condition, is as stated by Manu¹: "Provided these are not contaminated by inpurities, and do not have their smell, form, or taste", According to the Miltakshara, being untouched by the Chandalas and the like is also a condition here. Devala: "There the still waters of tanks, rivers and wells, which are contaminated by a foul substance and impurities, should be avoided as holy places." Foul substance, such as a corpse &c.; impurity, such as, urine &c. Tirtha² in the holy place, here the suffix tus is locative ending, indicating Tirthe. Therefore the meaning is that these should be avoided when they are intensively in contact with impurities; so Usanah "Rivers, wells, and also tanks,

^{1.} Ch. V. 125.

^{2.} In the text of देवल the word is तीर्थत:, this note explains the suffix तस as indicative of the Locative case. Meaning thereby that it is for तीर्थ.

15

20

25

30

are not affected by other faults when open; thus the self-born Manu has declared." Vishnul: "From a well where a five-clawed animal has died, and which has been defiled, the entire quantity of water should be drawn out, and the rest should be cleansed with a cloth. After having ignited the fire, in a well constructed with burnt bricks, and therefter the five products of the cow should be thrown, and the water should not be drawn out. In other reservoirs of water when defiled, the purification is by drawing a hundred of jars, and then should be thrown the five products of the cow." Yama: "Goats, cows, buffaloes and also, a Brâhmani woman who has delivered, become free after ten nights; and also new water in the earth."

Tathâ mânsamityâdi 'so also flesh &c.' Flesh even though felled out by dogs etc., after a touch, is pure. Kravyâdâ, carnivous animals, such as vultures &c. By the word âdi. &c. are included the pukkasa, and like others. (192).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 193.

The rays, the fire, the dust, the shade, a cow, a horse, the earth, the wind, drops of water, and flies to the touch, and the calf at the discharge of the milk from the udder, are pure. 193.

Mitakshara: Rasmayah, the rays, of the sun and like luminous objects; agnih, fire, is well-known; rajah, dust, except by a contact with goats &c. as a fault has been mentioned in the following text: "By contact with the dust of dogs, crows, camels, asses, owls, pigs, the village birds, goats and sheep, life as also wealth, are diminished"; when sprinkling &c., should be made Chhâyâ, the shade, of trees &c.; gauh, cow, asvah, a horse; vasudhâ, the earth, the land; anilo, the wind, the air; viprusho, drops of water, i.e. dew drops; as those dropped from the mouth are being mentioned hereafter; makshikâscha, and the flies; all these even though touched by the Chandâlas and the like are pure to the touch, sparse, Vatsah prasravane, calf at the discharge of milk, i.e. while sucking the milk from the udders, is pure, suchih.

^{51.} Cb. XXIII. 44-46. In some copies the reading is शस्त्रेण शोधयेन्. The reading here adopted is बस्त्रेण शोधयेन्—which appears to be proper.

The use of the word calf is inclusive by an extension of an infant, vide the following text.—

"What is spoiled by children, what is done by women, and what is not known, are always pure; this is the settled rule."

Viramitrodaya

5

10

15

20

Yâjñavalkya Verse 193.

Although touched by the chandala &c. the rays etc. are pure at the touch. These rays mean the rays of the Sun and the like. Rajah, 'dust' i. e. excepting those specifically banned viz. "By contact with the dust of dogs, crows, camels, asses, owls, village birds, goats, and sheep, life as also wealth are diminished." In the case of the reading आग्निस्जः agnirajah, 'fire and goat,' ajah, means a goat &c; Chhâyâ, 'shade', of trees &c. The shadow of a Chandala and the like has been prohibited for a touch, vide the Brahmapurana: "By the touch of the shadow of a chandala and the like, the body becomes defiled". This, moreover, by taking the shade to represent a substance; viprushah, 'drops', i. e. dew-drops; those proceeding from the month being mentioned hereafter. The word fly is indicative, by extension, of a stinging moth, mosquito &c. Prasravanê 'in the discharge' i.e. while sucking the milk from the udder. Therefore the meaning is that milk fallen from the udder as the residue of what was consumed by the calf is not 'impure'. The word vatsa, calf, is indicative by extension of 'a child', vide the text "What is spoilt by children is always pure; this is the declared rule". (193).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 194.

25

30

Of a goat and of a horse, the mouth is pure; not of a cow, nor the impure excretions of man. The roads, moreover, are purified by the rays of the Moon and the Sun, and by the wind. 194.

Mitâksharâ.—Ajâs'wayormukham medhyam, of a goat and of a horse, the mouth is pure; na goh, not of a cow; na narajâ malâh, nor of man, the impure excretions. The word 'man' by implication signifies human body; discharges from it, the impure excretions, such as the fat and the like are not pure.

30

Panthano, the roads, the high ways though touched by Chandalas and the rest become pure in the night time by the rays of the Moon, somans'ubih marutena cha, and by the wind also: and in the day time suryans'buih, by the rays of the Sun, and also by the wind. 194.

Viramitrodaya.

Yâjñâvalkya Verse 194 (1).

Ajah 'a goat', and aśwas'cha 'also a horse', is pure in the region of the mouth. Aja i. e. a goat is also sometimes regarded as part of an army, the whole expression 'ajāsvam' 'goat and horse' may be taken as an entire clause. The cow is pure at the mouth; and man is pure; proceeding from these, the malâs, impure excretions, such as ordure &c. The word man, moreover, is inclusive by extension of hogs and the like specifically enumerated in other Smrtis. By the separate clause "not the impurities proceeding from man" the Author indicates that the cowdung &c. are pure. So also Yama: "On the rear the cow, on the arms the elephant, and also all about the lower part, is pure. Of men, the urine and the faces are impure, and also the excretions; of a cow, the dung as also the urine are always pure; this is the declared rule".

20 Brhaspati: "The feet are pure of the Brâhmanas; of the goat, and of the horses, the mouth is pure; of cows, the hind portion; and all the limbs of the women."

Yājñavalkya 194 (2).

On a touch by the Chandtla and the like, roads, as far as possible, become pure by the rays of the Sun and the like. By the use of the word Cha, 'and', are added cumulation of water. "By the fall of the rays of the Sun and the Moon and by the touch of the wind, as also by the urine and dung of the cows, waters become pure; to this effect is tradition".

Yajnavalkya, Verse 195.

The drops issuing from the mouth are pure, so are dchamana drops; also the hair on the face entering the mouth. What has adhered to the teeth, by throwing out, one becomes pure. 195.

^{1.} There are two misprints in line 1 on page 57. Read the line as, प्रसना नियुषो मेध्यास्तथाऽऽचमनंबिन्दवः॥

Mitâksharâ:—From the mouth issuing are mukhajâḥ, such as the phlegm and the drops, vipruṣhas, are pure, medhyâ; they do not render one impure if they do not fall on the body. Vide the following text of Gautama¹: "Drops falling from the mouth do not cause impurity provided they do not fall on the body."

Still, however, the drops of the achamana water which touch the feet are pure.

S'masru châsyagatam, so also the hair on the face entering the mouth, i. e., going into the mouth, do not cause impurity. Dantasaktam, what had adhered to the teeth, such as food, &c., when fallen off, i.e., tyaktwâ, i.e., throwing out, one becomes pure. What had not been detached is like the teeth; so also Gautama?: "What has been adhering to the teeth is as his teeth, except when he touches it with the tongue; some hold, before they are detached. If they become detached, one should treat them as saliva; one merely swallowing it, becomes free."

The swallowing, moreover, is by this text of Yajñavalkya reduced to an option alternating into throwing out, or nigaraṇam³ "merely swallowing". The force of the word "merely" has the sense of prohibition in regard the àchamana as ordained by Viṣḥṇu⁴.

"After chewing, however, one should always sip water after eating and chewing the betel leaves, after touching the lips which are without hair, and after putting on clothes."

The use of the word tâmbula "betel" is by analogy indicative of fruits and the like. As says Satatapa:

"For having chewed the betels, fruits, and things roasted in oil, or by the contact of anything adhering to the teeth, never becomes impure the twice-born". (195).

10

5

15

20

25

30

^{1.} Ch. I. 44.

^{2.} I. 41-43.

^{3.} In the text of Gautama.

^{4.} Ch. V, 145.

Virmitrodaya

Yajñavalkya Verse 195.

Mukhajah, 'issuing from the mouth', the drops of water. fallen on the ground and even though touched are medhud 'pure'. attached to the body. however. being which ara 5 Those pain to hair at two places. are a capable of causing for the achamana. So also drops fallen on the earth, if touched are pure. When, however, the hair is wet twice, one should do the sipping. And the drops of sipping water: "Those drops of water which while performing the sipping, touch another, should be regarded as equally 10 as those on the ground; one does not become impure on account of these". as stated by Manu, are the drops from the sipping of water &c. Smas'ru 'hair on the face', when in its own place, although entering the mouth, when not touched by the hand, is pure. If, however, it is touched by the hand, there is certainly impurity. That has been declared by Apastamba1: 15 "Never by the hair on the mouth does one become impure, on account of their entering the mouth, so long as one does not touch it by the About what has been discharged from the teeth, as food &c. when dropped by itself, having discharged it, one then becomes pure, by merely throwing it off. What however, is not dropped, 20 is pure like the seventy of the teeth, as Gautama? has observed: "What is remaining in the teeth, is like the teeth, unless when touched by the tongue." If what had adhered to the teeth, when touched by the tongue, when strained during the sipping, falls off, then although adhered to the teeth, the sipping should be performed. 25 that effect Devala: "If what has adhered to the teeth during the meal, does not get out, one should do the sipping; when what has adhered to the teeth cannot be gathered, it should in the end be licked, ending in that; in such a case, one should not much try to pull it out again; lest 30 there might be a great impurity by the grass pick causing ulcer." This moreover when the liquid is not obtained. If, however, liquid is obtained, there is certainly impurity as S'ankha has stated: "In regard to stickings to the teeth, excepting (when) liquid (is not obtained)."

^{1.} I. 16-11.

^{2.} I. 41.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 196.

Having bathed, drunk, sneezed, slept, eaten, and driven in a street, having sipped, he should again sip the water; and so also after having put on clothes. 196.

Mitakshara:—After bathing, drinking, sneezing, sleep, meal, drinking in a street and put on clothes, having sipped, one should do the sipping again. The meaning is that one should perform the sipping twice.

The use of the word cha, and, in the text is intended to include weeping, beginning of study, a little lie. For likewise Vasishtha: "After having slept, eaten, sneezed, bathed, drunk and wept, one who has sipped, should also do the sipping again."

So Manu² also: "After having slept, sneezed, and eaten, as also slept, or uttered a falsehood, or drunk water, as also before commencing the study of the Vedas, one should perform sipping, although he is already clean".

At a meal, however, even at the commencement, the sipping should be twice, as ordained by Apastamba³: "But before beginning to eat, one should, though pure, twice sip water."

"For a bath or a drink, at the commencement, once; for a 20 study of the Vedas, however, at the commencement, twice. As regards the rest, at the end only one should sip water twice."

Viramitrodaya

The Author mentions the process of sipping water, relevant to the context

Yâjñavalkya Verse 196,

In the case of a bath &c., after it is performed, one should do the sipping; the meaning is that one should do the achamana twice. The word punah, 'again', has the sense of tu, 'however'. Thereby on its entering the hair on the mouth, as also when it has not stuck to it, is the

5

425

10

15

25

30

^{1.} Ch. VI. 38. The original has at the end चासश्च परिधाय 'as also on putting on a cloth.'

^{2.} Ch. V. 145.

^{3.} I. V. 16-9.

differentiation as to the sipping as stated before. Pitwa, 'having drunk', this is in regard to (drinking) other than the aposana drinking, vide this text of Angirah: "At the Madhuparka, as also at a Soma sacrifice, as at the five obtations for the pranas, a Brahmana does not become impure by reason of the eating; as is the text of Atri, and so it is." Rathyopasarpane, 'driving in a street', i. e., passing over a public road, Viparidhanam, 'putting on', i.e., prominently putting on, therefore, it is only when the nether cloth is put on and there is sipping, and not, however, for putting on an upper cloth. The actual practise also is such. 10 By the use of the word cha, 'as also', and for the reason that the sipping once performed is for purification as established by the text of Apastambal viz: "But before beginning to eat, one should, though pure, twice sip water", and other texts, and by the distinction as 'part of a performance', and as 'Special', various texts are collected; their special mention, however, is not made, as these are too well known. (196).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 197.

Street and mud waters, touched by lowest class dogs, and cows, by the wind alone, become pure; so also edifices of burnt bricks. (197).

Mitâksharâ:—Rathyâ, street, i.e., all sorts of ways; kardama, mud; i.e., swamp; toyam, water.

The mud and waters lying on the road, antyaih, by the lowest class, such as Chandala and the rest, as also s'wabhirwayasaischa, by dogs or crows, spṛṣhṭani, touched, marutenaiva sudhyanti, become pure by the wind alone, i.e., reach purity. The plural number is used for the purpose of including the cow-dung, sugar, &c., contained therein.

Pakveshtikâbhischitâni, with burnt bricks built, i.e., white houses and the like if touched by the Chândālas, &c., become pure by the wind alone. This, moreover, is by way of negativing what has already been stated viz. "sprinkling of those built together". Of those, however, built of straw, wood, leaves, &c., sprinkling alone.

^{1—}पाणाहुनी: the first five offerings with the principal food. which at the commencement of a meal are offered to the five vital organs prana, apana, vyana, udana, and samana.

Here ends the Chapter on the Purification of Things.

Viramitrodaya.

Rathyá 'road', i. e., all kinds of roads; lying there, the mud; as also the waters, and structures built with burnt bricks such as a matha and the like, if touched by the lowest &c. become pure merely by the wind. 'The lowest' such as the Chandalas &c. By the use of the word cha, and, are included those stated in the text of Vyâsa: "Street muds and waters, ferries, roads, and grass, are purified simply by the wind, as also the structures built of burnt bricks": Thus also "By the street mud or waters, or even by the spittings, if a man is touched, he becomes pure by a bathing once," this text of S'amkha, which is found, is in regard to smell, stain, and impurity. The text of Yama, moreover, viz: "For having entered during monsoon the border of a village which has become muddy, for the thighs three times the earth, and for the feet twice, have been stated" is as laying down a purificatory process in regard to an impurity is not discussed either in itself or by the smell. Thus there is no contradiction.

Here ends the commantary on the Chapter on Purification of things in the Smrti of Yājñavalkya.

CHAPTER IX.

ON Gifts.

Now wishing to propound the law of Gifts, and as a part of it, with a view to explain the (conditions of) fitness for being a 2 subject of it, the Author states in praise of it

Yjñavalkya, Verse 198.

Having performed austerities, Brahmâ created the Bráhmanas for the preservation of the Vedas, for the satisfaction of the Pitrs and the Devas, and for the 30 protection of Dharma. (198).

^{1.} See above Verse 184, p.

10

20

25

30

Mitâksharâ:—Braḥmâḥ, Hiranyagarbhaḥ, in the beginning of the Kalpa; tapastaptwá, having performed Praise of the austerities, performing meditation as to 'whom Brâḥmaṇa. shall I create as the highest', created first the Brâḥmaṇas. With what object? Vedaguptaye, for the preservation of the Vedas, i.e., for the protection of the Vedas; Pitṛṇâm Devatânâm cha, of the Pitṛs, and of the gods also; tṛpytartham, for the satisfaction; and through the means of performance and teaching, dharmasaṃrakṣhaṇārtham cha, for the protection of the Dharma (Law) also. Therefore gifts made to them secure everlasting fruit. This is the import.

Yâjñavalkya Verse 199.

Lords of all are the Vipras perpetually absorbed in the study of the Vedas; than these those, who perform observances are superior; and more than these even, the knowers of philosophy of self, are the best. (199).

Mitākṣharā:—Sarvasya, of all, i.e., of the Kṣhatriyas and the rest, Viprāh, Brāḥmaṇas, prabhavaḥ, are the lords, are superior both by birth and action. Among the Brāḥmaṇas even srutādhyayanas'īlinaḥ, perpetually absorbed in the study of the Vedas, those who have accomplished the study of the Vedas, are superior. Tebhyopi, more than these even, Kriyāparā, those who perform observances habitually, those who perform the (various) prescribed ceremonies. Tebhyopyadhyātmavittamāḥ, even more than these also the knowers of the philosophy of the self. The context is that those who following the path to be described hereafter by practising the yoga, by the controlling of passions, restraint of senses and the like, are intent on the acquisition of the knowledge of the truth about the self, are superior. (199).

Vîramitrodaya.

"A thing is given away to a proper person,—all that is the causative attribute of Dharma", so has been stated before, and:

^{1.} Verse 6 above. p. 23. l. 28. See further on verse 201. p.

15

20

25

"...Should be given to a fit person" will also be stated hereafter. Thus of the law as to donations which is hereafter to be stated, the chief essential for fitness is being a Brahmana, so the Author extols the Brahmanas

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 198, 199.

Braḥmâ, tapastaptwâ, having performed austerities i. e. accomplished by the austerities themselves, as the principal means of help, in continuation of the same, Braḥmaṇânasrjat 'created the Braḥmaṇas', What for? Vedasya, 'of the veda' consisting of the Mantras and Braḥmaṇas, guptaye for the preservation i. e. by teaching &c., of the traditional school. (195).

For the satisfaction, trptyartham i.e., for the production of a feeling of satisfaction, of the Pitrs at a Śraddha and the like, by supplying fit recipients &c; of the Gods, at a sacrifice &c. by supplying facrificial priests and the like. By the use of the word cha, 'and', at performances not for the Gods, nor for the Pitrs, e. q., initiation &c. for supplying the Preceptor &c. Viprah, 'Brahmanas', sarvasya, 'of all' i. e., of Kshatriyas and the like, prabhavah, 'lords', masters, i.e., superiors. Among these also, srutam, 'Vedah' i.e., the understanding of the meaning of the Vedas through the preceptor: adhyayanam, 'study' as leading to the lessons in Veda; absorbed in that, Śreshthah 'best' i.e., foremost; goes with all. Than these, i.e., than the Brahmanas merely absorbed in the study of the Vedas. are superior to those Brahmanas who regularly observe the ordained duties. And even more than these i.e., those who are absorbed in Vedic studies or observe the duties are those who are foremost among the knowers of the philosophy of the self. "Knowledge of the truth, suppression of the mind. annihilation of desires-by a simultaneous practice of these three together the liberation in this life is permanently secured," as has thus been specially stated by Manu, Usanah &c. and others. (199).

Having thus explained the fitness of the recipient of donations 30 by reason of birth, learning, practice of observances, austerities, of each accomplishment separately, the Author now shows the thorough fitness of the donees on a combination of these

^{1.} Verse 201 p. 431.

², तद्व्यवधानेनेव-i. c. in continuation of the very same austerities, in the course of the same.

10

20

25

30

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 200.

Not merely on account of learning or even by austerities is fitness. Where conduct as well as these two exist, that indeed is declared to be fit as a recipient. (200).

Mitâksharâ—Kevalayâ vidyayâ, on account of mere learning, i.e., by the complete study of the Vedas, naiva, not certainly, is complete fitness acquired; nâpi, nor also, by mere tapasâ austerities, not merely by s'ama¹,

Characteristics of a Brâhmana dama, &c. By the word api, merely, as a proper recipient of gift. is indicated that merely by religious practice or simply by birth, complete fitness does not arise. How then? Yatra, where, in a man, vrttam², conduct, i.e., practice of observances, ime chobbe, these two, i.e., learning and austerities exist. By the use of the word cha, 'as also', Brâhmanical birth, tadeva, that certainly, prakîrtitam, has been declared, by Manu and the rest as an entirely fit recipient, pâtram. Hi, because, than this there is none more excellently qualified as a recipient.

Here among the several factors viz. birth, learning, observances, and austerity, by reason of the higher eminence of those that follow over those that precede the discrimination as to the result must be made. (200).

Viramitrodaya,

Thus having extolled the Brahmanas, the Author states the characteristics of a proper recipient, which is the subject under consideration

Yâjñavalkya Verse 200.

Vidyaya 'by learning', i.e., by the accomplishment of the study of the Vedas; Kevalaya 'by itself', i.e. in the absence of austerities and good conduct; tapasa or 'by austerities' i.e. in the form of sama, dama, &c. merely, in the absence of the study of the Vedas and good conduct.

^{1.} इाम — इानयंस्तु इामः झान्ति; (अमरकोशे III. 2. 3.) Control of passions. दमदान्तिस्तु दमशो दम: (Do.) restraint of senses. निम्नहो बाह्यवृत्तीनो दम इत्यभिषीयते।

^{2.} इन Conduct, behaviour generally. It means one's character as determined by conduct.

ŏ

25

30

35

By the use of the word api 'even', by mere good conduct, or by being a Brahmana is not fitness in this world, or in the Vedas is the capacity to be regarded as a proper recipient. Hi 'since,' yatra 'where' i.e. in that Brahmana, vrttam 'good conduct' i. e. strict pursuit of the rules of conduct, as also these two, -the study of the Vedas and the austeritiestatpatram-'that is a proper receipient'-so has been declared by Somewhere the reading is prachakshate Manu and others. 'declare'. (200).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 201.

A cow, land, sesamum, gold, &c., to a fit person, should be give after honoring. Never to an unfit person should be given anything by one who knows, and who wishes for his own welfare. (201).

Mitakshara.—As described above, to a fit person a cow and To a fit person should the donations of a cow &c. be made.

the like, architam, with honour, i.e., with the offering of water, &c., together with other supplementary ceremonies as ordained by the S'astras, should be given.

Apâtre, to an unfit person, such as the Kshatriya &c., as also 20 to a Brahmana who is degraded, vidusha, by one who knows, ie., who knows that by giving gifts to special persons, special results are produced, s'reya ichchhatâ, who wishes for his own welfare completely, kinchit, anything, even a little, na dâtawyam, never should be given, to an unfit. By the use of the word "welfare" is indicated that by giving to an unfit person a donation has some vicious results as says Kṛṣṇa Dwaipayana:

"That which is given out of place and season, and to unworthy objects, and at the same time, ungraciously and scornfully is pronounced to be * Page 59.

tāmasa (of inferior quality)."

By stating that no gift should be made to an unfit person, it follows that in a case where proper place, season and thing (to be given) are available, but the proper person is not available, or the thing is wanting, then after making a donation in his favour or by declaring a promise in his favour, one should abandon¹ it. It has been indicated that one should not give to an unworthy person. So also even if promised if afterwards any association with sin, &c., comes to be known it should not be given, vide the prohibition² viz; 5 "Even though promised, to one tainted with unrighteousness one should not give." (201).

Viramitrodaya.

On account of the special text, viz "the gift of a damsel to a Kshatriya &c. also" having stated the characteristics of a fit recipient, and as if excluding a donation to an unit person, the Author states the gift of a damsel, as part of the subject of fitness

Yâjñavalkya Verse 201.

By the use of the term âdi, '&c.' is the inclusion of all things fit to be donated, but not mentioned, Architam, 'after honouring', after respectfully doing honour. This, moreover, is adjectival of the object of the gift, vide the text: "He, who when after he is honoured, accepts a gift, and he who after doing honour confers a gift;" or the word architam 'after honouring, may be taken as an adverb, qualifying the process, viz., in such a manner that fitness may be attained by the processes laid 20 down in the Sastra. Thus the rule as to fitness is in regard to acceptance only, and therefore in a gift like this, there would be no transmission of sin to the donor on account of a fault in the recipient So, moreover, Yama: "At par is the fruit of a donation to a non-Brahmana; double, to one professing to be a Brahmana; to one who is accomplished in learning, a hundred-thousand-fold; and to one who has 25 completely studied the Vedas, without limit. In the case of a Sudra, the fruit of a donation is at par; for a Vaisya it is said to be two-fold; for a Kshatriya, it has been declared to be sixfold; and for a Brahmana it has been declared to the ten-fold. For food, the proper recipient 30 is one who is hungry -- &c." This is indicative that, when possible, to one who is hungry and begs, even though he be not a Brahmana, some quantity of food should necessarily be given. Therefore it is that in the following verse the Author says acceptance &c.

^{1.} i.e. declare a donation of it; actual delivery may afterwards be made to the proper person when he turns up,

^{2.} See Gautama V. 21.

25

30

In the absence of a proper recipient as prescribed in fulness, to one who is free from the fault of unfitness, although other (than a proper recipient), a donation should be made; intending this, the Author states negatively-napatreti, 'not to an unfit person &c.' Vidusha 'by one who knows' i. e. one possessing knowledge; S'reyah, 'welfare', such as Heaven. (201).

Having stated a prohibition for the donor in regard to an unfit person, the author states with regard to the donee

Yâjñavalkya. Verse 202.

By one who is destitute of learning and austerities must never be accepted a donation. By accepting he leads the donor down, as well as himself. (202).

Mitāskara.—Vidyātapobhyām hīnena, by one who is destitute of learning and austerities, pratigrahah, a donation, such as a gift, &c., na gràhyah, Prohibition of 15 must never be accepted. Since one destitute of acceptance. learning, &c, pratigrhnan, by accepting, a gift, dātāramātmānam châdho narakam nayati, the donor as well as himself, he leads down, i. e., reaches hell. (202).

Viramitrodaya.

By an acceptance by an improper recipient not only that no fruit is produced but even more, for the donor the hell even (is the fruit); intending to point this out, the Author states a fault for an acceptor of that kind Yājāavalkya, Verse 202.

Vidyatapobhyam, 'by learning and austerities' is indicative by extension of character and conduct also. By the word tu, 'however,' has been separated the acceptance of anything in excess of the subject of acceptance. Pratigrahah, 'acceptance', ie., the thing which is being accepted as donation, the reference being to the object. Here the Author mentions the reasons. Grhnan, 'accepting', i.e., one accepting a donation, pradataram 'one giving away the donation', i.e., giving with emphasis, in short one making another accept; adho nayati, 'leads down', i.e., reaches him to the hell. The word eva, 'surely', is here attached to and after 'adhah', 'down'. By that the fruit 35 intended is discriminated. The word cha, 'also,' is used to indicate purpose. (202).

It has been stated that a cow &c. should be given to a fit person; in regard to that, the Author now lays down a special rule.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 203.

Should be given every day to a fit person on a special occasion particularly. Even by a person begged of should be given consecrated with faith and according to means. 203.

Mitakshara—Every day in accordance with one's means and according to the rules as ordained, patre, to a fit person, cows &c. which is his own datavyam, should be given, without detriment to the family.

Nimitteshu, on special occasions, (such as) the eclipse of the Moon &c; viseshatah, particularly, should be A special rule given, Yachiteâpi, even by a person begged 15 of gift.

of, more i.e. with effort sradhâpùtam, consecrated by faith i.e. sanctified by the absence of malice, according to means should be given, dâtavyam. By saying that 'even though begged, should be given,' is meant the donation to a fit person as described above, going oneself or by having called, that 20 is productive of great result. So also is a Smṛti:

"By going, a gift which is made is said to confer eternal reward a thousand-fold by inviting merit; on being begged, however, half of that."

Viramitrodaya.

25 The Author mentions the time for a donation.

Yājnavalkya, Verse 203 (1).

Pratyaham, 'every day 'i.e., day by day, according to capacity, datavyam, 'must be given'; nimitteshu, 'on special occasions', such as the solstice and the like, vis'eshatah, 'particularly', i.e., with great 30 effort and also with respect.

In a donation, the Author means faith as the principal part. Yājnavalkya, Verse 203 (2).

'By faith', i.e., in the form of a determination that the result must necessarily follow technically characterised by Devala: "Honouring with respect without malice always pronounced as faith", hallowed by an absence of malice, faultless, in short, virtuous. Thus should be given as will be in this manner. S'aktitah, 'according to capacity', i.e., in accordance with the means; yâchitena, 'begged', i.e., edged on for giving a donation; the word api, 'even', suggests a lower degree than a donation without being begged for. So also S'âtâtapa: "By going' oneself, however, what is donated, and also the donation which is made unasked, there may remain no difference between these and the depth of the ocean." Moreover "By giving, a gift which is made is said to confer eternal reward; a thousandfold merit by insisting; on being begged, however, half of that." By the word tu, 'however,' the Author discriminates donations with faith from those desirous of the entire fruit of the donation. (203).

^{1.} See the rule in Yajn. 175.

It has been stated that cows etc., should be given; there the author mentions a special feature of the gift of a cow

Yâjñavalkya Verse 204.

15

20

With golden-horns, silvered hoofs, well-behaved, covered with cloth, and with a vessel of Kânsya, should be given a milch cow together with dakshinâ. 204.

Mitâksharâ:—Whose horns are covered with gold is one with golden horns, hemasṛngi; s'afai raupyaih, silvered hoofs, with hoofs covered with silver. Covered also with cloth, and together with a vessel of Kánsya, yielding large quantities of milk, a cow should be given together with a present of money according to one's means. (204).

The Author mentions the process of the donation of a cow by 25 means of five verses

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 204.

One whose horns are covered with gold is one with golden horns; characterised by silver hoofs, i.e. covered with silver; sus'ilâ, 'well-behaved', i.e., disinclined to attack, etc., vastrasamawetâ, 'together with a cloth', i.e., covered with a cloth; sakânsyapâtrâ, 'together with a kânsya vessel, i.e., along with a milking pot made of the Kansya metal, qaurdâtavyâ, 'a cow should be given'. (204).

^{1.} अभिगम्य—By going to the donee.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 205.

The giver of her attains heaven for years measured by the hairs on her body; if the cow be a Kapilâ¹ she saves also his family in addition, up to the seventh degree, 205.

Mitâksharâ:—Asyâ, of her, goh, of the cow, romasammitân, measured by the hairs, i.e. of the number. The fruit of of hairs as are on her body, vatsarân cow-gift. swargamâpnoti dâtâ, years resides in heaven the giver. If it be a Kapilâ then not only the giver she saves, târayati, but also his family even, Kulamapi, âsaptamam, up to the seventh degree, i. e. extending over to the seventh i. e. the father &c. six, and himself the seventh. The word bhūyaḥ, again, is used in the sense of api 'even'. (205).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions the donation of a brown cow together with the result

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 205.

With the qualifications stated if so distinguished, such a one, if it be a kapila then, as far as the seventh generation of the donor's family she saves. The word bhuyah, 'again' is used in the sense of api, 'even', thus this is in addition to the fruit mentioned before. The word cha, 'also', is indicative of the above-mentioned qualifications existing in the kapila. (205).

Yâjnâvalkya Verse 206.

Equal to the number of hairs on her and on the calf, for such Yugas² the donor of a two-faced cow attains heaven, by giving in the manner as stated above. (206).

- A brown cow.
 2. gη—An age in the revolutions of world. The gηs are four in number vis.
 - (1) 表明 Krta or 积四 Satya with a duration of 1,728,000 mortal years;
 - (2) तेता, Tretâ ... 1,296,000 ,, ,,
 - (3) द्वापर Dwapara 864,000 ,, ,,
 - (4) 事商 Kali 432,000 ,, ... ,,

 The four together making up the total of 4,320,000 years.

15

20

25

Mitâksharâ:—Savatsaromatulyâni, equal to the number of hairs on her and on the calf. One who is * Page 60. along with a calf is savatsâ, one with a calf; of that, equal to the number of hairs. As many hairs as are on the body of the calf as also of the cow, so many number of yugas i. e. the Satya, Tretâ &c., ubhayatomukhîm dadat swargamâpnoti pûrvena vidhinâ chet, one giving a two-faced cow attains to heaven provided it be according to the procedure afore-mentioned. (206).

What moreover is a two-faced cow, and why is the donation of 10 such a one of such a high merit? So the Author says

Yâjñavalkya verse 207.

As long as the two legs and the face of the calf can be seen from within the womb, so long a cow is to be considered as the Earth. 207.

Mitâksharâ:—Of the calf, vatsasya, coming out of the womb, dwau pâdau mukham cha, the two legs and also the face, yâvat yonyâm dṛṣ'yate, as long as they appear from within the womb, a face on both sides; one who has such, is called two-faced; yâvat, as long as, garbham, the fætus, na muñchati, she does not deliver out, tâvat sâ gouh pṛthwisamâ jñeyâ, so long that cow is to be considered to be like the earth. Therefore such a high reward is proper (207).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author states about the donation of a two-faced cow Yâjîavalkya Verses 206, 207.

Ubhayatomukhīm, 'a two-faced', pārvena, 'as before', i.e., as aforementioned, that is the entirety, excepting that specially mentioned for a Kapilā, such a particular 'cow', gām, whether a Kapilā, or not a Kapilā, vidhinā, 'according to the process', i.e., under the procedure laid down in the S'astras, dadat, 'one giving', 'the giver of such a cow', asyā gour dātā, equal to the number of hair on the cow along with the calf, for such a number of yugas, obtains heaven. The two-facedness may be a common attribute for the she-buffalo, therefore with a view to exclude her, it has been said, 'the giver of a such a one' etc.

25

30

While describing the characteristics of a two-faced cow, the Author extols the cow to be mentioned as possessing the special qualities: As 5 long as the two feet of the calf as well as the mouth can be seen from within the womb of the cow, i.e., can be clearly observed, so long that cow should be considered as equal to Earth. By this, it has been suggested that merit equal to that of making a donation of the earth is secured by the donation. "As long as the calf is in the womb, as long as she does not discharge the calf, so long the cow is to be regarded as the Earth together with moutains, woods, and forests, with its four boundaries; such Earth will be considered to have been given; there is no doubt about it", so from the Matsya-Purana. Having regard to the special condition as to the discharged calf from the embryo even 15 the sight of the mouth and two feet would not make for two-facedness, so the Author says, "As long as she does not deliver out the fœtus." Therefore it comes to this: that a cow is called two-faced when its calf is within the womb with its two feet, and the face is visible from within the womb. (206-207).

Yâjñavalkya Verse 208.

By somehow making a donation of a cow whether she be a milch-cow, or one not yielding milk, but not diseased and not emaciated, the giver becomes exalted in heaven, (208.)

Mitâksharâ.—Yathâkathañchit, somehow, even in the absence of gold-horned cows according to possibility. The fruit of an and in the manner described above, dhenum, a ordinary cow-gift a milch-cow, i.e., a cow yielding milk; adhenum or not yielding milk, but not barren; arogām undiseased, i.e., without disease, apariklishaṭâm, not emaciated, i.e., not excessively enfeebled. By giving (such a) cow, dātā swarge mahīyate, the giver becomes exalted in heaven, i.e. is honoured. (208)

Viramitrodaya.

The Author describes the donation of a cew possessing the 35 qualifications of golden-horns, &c., together with the result.

15

Yájnavalkya Verse 208.

Yathakathanchit, 'somehow', even without satisfying the qualifications aforestated, dhenum', 'cow', a milch or non-milch one. The word eva, 'even' is used to mark off a harren one; arogam, 'undiseased', i.e., free from ravauraka2 and like diseases. Apariklishtam, 'not emaciated', not very much weakened. Gam datwa data swarge mahiyate, 'by having donated a cow the giver in heaven becomes exalted', i.e., is honoured. In this result which is common for a milch and nonmilch cow, the abundance of the fruit of a cow's gift should be understood as a logical result. With a view to answer the inquiry as to the actor, the word donor has been stated. (208).

The Author mentions the equivalents of cow's gift Yáiñavalkya, Verse 209.

Affording relief to the fatigued, nursing the sick, worshipping the gods, washing the feet, sweeping the remnants after meals of the twice-born, are like the giving of a cow. 209.

Mitakṣharā:—Of a fatigued person, by giving him a seat, bed, &c. and removing the weariness is S'rántasaṃvāhanam, affording relief to the fatigued, rogiṇām, of the sick, paricharyā, nursing, such as, according to one's means giving medicine; surārchanam, worshipping the gods, viz. propitiating Hari, Hara, Hiraṇyagarbha, &c., by (the offering of) sandal paste, flowers, &c., pādasaucham, washing the feet, i.e., of the twice-born; of the equals as well as of superiors, &c.; and of these also sweeping the remnants after meals, uchchṇiṣṇṭasya sam mārjanam. These (acts) are equal (in efficacy) to the gift of a cow as stated above. (209).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author extends the fruit of a cow's gift to others also Yâjñavalkya Verse 209.

S'rantasya, 'of one fatigued', i.e, extremely wearied, 30 sameahanam, 'offering relief', such as by giving a seat, a bed, &c.,

^{1.} चेनु, अधेन-A milch-cow, and one not yielding milk.

^{2.} रवीरकादिरागरहिताम्। so in the original.

removing the fatigue; roginah, 'of one diseased', paricharya, 'nursing' by medicine, &c., suranam, 'of Gods', such as, Hari, Hara, Durga and the rest; archanam, 'worshipping', i.e., honoring; padas'aucham, 'washing the feet', i.e., cleansing the feet of the twice-born; in short all the twice-born, Dwijochchhishtasya, 'of the leavings at meals of a twice-born'; marjanam, 'sweeping', i.e., removing; each one is gopradanavat, 'equal to a cow's-gift', the meaning is that it is equal as to the fruit resulting from a cow's gift. (209).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 210.

Land, lights, food, clothes, water, sesamum, clarified butter, asylum, household accessory, gold, and bull, having given, one is glorified in heaven. 210.

Mitâksharâ.—Bhūḥ, land, yielding¹ fruit; dīpâḥ, lights, in the temples of gods, &c; pratis'rayaḥ, asylum, refuge to the traveller; nivessanârtham, for the household, i.e. for a householder's use what is given, such as a maiden bride &c. is naives'ika, household accessory; svarṇam, gold, i.e. bright coloured; dhuryo, bull capable of bearing load, a strong bull. The rest are well-known.

These, land, lamps &c datvâ, by giviny, in heavenly regions mahîyate, one is glorified, is honoured. The heavenly reward, moreover, by giving lands, &c., does not exclude other? rewards. For such as: "Whatever sin one commits either knowingly or unknowingly, by giving land to the extent of a bull's hide one is purified". So also "A giver of water obtains the satisfaction, a giver of food, imperishable happiness, a giver of sesamum, desirable offspring; a giver of a lamp, a most excellent eyesight. A giver of a garment, a place in the world of the moon, a giver of a horse, a place in the world of As'vins3, a giver of a draught, great good fortune; a giver of a cow, the region of the Sun." these and like other fruits having been declared4.

^{1.} i. e. cultivable or agricultural land capable of yielding fruits or crops.

^{2.} As the result of the donation. Heavenly exaltation is only one of the many fruits attending the gifts.

^{3.} Page 60 line 29, some copies continue the quotation अनदृह: अियं पुष्टा गोही ब्रह्मस्य विष्यम.

^{4,} Manu Oh. IV. 229-231.

* PAGE 61. The definition of a bull's hide has been declared by Brhaspati: "With a rod seven hands long, three hundred rods is a nivartana; ten these again make up a bull's hide; by giving it, one is exalted in heaven". (210).

Viramitrodaya.

5

10

20

25

The Author mentions other gifts together with their fruits, in three (verses)

Yâjñavalkya Verse 210.

The eight, such as, land and the rest are well known; pras'rayo, 'asylum', a residential house; naives'ikam², 'house-hold accessory'; money for the marriage of another; swarnam, 'gold', i.e., of bright colour; dhuryah, 'a bull', capable of bearing load, a strong bull. (210).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 211.

A house, corn, security from harm, shoes, an umbrella, a garland, an ointment, a conveyance, a tree, a desired 15 thing, or a bed; by giving these, one shall become extremely happy. 211.

Mitâkṣharâ:—Gṛham, house, is well-known; dhânyâni, corn, such as barley, wheat, and the like; abhayam, security from fear, i.e., protection to the frightened; upânaham, shoe, and chhatram, an umbrella; mâlyam, garland, such as of mallikâ flowers, &c., anulepanam, an ointment, such as saffron, sandal, &c.; yânam, conveyance, e.g., chariots, &c.; vṛkṣham, a tree, which affords a livelihood, such as the mango and the like; priyam, desired thing, that which is pleasant to one, such as requirement, &c; s'ayyâm cha, and bed also, datwâttyatam, by giving, extremely, i.e., excessively, sukhî, happy, one becomes.

1. Verse 8.

^{2.} नेवेशिक—निवेश is entering; a house; and नेवेशिक means any thing which is useful as a necessary accessory for the householder. The Mitaksharā interprets it as a maiden, bride; offer to an intending householder निवेशकामः (see Vishnu Purāṇa, the episode of Saubhari). The Viramitrodaya interprets it as any article of use for a man's marriage.

It is not that like gold, &c. religious, i.e. a religious merit cannot be delivered into the hands, and that therefore a charitable donation of it is impossible. It is even like the gift of land, &c. And in other Smrtis also the gift of religious merit has been declared:

"To gods, to gurus, to father, and mother, religious merit should be given by all efforts; non-merit has not been mentioned anywhere."

In the case of a gift of non-merit, that itself increases as well of the donee also who is induced through avarice, &c., vide the 10 following Smrti:—

"That evil-minded person, who, considering sin to be powerless, accepts it as a gift, on account of this despicable conduct of his, that sin attaches to him equal in intensity, or two-thousand fold, or in infinite-fold; and also to the donor."

Here, as well as everywhere, by regard to the particular conditions of place, time, the recipient, and the peculiarities of the object given and to the difference in the donor "the fruit for a donation has been mentioned by me, is the same also in cases of injury", and to particular conditions of the donee also the difference in the rewards of the donor and the donee should be observed. (211).

The fruit from donations has been declared; now the Author mentions a case where even without an actual gift the fruit of a gift is obtained

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 212.

Brahma contains all Dharmas since it is greater than all other gifts; one giving it fully attains undisturbedly the region of Brahma. (212).

Mitâkskharâ:—Since sarva-dharmamayam Brahma, Brahma contains all Dharmas, by reason of its capacity for knowledge, therefore its donation sarvadânebhyopyadhikam, is 30 greater than even all (other) gifts. Therefore taddadat, one giving it, through the medium of instruction, &c., Brahmalokamavâpnoti, attains the region of Brahma, avichyutam, undisturbedly, i.e. where there is no disturbance. The sense is that he resides in the sphere of Brahma till the dissolution of the elements. Here, moreover, in the gift of the Brahma is a gift which merely brings about the proprietary interest of another, since the divesting of one's own proprietary interest is impossible. (212).

^{1.} धर्माविकं धर्म is religious merit, or virtue. युष्य e. g. "Whatever religious merit I may have acquired by reason of my religious charities or virtue, I herebyidonate &c." The अर्थ of the Mimansa.

Viramitrodaya.

Abhayasya danam, 'assurance of security from fear', securing of another from any occurrence of harm is what is intended; vrksham, 'tree', i.e., one which can be of use; what is liked by the acceptor; atyantam sukhi, 'extremely happy', i.e., enjoying heaven. (211).

The words dâna and pradâna, are indicative of the genesis of the act. Yatah sarvadânamayam, 'since it embodies all dânas', i.e., is causative of the fruits which induce donations of all things; therefore, Brahma, i.e., Veda, is superior to all donable things taken each; taddadat, 'by imparting it,' i.e. by teaching, &c., transferring to another, avichyutam, 'undisturbed', i.e., lasting for a Kalpa³, as long as that, he attains the region of Brahmá. (212).

Yâjñavalkya Verse 213.

Although competent to accept a gift, one who does 20 not take over a gift, those regions which are for persons given to liberality, he attains these in entirety, (213)

1. स्वस्वविद्यत्तिरूपप्रस्वत्वापाद्वम्—Alienations which are complete, generally bring about two results, the abnegation of the rights of the alienor स्वस्वत्विद्यत्ते, and the establishment of the rights of ownership of the other प्रस्वत्वापाद्वम्—and an ordinary donation or gift brings about this double result as to cross ownerships. But in the case of the gift of Brahma or Knowledge of Brahma, while the donee gets it, the donor does not lose it, but according to the well known ह्यापित, this is the only द्वन where the subject matter of the द्वन is not only not lost but is doubled in the donor, while if not given it perishes.

अपूर्वः कोऽपि कोशोऽयं विद्यते तव भारति । व्ययतो वृद्धिमायाति क्षयमायाति संचयात् ॥ सर्वद्रव्येषु विद्येव द्रव्यमाहुरनुत्तमम् । अहार्यत्वादनर्ध्यत्वादक्षयत्वाच सर्वदा ॥

2. The Viramitrodaya reads सर्वदानमयं ब्रह्म-

3. कल्प One day of Brahmâ is 'equal to 1000 yugas i.e. a period of 4,320,000,000 years, and measuring the duration of the world. The present कहन is called the भन्नासहरूका.

30

Mitakshara:—Yah, one who, although a proper recipient, does not accept a gift such as gold &c., which Without a donation, has come to him as a gift for acceptance, i.e. the attainment of does not accept it, such a one does not take over whatever has come to him, for all that, whichever rewards are for those given to liberality, all these in entirety he attains. (213).

Viramitrodaya.

In the course of a discourse on dana, the Author mentions the 10 duty of abstaining from acceptance of a gift together with the fruit

Yājñavalkya Verse 213.

By reason of his learning, conduct, and austerities, although competent for (accepting) a donation, parigrake samarthopi, i.e., although he is entitled—by this the Author excludes out the non-acceptance of a gift due to incompetence; pratigraham, 'acceptance', has a reference, to the act of acceptance; nadatte, 'does not accept', i.e., when being given, one does not accept, whichever regions are for the donors of particular things, one abstaining from the acceptance of those things, attains all those regions in entirety. (213).

Now in the course of the enumeration of abstinence from acceptances the Author mentions an exception

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 214.

The kus'a grass, vegetables, milk, fish, perfumes, flower, sour milk, land, meat, couch, seat, barley, should not be refused, nor water also. (214).

Mitâksharâ:—Dhânāḥ, barley, i. e. fried paddy; kṣhitiḥ, land, i. e. earth.

The rest are well-known. These, kus'a &c., when offered voluntarily should not be refused. The word cha, also, in the text includes houses &c.

* Page 62 should not reject"; also, "Fuel, water, flowers, jewels, sour milk, fish, barley, milk, and vegetables, one should not reject"; also, "Fuel, water, roots, fruit, food, and that which has come without asking, one should always accept, as also a promise of immunity from harm." as observed by Manu.

^{ा.} वियं के e. by the donor himself without being asked.

^{2.} Manu Ch. IV. 250

^{3.} Ch. IV. 247.

Why should not be refused? so the Author explains Yājñavalkya, Verse 215.

Without soliciting, what has been brought should be accepted even when offered by an evil-doer, except from an unchaste woman, eunuch, an outcast, as also from an enemy. (215).

5

Mitakshara:—If then the acceptance of these, kus'a &c., is to be made when offered without being solicited, even in regard to evil-doers, what then of those who act according to the dictates (of the S'astras)? Therefore, these should not be rejected, anyatrakulatâshandhapatitebyah, except in the case of an unchaste woman, a eunuch, an outcast, and an enemy also. She who wanders from one kula to another kula is a kulata, an unchaste woman; shandhah, a eunuch, the third sex. (215).

The author mentions another exception to the rule as to 15 abstinence from an acceptance of a gift

Yâiñavalkya. Verse 216.

For the sake of honoring the gods and guests; and for the sake of one's Gurus and dependents, gifts from anybody, one may accept, as also for his own maintenance. 216. 20

Mitakshara.—The honoring of gods being a necessity, and that being not for a personal want, excepting the out-casts and the most abominable persons, he may accept gifts from all.

Guravah, the Gurus, i. e. mother, father, &c.; bhrttyah, dependents, those whom one is bound to maintain, such as the wife, son, &c. (216).

Here ends the Chapter on Gifts.

Viramitrodaya.

"One should not wish to get wealth obstructive of the study of the Vedas, nor from here and there:" by this text1 an acceptance of a gift has been prohibited for one who is under an accusation, and the like. There, the Author mentions a counter-exception

30

Yajñavalkya Verses 214, 215, 216.

The thirteen species of things such as the hus'as and the rest even in regard to the perpetrator of the most evil deeds when unasked is brought in, na pratyakhyeyam, 'should not be refused', i.e., should not be By way of stating the manner of non-refusal itself, the Author says, grahyam, 'should be accepted'. Payo, 'milk'; gandhah,

^{1.} See above verse 129 p. 329.

'perfumes', such as sandal, &c.; kṣhitiḥ, 'earth', i.e., land; dhânâḥ, 'barley', i.e., fried barley. The rest are well-known. By the use of the word cha, 'also', are included, "Bed, house, kus'a grass, perfumes, water, flower, jewels, curds, fish, barley, milk, meat, vegetables, one should not reject. Fuel, water, roots, fruit, food, such as has been offered, one should accept from all, and honey, security from harm, and the dakshind' as stated by Manu. (214).

Kulata, 'an unchaste woman', i.e., a swairini; shandhah, 'eunuch', hermaphrodite; patita, 'degraded', such as a Bráhmicide; dwit, 'enemy'; by the use of the word tatha, 'also', are included the chandalas, and the rest. From these, excepting elsewhere, from those even the kus'as, &c., should not even be accepted. This is the meaning. (215).

Devata, 'gods, &c.', for the god, or for a guest, for honouring; guravah, 'seniors', i.e., the mother, father, &c.; bhrtyah, 'dependents', such as the wife and the rest; for these also; atmano, 'of himself', vṛttih, 'subsistence', i.e., means of living such as, meals, raiment, &c.; for that also, from all, even from the perpetrator of evil deeds, one may accept. This is the sense.

From the first cha, 'and', necessary duties such as for payment of debts, &c., from the second cha, 'and', for the warding off of disease in oneself, &c., are thus added together. The first eva, 'sure', is for excluding acceptance from all excepting where specially enjoined, while the second is linked with the expression here 'one should accept'; thus on these occasions, in the absence of any other sin, even from the perpretator of an evil act, 'acceptance of a gift' is necessary; this is what is intended to be brought out. Here, kulata, &c., follow in this also. So says Vishnu: 'One desirous of offering to the seniors, and the dependants, or for honouring the gods and the guests, may accept a gift from all; one must not satisfy his own needs from that. Even for these purposes, one competent to accept that, must not take from an unchaste woman, a eunuch, and the degraded, as also from an enemy.''

Here, moreover, other donations, as also the general rules, regarding gifts, viz. the procedure, fitness, the qualifications, and disqualifications, which have not been detailed here through fear of prolixity, will be stated hereafter. (214-216).

Thus ends the Chapter on Gifts of the Commentary on Yajñavalkya.

^{1.} Ob. IV. 250, 247.

^{2.} स्वेरिणी has been defined by Narada as. या पति हित्या अन्यतः काममाचरेत.

^{3.} Oh. LVII. 13.

CHAPTER X. On the S'râddhas.

Now the Chapter on S'râddha is being commenced. By S'râddha¹ is meant² an offering with faith in regard to

1. Ale-Vijnaneswara in his introductory remarks to this chapter gives a descriptive definition of the word Sraddha, and the several divisions and sub-divisions of the term. The word literally means something which is offered through faith, श्रद्ध्या दीयते. "देशे काले च पात्रे च श्रद्ध्या विधिना च यत्। पितृत्रहिश्य विपेभ्यो दत्तं श्राद्धमुदाहृतम्" ब्रम्हाण्डपुराणे. It is a tribute of respect to the memory of the dead. This ritual is common practically among all nations and has prevailed at all times, having a very powerful influence upon the minds of the people.

Rites which are performed in this connection are classified into three groups, viz. वर्ता: Pûrvâh, or those following immediately after death, मध्यमा: Madhyamah, during the next or intermediate period, and say: Uttarah, the final. These are detailed in the Vishnu Purana by Parasara (III. XIII. 34-37) Thus :-

पुर्वाः क्रिया मध्यमाश्र तथा चैवोत्तरिक्रयाः । त्रिप्रकाराः क्रिया ह्येतास्तासां मेदाञच्छुणुष्व मे ॥ आदावाहार्यायुधादिस्पर्शाद्यन्तास्तु थाः क्रियाः । ताः पूर्वाः; मध्यमा मासि मास्येकोद्दिष्टसंज्ञिताः ॥ शेते पितुत्वमापन्ने सपिण्डीकरणादव । क्रियन्ते याः क्रियाः पित्र्याः प्रोच्यन्ते ता सूपोत्तराः ॥ The persons competent to offer these rites are generally mentioned thus:

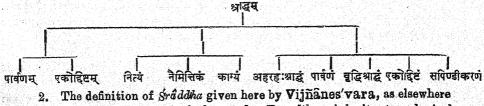

पितृमातृसपिण्डेस्तु समानसिलैलेस्तथा । तत्संचातांतर्गतैश्च राज्ञा वा धनहारीणा ॥ पूर्वाः क्रियाश्च कर्तव्याः पुत्राद्येश्वेव चोत्तराः । दोहित्रेवा नरश्रेष्ठ कार्यास्तत्तनगैस्तथा ॥

and more particularly and in order of priority, the claimants for these rites are thus enumerated at III. XII 30-33 of the same work viz. :-

> पुत्रः पौत्रः प्रपौत्रो वा तद्वद्वा भ्रानृसंतिः । सपिण्डसन्तातिर्वाऽपि क्रियाही नृप जायते ॥ तेषामभावे सर्वेषां समानोदकसंतातिः । मातृपक्षस्य पिण्डेन संबन्धा ये जलेन वा ॥ कुलद्वयंऽपि चोत्सन्ने स्नीभिः कार्याः क्रिया नृप । सङ्बातान्तर्गतेर्वाऽपि कार्या प्रेतस्य वै क्रिया । उत्सन्नबन्धरिक्थानां कारयेदवनीपतिः ॥

The importance of Śráddha and particularly the right to perform it assumes great magnitude in regard to the right of inheritence from the rule "He, who takes the assets, offers the pinda" यश्रार्थहर: स विंडदायी-

Besides the general classification given above, S'raddhas have otherwise been severally classified, as will appear from the text and from the following table.

by other writers has to be particularly noted. For although by its etymological one departed1, of eatables2 or any other thing as its substitute.

That again is of two kinds, $Parvaṇa^3$ and $Ekoddiṣhṭa^4$. There, that which is performed as intended for three persons (in ascent) is Parvaṇa, that which is performed as intended for one is $Ekoddiṣhṭa^6$.

Moreover again, it is of three sorts, viz., Nitya 'ordinary,' Naimittika "occasional', and Kâmya, 'for a special object.' Here Nitya is that which is ordained to be performed on the happening of (a fixed and) a certain event, such as every day, on Amávásyá day, or on the Ashṭakâ days, and the like etc; Naimittika is that which is ordained to be performed on the happening of an uncertain event, such as on the birth of a son, and the like; Kâmya is that which is prescribed in order to accomplish a certain desired object, such as with the desire of attaining heaven, on the occasion (when the Moon is) in the Kṛttikâ asterism, &c.

meaning viz. अद्या देयम् 'whatever is offered with faith is S'râddha', that word has a limited significance, in that it is confined only to an offering for a deceased person. Further, not any offering, but the offering of an eatable article, or something which is edible: आदं नाम अदनीयस्य तत्थानीयस्य वा इन्यस्य प्रतिद्दिश्च त्थामः. Nîlakantha in the आद्मगूख also defines it as मृतीद्देशको विपस्यक्तियान क्रिको द्रव्यत्यामः आद्मम् ।. Thus he also limits it to an offering intended for one deceased, and he also puts in the further limitation of a Vipra as the recipient and enlarges it to any article, not necessarily an eatable.

- 1. See Note 2 above. Nilakaṇṭha adds जीवच्छाद्धे देवश्राद्धे च तत्पदं गीणम्। कीण्डपारंबंशिहोत्रपद्वत्। (P. 2 11. 1-2-Gharpure's Edition).
- 2. See note 2 above Nîlakņțha आहे च पितृदेश्यकान्नत्यागह्मपत्विष्टमोाजनिषण्ड-दानयोरेच पाचान्यम् । (p. 2. ll. 17-18).
- 3. पार्वणम्-पर्वणि भवम्. The word पर्व is indicative of the number of three. 'त्रीनुह्द्रिय तु यत्तिह्द पार्वणं मुनयो विदु:' कृणवः. The word पर्व also indicates special days such as the अमानास्या &c. But here it means an offering intended for three.
- 4. एकोहिष्टम्-एकमुद्दिश्य यच्छ्राद्धमेकोहिष्टं भचक्षते. कृणवः. This kind of Śrâddha is only possible upto the performance of the Sapinda, as thereafter the एक is joined into a group of three. See लोगाक्षि cited बाद्धमयुखः—सिण्डीकरणात्पूर्वभेकोहिष्टं मृतः विद्वः । कर्च पार्वणवत्क्रपत्पित्यन्दामितरेण तु ॥ See Verse 104 above Page 298 1.12,

And again, of five kinds:—(1) Daily, aharaha S'râddha, (2) Pârvaṇa S'râddha (3) Vrddhi S'ráddha, (4) Ekoddiṣhṭa S'râddha, and (5) Sapindikaraṇa S'râddha.

As to the daily $Sr\bar{a}ddha$, that has been already ordained by the text¹ "Food to the manes, and men &c.,"; moreover also Manu²:—"One should offer every day the $S'r\hat{a}ddha$ by means of food and the like, or with water, or even with milk, roots, and fruits, (and thus give) inexhaustible satisfaction to the manes."

Now while describing the Aharaha and the Vṛddhi S'râddhas the Author mentions the times for these.

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 217-18.

The $Am\hat{a}v\hat{a}sy\hat{a}$, the $Ashtak\hat{a}$, the Vrddhi, the dark fortnight, the two solstices, materials, wealth of the Brâhmaņas, the equinoxes, and the passage of the Sun. (217).

The Vyatipāta, the Gajachchhâyâ, the eclipses of the Sun 15 and the Moon, and whenever a desire for * Page 63. a S'ràddha is felt, these also are declared to be the times for (the performance of) a S'rāddha (218).

Mitâksharâ:—The day (or period) during which the moon 20 is not visible is the $Am\hat{a}v\hat{a}sy\hat{a}^3$. In these if it extends over two days, then that which covers the latter portion of the day i. e. $apar\hat{a}nha$ should be taken, vide the Text:—

^{1.} Verse, 104 p. 298 above.

^{2.} Ch. III. 82.

^{3.} अमानस्या—also otherwise called अमानास्या (See Amarakos'a I. IV 8.). The day during which the Sun and the Moon are in the same plane i. e. are in conjunction. अमा सह वसतोऽस्यां चन्द्राकों। स्याचिद्रमसीर्यः परः सन्निकर्षः सा अमानस्या। गोभिलः. It is the 15th or the last day of the dark half of a month, immediately after which begins the bright half; hence it is also called the new moon day.

"The Aparanha for the manes", the Aparanha, moreover, when it is divided into five parts, the fourth part, and occupying three muhurtas.

Ashṭakâs are four in number, described by As'walâyana, thus: 'on the eighth days of the four latter fortnights of the Hemanta and the S'is'ira, are the Ashṭakas celebrated.'

Vṛddhiḥ, such as the birth of a son, &c.; kṛṣḥṇapakṣhaḥ, dark fortnight, i.e. the latter fortnight; ayanadwayam, the two solstices called the southern and the northern solstices; drawyam, materials, such as the kṛṣara, meat, &c.; brâḥmaṇasampattiḥ, wealth of Brāḥmaṇas, as will be described later on; viṣhuvat dwayam, the two equinoxes, i.e., the passage of the Sun through the Meṣha¹o and the Túlâ; S'uryasaṅkramaḥ, the passage of the Sun, the transition of the Sun from one sign of the zodiac into another sign. Although the solstices and the equinoxes are ^{1.} अप्रान्ह:—The third or the latter portion of the day, the two first being पूर्वाण्ड and मध्यान्ह, occupying a period of three ggfs.

^{2.} मुहुर्न—two घटिकाड, or 48 minutes.

^{3.} अष्टका:—अश्रन्ति पितरोऽस्यामिति अश्-तकत् (Un. 3. 14. 148), The 8th days of the dark halves of the months of Margaśīrsha, Pausha, Magha, and Fâlguna.

^{4.} Grihya Sūtras II. 4. 1.

^{5.} हेमन्त:—हिनोति वर्धयति बलम्. The fifth of the Rtus or seasons of the year, covering the months of मॉर्गज्ञीर्व and पौष.

^{6.} शिशिर:—शशन्ति धावन्ति यस्मिन्धिकाः—The sixth and the last of the Rtus of the year covering the months of माच and फाल्यन.

^{7.} शृद्ध:—Lit. growth, prosperity, are occasions for rejoicing, such as the birth of a son, an addition to the family strength.

^{8.} अयने—The turning points of the Sun from the extreme south and the extreme north. The two solstices viz. the winter solstice or द्शिणायन called the tropic of Capricorn, and the Summer solstice called the tropic of Cancer.

^{9.} 委积—a delicious meal made up of sesamum, rice and pulse, and used with butter and spices. Marathi Khichadi, Hindi Khichri.

^{10.} The signs of Aries and Libra of the zodiac.

^{11.} i. e. both indicative of the transition of the Sun from one sign into another.

established as included in the general term Sankranti, still, their separate mention is for the sake of demonstrating greater merit.

Vyatīpâta, a special kind of $Y'og\alpha$. Gajachchhâyâ is defined as follows:—

"When the moon is in the asterism presided over by the Pitrs and at the same time the Swan is in the asterism of Hasta, and that tithi happens to be the thirteenth day, it is known as Gajachchhaya; some say it means the elephant's shadow."

But that is not taken here, as the latter is in regard to time.

1. योग—Conjunction. The conjunction of the Moon with one of the 27 constellations through which it revolves, such as व्यतीपान, वैधृति &c. These are विद्यम्भः प्रीतिरायुष्मान् सीभाग्यः शोभनस्तथा । अतिगण्डः सुकम्मी च धृतिः सुकस्तथैव च ॥

गण्डो वृद्धिर्धवश्चेव व्यावातो हर्षणस्तथा । वज्रश्चाष्टक् व्यतीपानो वंरीयान् परिवः शिवः । सिद्धः साध्यः ग्रमः ग्रको ब्रह्मेन्द्रो वैधतिस्तथा ॥

The न्यतीपान has been thus described:

अवणिश्वीधनिष्ठार्द्धानागदैवतमस्तके । यद्यमा रविवारेण व्यतीपातः स उच्यते ॥

- 2. पितृदेवत्ये i. e. the मद्या, the tenth in the group of 27, and containing five stars.
 - 3. 責刊: i. e. the Sun.
 - 4. कर i.e. the हस्त नक्षत्र.
- 5. याग्या तिथि: :—The thirteenth of the second half, and sacred to the God Yama. This is also called वैत्रस्वती. वैश्ववर्णा.
 - 6. केचित्—viz. the Author of the Smrtichandrikâ, see page 341 ll.
- 7. (See Bâlambhatti p. 391 l. 10). In its literal sense, it means the eastern quarter प्राची दिस् where the shadow of the दिग्राजि fall. In this sense, the passage would have reference to a place, while Yâjñavalkyasmṛti has been referring to the times for performance, and therefore Vijñanesvara says that it is the technical पारिभाषिक, sense which alone is admissible here, and not the literal sense under which the other terms हस्तिच्छाया, कुंजरच्छाया &c. would come.

Here by reference to the काटकश्चानि, महाभारत and मन् (3-274) the Author treats गुजन्छाया in its literal sense admitting the terms कुञ्जरछाया and हत्तिछाया as synonymous. At the end, however, he also explains the term गुजन्छाया taking it as a technical पारिभाषिक expression. This passage is helpful as indicative of the dates of the Author of the Mitâksharâ and of the Smṛti-Chandrikā.

Grahanam, eclipse, the affliction of the Sun and the Moon. When, moreover, the performer feels a desire for a S'râddha, s'râddham prati ruchih, even then also. The word cha, 'also' in the text includes the Yuga and like other days. These are, srâddhakâlâh, the times for (the performance of) a s'râddha. Though by the next: "One should not eat during the eclipse of the Sun or Moon", there is a prohibition against the taking of food, still the fault is of the person who eats; as for the giver, there is prosperity. (217-218).

Viramitrodaya.

Now stating the duty of performance of S'râddha with its details and together with the processes, beginning with the texts "Amâvâsyâ, Aṣhṭakā etc.", and ending with the texts "Pleased are the ancestors of men", the Author mentions first the times for the performance of a S'râddha:

Yâjñavalkya Verse 217-218.

Amavasya, the fifteenth day of the dark half; all equally; ashtaka, the eighth day of the dark halves of the months of Pausha, Magha, Falguna, and Asvina. Vrdhhih, 'prosperity', such as the birth of a son &c.,

- 1. उपराम:—Calamity. This has a reference to the belief that at the eclipse time the two demons $R\bar{a}hu$ and $Ket\bar{u}$ threaten the Sun and the Moon with absorption. $R\hat{a}hu$ was the son of Viprachitti and $Simhik\hat{a}$, and so is often referred to as Saimhikeya, after his mother. While the nectar after it was obtained from the churning of the ocean was being distributed among the gods, $R\hat{a}hu$ surreptitiously attempted to partake of it along with the gods among whom he had pushed himself in disguise. The Sun and the Moon exposed the fraud, and as a result Vishnu severed his head from the trunk by means of his $Sudar^{\hat{s}ana}$ Ckakra; but as he had tasted some quantity of the nectar, the head became immortal and is supposed in vengeance to threaten the Sun and the Moon with annihilation at each eclipse. In astronomy they are the 8th and the 9th planets, $R\hat{a}hu$ the head and $Ket\bar{u}$ the body.
- 2. i.e. Whenever one feels a desire for the performance of the brâddha, that is ever a good time for it. See Smrtichandrikâ p. 342 II. 30-31.
- 3. युगादिममृतय:.—These days have been detailed in Yama, Devala, Vishmupurana, Narada Purana, Matsya and other Puranas and cited in the Smṛtichandrikā at 343 ll. 1-24 &c. वैशाखमासस्य तु या तृतीया नवम्यसी कार्तिकश्चकृपक्षे । नमस्य मासस्य च ऋष्णपक्षे त्रयोद्शी पञ्चद्शी च मावे ॥ &c. Vishmupurana III. 14. 12-14.
 - 4. दातुरम्यदय:-The giver secures the merit.
 - 5. Verse 217.
 - 6. Verse 270.

30

Kṛṣhnapakshah, 'the dark fortnight' of all months; when possible, the entire, when not possible, beginning with the fifth day, as far as the tenth day; and even when that is not possible, any day whatsoever of the dark fortnight; ayanadwayam, 'the two solstices' i.e., the summer solstice and the winter solstice, the two sankranti days; drawyam, 5 'materials', such as the meat of a goat &c; Brahmanasampattih, 'wealth of Brâhmanas 'i.e. the acquisition of Brâhmanas whose presence purifies the company; vishuvat, the transit of the Sun into the Aries and the Libra; the transition of the Sun from one sign of the zodiac into another is vishuwat. Although the two solstices also indicate transition, still its separate mention is with the object of propounding additional fruit; vyatipato, a particular yoga, enumerated in the list commencing with vishkambha and the rest following; others explain it as the equinox of the Sun and the Moon. Gajachchhaya, "The combination of ' magha' and the thirteenth is designated as the shadow of an elephant, Kunjarachchhaya; it occurs when the Moon is in the Magha, as also when the Sun is in the Hasta constellation", the period thus defined; Chandrasaryayorgrahanam, ' the eclipse of the Moon and the Sun', the attack of the Rahu; śraddhamprati ruchih, 'a desire for the performance of the śrâddha', i.e., the wish for a śrâddha. By the use of the word cha 'also', are added the Agrahayant', S'rawani and the like others not mentioned here. In this manner also in the case of vrddhi and like other words it should be seen that these are used as indicative of the time. By the use of the word eva, 'also', mutual combination is excluded. Therefore, on each occasion such as on the amavasya and like other days, the time for a śraddha is deduced. (217-218).

Exclusive of the Daily S'râddha, the Author states the necessary accession of wealth of Brâhmanas for the four kinds of S'râddhás, to be herefter described

Yajnavalkya, Verse 219.

Foremost in all the Vedas, accomplished in Vedic study, the knower of Brahma, youthful, who knows the meaning of the Vedas, an accomplished scholar of the jyeshthasâma, of the Trimadhu, of the Trisuparana. (219).

Mitakshara: - Sarveshu, vedeshu in all the Vedas i.e. in the Rgveda and the rest, even2 though attention be diverted,

1. The full moon day of the month of Margasirsha.

^{2.} Here there is a mistake in the print in l. 17 on p. 63. For अनन्य मनस्कतया read अन्यमनस्कतया. Balambhatta explains, अपिव्यापारान्तरसम्आयकः.

25

capable of undisturbed study and that, foremost, agryâh; srotriyah, accomplished by vedic study; one who knows the Brahman, to be described later on, is a knower of Brahma; yuvâ, youthful, i. e. middle-aged. This is the attribute common for all. He who knows the meaning of the mantras and the Brahmanas is vedarthavit, the knower of the meaning of the Vedas; Jyeshthasâmâ etc. an accomplished scholar of the jyeshthasâma i. e. particular portion of the Samaveda, one who has taken the vow of its study, and studies it with the observance of that vow is a Jyeshthasâmâ; Irimadhu is a portion of the Rg-Veda as well as a vow for it; one who has taken its vow, and studies it with the observance of that vow, is a Trimadhu; Trisuparna is a portion of the Rk and Yajur Vedas; one who has taken a vow, and studies it with the observance of that vow, is a Trîsuparnikah.

These Brāḥmaṇas are the wealth of S'raddha as stated later on; thus is the connection with the performance. (219).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 220.

The sister's son, the officiating priest, the son-in-law, a sacrificer, the father-in-law, the maternal uncle, one who is an accomplished scholar in the trinachiketa, the daghter's son, pupil, a relation, and the bândhavas. (220).

Mitâkṣharâ — Swasrīyaḥ, sister's son; ritwij, the officiating priest, as has been described above; jâmâtâ, son-in-law, daughter's husband; Trinâchiketaḥ, a portion of the Yajur Veda. He who has taken its vow, and studies it with the observance of that vow, is a Trinâchiketa. The rest are well-known. These, moreover, are to be understood (to be chosen) in case when the aforementioned

^{1.} i. e. in the third Book particularly in Chapter IV यतिधर्मप्रकरणस्। see verses 111-203.

^{2.} The Vedas consist of the Samhitas and the Brahmanas, which together make up the Vedas.

^{3.} Rg. Veda I. 90 6-8.

^{4.} Rg. Veda X. 114. 3-5, Yajurveda, Narayanopanishat.

^{5.} Verse 221.

^{6.} See above Verse 35 p. 127.

persons, viz., the foremost, the S'rotriyas, &c., are not available. "This is the first choice to be adopted in offering sacrifices to the gods, and the secondary choice mentioned always now by the wise and the rest has not been condemned" so stating, the sister's son and the rest having been mentioned by Manu. 1 (220).

5

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 221.

Those devoted to the rites, those devoted to austerities. the Panchagni,2 the celebates, and also * Page 64 those devoted to their father and mother are the Brahmanas the wealth of a S'rad- 10

dha. (221).

Mitakshara.—Karmanishthah, devoted to the rites, i.e., vigilant in the performance of the ordained rites; taponishthâ, devoted to austerities, i.e., habituated to the performance of austerities. One who has maintained the two fires, viz., the sabhya and the avasathya, and also the three fires is Panchagni, one who has consecrated and maintained the five fires, and also one who has studied the panchagni lore.3

The Brahmachârî, the celebate student, i.e., the temporary and the perpetual; pitrmatrparah, devoted to their father and 20

The word cha 'and' includes "those devoted to knowledge." &c., and the like.

Brâhmanah, not Kshatriyas and others.

1. Ch. III. 147.

5, See Manu Ch. III. Verse 134&c.

mother, i. e., always doing honour to them.

पंचाझि.—The five fires viz. the Sabhya, Avasathya, and the three fires Gârhaspatya, Dakshinâgni, and Âhawanîya. One who has maintained the five fires in his house is a Pañ châgni.

^{3.} The expression वैचामि Panchagmi is also used in reference to the five mystic fires in the body. One who is acquainted with the doctrine of these fires is a पंचामिविद्याध्यायी.

^{4.} See above, the two kinds of Students celebates noted at pp. 140-141, above viz. नेष्ट्रिक and उपक्रवीण- Perpetual and one contemplating a family life.

15

25

S'râddhasampadah¹, wealth of a S'ràddha, i.e., at the S'ráddhas they are the cause of undiminishable wealth as the resulting fruit. (221),

Viramitrodaya.

While mentioning the Brahmanas for a Śraddha, the Author 5 explains the wealth of Brahmanas

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 219,-221.

Sarveshu, 'in all', i.e., the Rh, and the other vedeshu, 'in the Vedas'; agryah, 'foremost', i. e., who have studied without a fault'; s'rotrivâh, has been defined before; Brahmavit, 'knowing the Brâhma', i.e., one who has the knowledge of the spirit of self; yuvd, 'youthful', i.e., not too young, nor too old; Vedasya, 'of the Vedas', i.e., consisting of the mantras and Brahmanas, arthavit, one knowing the meaning'; Jyehthasama-jyeshthasama is a particular portion of the Sama Veda, by having that, a man is jueshthasama; trimadhuh, 'one who studies the portion of the Rk veda known as madhu; Trisuparnah, is a portion of the Rk and Yajur Vedas; one who studies it. (219).

Swasriyo, 'sister's son'; rtwik, 'officiating priest' as described before ; jamata, 'son-in-law,' the daughter's husband; yajyah, 'fit to be served at a sacrifice', i.e., one whose sacrifice may be accomplished 20 by the acceptance of the office of the officiating priest; Trinachiketah is a portion of the Veda of the sacrificials lore; one studying it is trinachiketah; sambhandhino, 'relatives' such as the mother's father, and the like; bandhavah, 'cognates', such as the mother's sister's son, and the like others. (220)

Karmanishthah, 'devoted to performances', i.e., intently devoted to the performance of the ordinary and the special duties; taponishthah, devoted to austerities', i.e., habitually observing the Chandrayana and the like; Panchagnih, 'one with five fires', i.e., one who has consecrated the five fires, viz., the Sabhya, Avasathya, Ahavanîya, Gârhapatya and Dakshina; pitrmatrparah, 'devoted to the father and the mother', i.e.,

^{1.} श्राद्धसंपत्—संपत् means literally accumulation, wealth. It is therefore used to denote the means by which any object is achieved or accomplished. The meaning is that Brahmanas of this kind add to the value of the S'raddha, and secure for it the desired result.

^{2.} अस्वलित—without any mistake or lapse.

^{3.} See verses 54, 55 pp. 154 and 155.

^{4.} Verse 35 above.

^{5.} i.e. The Yajurveda.

^{6.} See Verses 324, 325 Prayaschittádhyaya, where this penance is described in its original type and with the varieties also.

dutiful towards the father, as well as dutiful towards the mother; by the use of the word cha, 'as also', those solely devoted to knowledge also. Brahmanas only and not the Kshatriyas and the rest. S'raddha-Sampat, 'at the S'raddha,' the wealth, i.e., undiminished satisfaction of the manes; the cause of that. (219-221).

The Author now mentions those to be avoided¹
Yâjñavalkya, Verse 222.

The diseased, one with a deficient³ or overgrown limb, the one-eyed, similarly the son of a re-married woman, also one who has violated³ the vow of celibacy, the son⁴ of an adultress, the son of a widow, a man with deformed nails, and one with black teeth. (222).

Mitakshara,—Rogî, the diseased, i.e., one afflicted with a virulent type of disease. One who has a smaller or an excessive limb, hinatiriktangah, one with a dificient or overgrown limb; one who 15 sees with only one eye is a kana, the one-eyed. By this also are excluded the blind, the deaf, the castrated, the bald-headed, one afflicted with a skin disease, and the rest. The Punarbhû has already been described; one born from her is Paunarbhava, the son of a re-married woman. Avakirnī, one who has violated the viw of 20 chastity., i.e. one while under a vow of celibacy has swerved from celibacy. Kunda and Golaka, son of an adultress, and the son of a widow.

^{2.} हीनातिरिक्ताङ्ग:—One whose limbs are short, or who is wanting in a limb, and also he who has an overgrown limb.

^{3.} As the Mitakshara explains, one who while yet a student has indulged in a sexual lapse.

^{4.} ie. the son born of a woman who, while her husband is living, has intercourse with another.

^{. 5.} There is a mistake in the print here at p. 64 l. 10. For तृद्ध्यजनन read विद्ध्यजनन

15

20

25

1" Upon the wives of others are born two (kinds of) sons viz. Kuṇḍa and Golaka; (one who is begotten) while the husband is living is known as Kuṇḍa, while one who is begotten after the husband's death is a Golaka."

Kunakhî, one with deformed nails, one whose nails are crooked. S'yâvadantakaḥ, one with black teeth, i. e., one naturally with black teeth. This has connection with the clause 'these are forbidden for a S'ráddha,' as will be stated hereafter. (222).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 223.

A teacher for a fee, a eunuch, the maiden-reviler, one accused of an offence, the betrayer of a friend, the calumniator, Soma-vendor, and a Parivindaka (223).

Mitakshara —One who teaches by taking a salary is a bhrtakâdhyâpakah, a teacher for a fee, also one who learns3 by paying a fee; klibah, eunuch, the hermaphrodite; with real or nonexisting faults one who slanders a maiden is kanyâdûshī a maiden-reviler; whether truly or falsely one who is accused of brâhmicide or a like offence is an abhisasta, one accused of an offence; mitradhruk, the betrayer of a friend, one who commits treachery towards a friend; one who is addicted to declare the faults of others is a pisuna, a calumniator; Soma-vikrayī, the Soma-seller, is one who at a sacrifice sells Soma; parivindaka, the parivettâ, while the elder brother has not yet married or kindled the sacred fire, if a younger brother marries or kindles the sacred fire, he is called a parivettà; while the elder brother is called parivitti. As says Manu4: "One who contracts the marital union or the consecration of the sacrifice when his elder brother exists, that one is called the parivettà, while the elder a parivitti."

^{1.} Manu Oh. III. 174.

^{2.} Verse 224 p. 459.

^{3.} There is a mistake in the point at p. 64 l. 7. for नाऽधीते read योऽधीते.

^{4.} Qh. III, 117.

15

Similarly the giver, and the sacrificing priest; thus¹: "The parivetti, the parivetta; and the woman with whom such marriage is contracted, all these go to hell, the giver, and the sacrificer the fifth." (223).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 224.

One who forsakes his mother, father or the preceptor, one who eats the food given by the son of an infidel, the husband of one who had belonged to another, the thief, and the evil-doers, are forbidden. (224).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Without any reason, one who forsakes his 10 mother, father, or preceptor is one who forsakes his mother, father, or the preceptor, mâtāpitṛ-gurutyâgī. Similarly the forsaker of a wife or of a son also.

"Aged parents, a chaste wife, and an infant son, even by committing hundred avoidable acts, must be maintained; such has been declared by Manu" having been equally pointed out.

He who eats (as'nâti) the food given by a Kunda is called a kundâsī, one who eats the food given by the *Page 65. son of an adulteress. This also applies to (one who eats the food given by) a Golaka, because of 20 the text:—"He who eats the food given by those two is called kundas'i."

The infidel is one who has no religion, his son is the son of an infidel, vṛṣhalatmajaḥ⁴; parapurva, one who had belonged to another, i. e. a re-married woman; her husband, patiḥ, is the husband of one who had belonged to another. One who appropriates a thing not given to him is a thief, stenaḥ; karmaduṣhṭaḥ, evil-doer, those who act against the (precepts of the) S'ātras. By the use of

^{1.} Oh. III, 172.

^{2.} दात्पाजकपञ्चमा:—The younger brother, the elder brother, the woman, one who gives away the bride, and the sacrificing priest, at the Fire—the fifth, all these five.

^{3.} By Manu. This verse is given in some editions as a variant to Verse 11 of chap. XI. Elsewhere it is cited as a text of Brhaspati.

^{4.} वृष्त: has been defined by Parâsara thus:—अग्निकार्यपरिश्रष्टाः संध्योपासनवर्जिताः । वेदं च येऽनधीयानास्ते सर्वे वृष्ताः स्मृताः ॥ वैद्यनाथदीक्षितीये पू. ५२ पं ९४.

the word cha, and, are included the cheat, the Devalaka, and the like others. These are ninditâh, forbidden i. e. prohibited for a S'râddha.

Although by the text¹ "the foremost of all in the Vedâs &c.,' and others, merely by declaring the Brâhmanas worthy at a S'râddha, the unworthiness of those others than these is established, yet the text prohibiting certain persons such as 'the diseased &c.' is with a view to make it permissive, when Brâhmanas of the type, are not available, to admit others excepting those who are excluded. (224).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions those who do not deserve to be the proper recipients at a $S'r\hat{a}ddh\alpha$

Yājñavalkya, Verses 222-224.

Rogi, 'diseased', one suffering from a virulent type of disease; one whose limb is short or excessive; one of such a type; Kāṇaḥ, 'one-eyed', with a deformed eye, thus he is on a common basis with the blind; paunarbhavaḥ, 'the son of a re-married woman', the son of a twice-married woman; by the use of the word tathā, 'also', are included the māhishika² and the like; avakirini, 'one who has violated the vow of celibacy'; Kunda-Golaka, as described by Manu³ thus: "On the wives of others are begotten two kinds of sons, viz., Kunda and Golaha; while when the husbani is living one begotten is called kunda, one begotten when he is dead is called golaka"; kunakhi, 'with deformed nails', i.e., with contracted nails', śyāvadantakaḥ, 'one with black teeth', i.e., one whose teeth are by nature black. (222).

Bhṛtakâdhyāpakaḥ, 'a teacher for a fee', i.e., one who accepts a salary and then teaches; klībaḥ, 'a eunuch', i.e., as has been described by Devala thus: "S'handhakaḥ, a eunuch so rendered by windiness, the Paṇḍu, a eunuch, the hermaphrodite, and the kilaka, thus sixfold have the varieties of eunuchs been described". Kanyādūśhi, 'the maidenreviler', i.e., by declaring a fault or by sexual intercourse, one who

^{1.} Verse 219 above page.

^{2.} माहिषिक:—(1) The paramour of an unchaste woman. See Kalika Purana माहिषिक:—(1) या च स्याद्याभिचारिणी ! तां दृष्टवा कामयति य: स वै माहिषिकः स्पृत: ।। or, (2) one who lives by the prostitution of his wife. महिषीत्युच्यते नार्या मगेनोपार्जितं धनम । उपजीवति यस्तस्याः स वै माहिषिकः स्पृत: ।। Apte.

^{3.} Ch. III. 174.

อ

10

reviles a maiden; abhiśastakah, 'one accused of an offence'; by reason of an accusation of brah micide and the like, one who has become a suspec; mitradhruk, 'the betrayer of a friend', i.e., who acts treacherously towards a friend. Piśunah, 'the calumniator', i.e., who by habit declares the faults of others; Somavikrayt, 'the Soma-vendor', i.e., the vendor of the Soma creeper. Parivindakah, as described in: "Parivetta, is one who being younger, while the eldest has not married, marries a wife." (223).

Without there being any reason allowed by the S'astras, one who abandons, mother, father, or the preceptor. Kunddast, as described by Devala, viz.—"By sixty-four palas is a prastha; a kunda is four prasthas; a Brahmana of this measure of diet is called a kundast by the wise", as also in connection with the context of kunda and Golaka; and described by Devala thus: 'Of these two, one who eats the food, is called the kundast." Vṛṣhalaḥ, 'an infidel', i.e., an apostate, his son. Parapārvā, 'one belonging to another,' i.e., the re-married, her husband, i.e., who marries her. Stenaḥ, 'a thief', i.e., one habituated to thieving. Karmadūṣhtāḥ, 'the evil—doers', those who are habitually engaged in transactions such as trale &c. which are prohibited. By the use of the word cha, 'and', are included the cheat, the Devalaka, and like others mentioned in other Smṛtis. (224).

Having thus described the times for the S'râddha and also the Bráhmanas, the Author now describes the ceremony of the Pârvana S'râddha

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 225.

25

One should invite on the day before, the Brahmanas, himself self-possessed, and pure. They also should be self-restrained in regard to mind and the movements of speech and body. (225).

Mitâkṣharâ—The Brâhmṇas mentioned above (with the words) "Be pleased to agree to devote a moment to the S'râddha" purvedyurPárvaṇa S'râddha. nimantrayeta, one should invite on the day before, and by earnest solicitations he should make them accept the invitation.

35

^{1.} क्षण:—Moment, leisure—निर्झापारिस्थिती कालविशेषात्सवयोः क्षणः । अमरः III. ३. ४७. A request to another to assign undisturbed a period of time for a particular purpose e. g. for the Śrāddha. Hence, क्षण has come in ordinary use to be regarded as an invitation given and accepted. 'क्षणः पर्वोत्सवेऽपि स्यात् नथा मनिऽप्येनेहसः'

Or on the day following as ordained by Manu² thus:-

"On the day before, or on the day when the S'ráddha rite is performed, one should invite with due respect, at least three Brahmanas such as have been mentioned."

Atmavân, self-possessed i, e. free from grief, excitement, &c. and thus he is not exposed to any fault; or 'self-possessed' i. e. one who has controlled his senses. S'uchih, pure, also self-restrained. Tairapi, by them also, i. e. by the invited Brâhmanas should be manovâkkâyawyâpāraih, in regard to the movements of the 10 mind, speech and body, samyataih, self-restrained. (225).

Viramitrodaya.

Now the Author states a part of the S'raddha, viz., the invitation

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 225 (1).

15 Atmavan, 'self-possessed,' i.e., whose mind has not been overpowered by anger, &c.; s'uchih, 'pure', free from impurity; Brahmanan, 'the Brahmanas', viz., those possessing the qualification for being fit recipients at a S'raddha; purvedyuh, 'the day before', i.e., the day before that of the s'raddha, in short, at the night of the previous day; nimantrayeta, 'should invite', i.e., should engage for the 20 s'raddha. In the absence of an invitation on the previous day, however, on the s'râddha day even, the invitation (may be given); vide this text of Devala: "To-morrow I intend to perform, having thus determined, the giver should invite the Brahmanas; without meal and once having 25 eaten, after all the persons in the house having had their food; if that be not possible, either the other day, one should invite those Brahmanas"; 'other day,' i.e., in the morning, or at a time immediately before the s'râddha.

The Author states a rule for the performer of the s'raddha, as 30 also for the Brahmana invited for the s'raddha.

^{1.} अपरेदा:, the other day as opposed to पूर्वेदा:, the day before; therefore the day of the performance of the śrāddha.

^{2.} Oh. III. 187.

15

20

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 225 (2).

In mind, speech, and also in bodily action, restraint, such, e.g., not performing the achamana forbidden at a s'raddha; thus qualified, the Brahmanas. By the use of the word cha and by the performer of the s'raddha also, restraint should be kept. By the use of the word api also, including five, the inclusion of the movements of the eye and the rest (of the organs). (225).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 226.

In the afternoon having duly honoured with welcome those (Brâḥmaṇas) after they had arrived; with the sacred ring in his hand, after they have sipped water, one should make them sit down on seats. (226).

Mitākṣharâ:—Aparâṇhe, in the afternoon, as has already been defined; tân, those, invited Braḥmaṇas having called and with welcome words having honoured them, having had their feet washed, and having made them sip water, in the appointed seats âsaneṣhu, pavitrapâṇiḥ, with the sacred ring in his hand, those with the sacred rings on their hands, he should cause to be seated. Although it has been generally stated 'in the afternoon', still having commenced during the Kutapa¹ and finished during the following five muhurtas² is a better course, vide the following text³:—

"Of a day⁴, the muhurtas are well-known to be fifteen always. There, that which is the eighth muhurta that period is known as the Kutapa. Since at mid-day the Sun always becomes dim, therefore that yields an endless reward, and commencement at that time is of special importance. After the Kutapa muhurta the four muhurtas

^{1.} कुनप:—is the eight's period of the day when divided into fiften periods, and considered to be the proper time for a $S'r\hat{a}ddha$. कुं भुनं or कुल्सिनं तपित इति । दिनसस्याष्टमे भोग मन्दीभवित भास्करः । स कालः कुनपे ज्ञेयः पितृणां दत्तमक्षयम् ॥ शातानपः. Other meanings of the word are given in the text of the Mitâkṣharā. See also similar meanings given in the रामाश्रमी on अमर II. 7-31.

^{2.} मुहुर्न:—A fraction of a day, being 10th of the night and the day, and equal to 48 minutes, or two चरिंड. ते तु त्रिंशदहोरात्रः. Amara I. IV. 12.

^{3.} Matsya Purana. Ch. XXII. 84-88.

^{4.} i. e. of 12 hours; as opposed to day and night अहोरात्र of 24 hours.

which follow the period of these five muhurtas is considered to be the proper time for the performance exequial offerings."

So also another meaning, for the term 'Kutapa' useful for a s'râddha has been stated thus:—

"The noon, the (made) vessel of rhinoceros' horn, and the Nepâl blanket, the silver, the Kus'a grass, the sesamum, the cows, and the daughter's son is said to be the eighth. Sin', they call Kutsita, since these eight cause trouble to it; these are well-known as Kutapa (Sin-killers)."

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 227.

An even number in the $Daive^3$ according to ability, and so in the Pitrya, an uneven number; in a strewn, pure place, sloping towards the south likewise. (227).

Mitâksharâ:—Daive in a Daiva S'ráddha, i. e. one on auspicious occasions; yugmân, even, i. e. equal * Page 66. number, of Brâhmanas, one should seat. In what manner? yathâs'akti, according to ability, i. e. not exceeding capacity. There, for the vis'vedeva seats, two each, for the three's commencing with the mother and the rest, two for each, or two for the three. Similarly for the father and the others, two for each, or two for all the three. In a similar way for the इष्टिश्राह्ने क्रतुर्द्शः संकीत्यों वैश्वदेषिक । नान्दीष्ठात्व सत्यवस् काम्ये च धुरिलोचनौ ॥ पुरुरवाईवौ चैव पार्वणे समुदात्ह्वतौ । नैभित्तिके कामकालाविवं सर्वत्र कीर्तितम् ॥ See Bâlambhatta p. 508. Note that the Vaiśvadevika is subsidiary (अंग) to the Paitrika which is the principal (प्रधान).

^{1.} This text is rather obscure, its force mainly depending upon the words in the original sanskit and their shades of meanings: कुं means पांप or sin (कुल्सिन). These eight cause संताप (or नाप) to it, therefore they are known as कुत्पड़.

^{2.} देने i. e. intended for the देनs, as distinguished from चिन्नs. It should be remembered that after the sapindikarana, the departed is placed among the Pitrs in the Pitrloka. The last person in the trio invoked by the deceased during his lifetime is promoted to the Devas in the Devaloka. At a Śrâddha the first to be worshipped are the Devas or members of the Devaloka, and for these an even number is recommended. Different Viśvedevas are worshipped at different Śrâddhas according to the variety of the Śrâddha as stated by S'ańkha thus:

^{3.—}पित्र्ये i. e. the त्रयी or trio honored among the Pitrs.

20

maternal grandfather and the rest, or even for all the three groups the Vais'vadeva may be separate or common.1

Pitriye, in the pitrya, i.e. in the Parvana S'râddha, ayugmân, uneven, i. e. not equal, one should seat, this clause is understood.

This moreover, paristrte, in a strewn, i.e. everywhere covered; suchau, pure, and being smeared with cow dung &c., and daks'hinâprawane, sloping towards the South, i. e. sloping downwards in the southern direction, des'e, in a place, must be performed, (227).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author states the procedure immediately preceding the 10 performance of the Śiādha

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 226, 227.

Aparanhe, 'in the afternoon', of the day divided into five parts. in the fourth period, in the interval covering three muhurtas, also in a place which is 'pure' s'uchau, i. e. not defiled by an impurity2; parito. 'around', encircled by a cloth or the like; dakshinapravane 'sloping towards the south', tending towards the south to be inclined downwards. By the use of the word tatha 'and similarly', well cleaned by means of the besmearing of cowdung and the like. Asaneshu 'in the seats', which were intended for seating the Brahmanas, such as the blanket, the ascetic's seat; Pavitram, already described before, and also the Kusa grass are in the hand of whom, such a one, the performer of the S'râddha; Tân, 'those', agatan, who had arrived, Brahmanas, achantan, 'having made them sip water', i. e. who had performed the sipping of water,-this moreover is by implication inclusive of both &c., swagatena 'with welcome words' i.e. by inquiring about them with welcome, samabhyarchya, 'having honoured', i.e. having shown them respect, upaveśayet, 'should cause them to be seated.'

Brâhmanas, the Author specifies the number. Daire, 'for the Gods', i.e., for the s'râddha intended for all the Gods, Yathâs'ahti, 'according to ability', pairs of two, four and onwards; pitrye, 'for the manes', i.e., for the S'râddha intended for the deceased, according to ^{1.} तन्त्रेण संशेषेण i. e. not by actually allotting seats, but simply by a mental invocation. When there is only one Brâhmana, he represents both the Devas and the Pitrs as a common medium for the worship.

^{2.} अमेध्य—is an impurity as opposed to मेध्य, sacred; something which can be used at a sacrifice (मेघ). The word अमेध्य is generally used for ordure, an excretion, or blood.

ability, uneven, i. e., one, three, and more in odd numbers. By the use of the word tu following immediately after the word achantan, those who have not performed the sipping are excluded. The word eva, 'only', follows the clause 'yugman' (in pairs). By the use of the word tatha, 'also', in the expression ayugman (not even), its sequence is added to. This rule, moreover, holds when it is possible. When, however, it is not possible, another alternative has been stated clearly in the verse following. By the use of the word cha 'and', "Or one should feed one Brahmana who is capable of purifying the whole company?; having offered the naivedya for the Daira, afterwards should be offered to him," this alternative stated by S'ankha about one Brahmana is added to. The word Aparanha, is indicative of the time prior to each s'raddha as respectively appointed. (226-227).

It has been stated that 'uneven should be for a Pitr (s'rāddha);

15 for an occasion when at a Parvāṇa s'râddha as part of it for the Vais'vadeva even an odd number occurs, the Author begins this

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 228.

Two for the Daiva (facing) the east, three for the Pitriya (facing) the north, or one only for each. For the line of the maternal grandfather also in the same way, or for the Visvedeva may be common. (228).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Dwau daiveti, two for the Daiva &c., i.e. in the Daiva or Vis've'deva two Brâḥmaṇas facing the east should be seated. Lest it may be thought that 'for the Pitr or manes uneven is an invariable number the Author states a special rule, trayaḥ pitrye etc, three far the Pitriya; pitrye, for the Pitryas i.e. at the places for the father and the rest; traya udanmukhâḥ, three should be facing the north.

The author mentions an alternative rule ekaikameva va, 30 or one only for each. For the Vaisvadeva and for the Pitriya also one may seat one each. When it is possible, the optional rule should be observed.

^{1.} वृत्ती—is a seat for a yogi, or an ascetic.

^{2.} पंक्तिपावन:—i. e. who on account of his learning, character and conduct has acquired high religious merit which has the capacity for purifying the whole company.

15

20

Mátāmahânâmapyevam, for the line of the maternal grand-father also in the same way, i.e. at the S'râddha the invitation &c. two in the Daiva facing the east, three in the Pitriya facing the North or one only for each &c., this option should be observed in the same way as in the S'rāddha for the paternal ancestors.

In the $S'r\hat{a}ddha$ for the paternal ancestors, and in the $S'r\bar{a}ddha$ for the maternal ancestors, the Vis'vedeva worship may be performed separately or inclusively¹.

"The word tantra denotes inclusion."

When, however, two Brâhmanas only are available, then in 10 Vais'vadeva worship a vessel may be assigned, while for the other two one Brāhmana each may be appointed, as says Vasiastha: 2.

"If one feeds a single Brâḥmaṇa at a S'ràddha how can the oblation to the gods (Daiva) be made there? One should take out a portion of the entire food prepared for the principal s'ràddha in a vessel, and having placed it in the abode of God, thereafter he should proceed with the S'ràddha. He may either offer that food in the fire or give it (as alms) to a celibate student." (228).

Viramitrodaya.

While further expounding what has already been said³ viz. "For the Daiva even &c." in the light of the text⁴. "One should not attempt an expansion," the Author mentions options for a still smaller number also

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 228

Daire, 'for the Vaisvadeva Sraddha', for that one, one should appoint dwau 'two', prah' in the East,' i. e. facing the east. Pitrye 'for the paternal' i. e. at the S'raddha for the father, i. e. the three paternal ancestors, one for each, and thus all together three Brahmanas. Udak, 'in the north' i. e. facing the North should be appointed. Or for one i. e. for the Daiva one, and for the three paternal ancestors viz. the father and the rest, also one. Matamahanam, 'of the maternal ^{1.} तंत्रेण.

^{2.} Ch. VIII. 30-31.

^{3.} Verse 227 above.

^{4.} Manu Ch. III. 125.

ancestors' i. e, of the three ancestors with the maternal grand-father and the rest, for the S'raddha for the three; for the Daiva of that, thus two: and there one for each one, thus three, or for their Viśvedeva S'raddha one, and for these all together one. This is the meaning.

Tantram wa, 'or by a common offering, i. e. the invitation for the Brahman in connection with the Vais'vadeva may be in common. For the S'raddha intended for the three, viz. the father and the rest, one alone; thus for the Viśvedeva S'raddha one Brahmana only, for the S'raddha for the three commencing with father, one, also for the S'raddha for the three maternal ancestors beginning with the maternal grand-father and the 10 rest, one only. This, as what has already been stated, should be understood in this alternative also.

Here As valayana!: "One only for each one". The meaning is that for each S'raddha one Brahmana for each.

Here these are the alternatives: -- (1) In connection with the 15 S'iâddha for the father and the rest, at the Vis'vedeva S'râddha two, as also in connection with the maternal grand-father and the rest, for a Vis'v deva S'râddha, two; for the father and the rest, one each, so also for the three beginning with the maternal grand-father and the rest, one for each, thus ten Brahmanas. (2) When this is not possible, for each s'raddha one each, thus eight Brâhmanas, as stated by A's'valâyana. (3) When this is not possible, in connection with the father and the rest, for the Vis'vedeva s'raddha, one, in connection with the maternal grand-father and the rest, for the Vis'vedeva s'raddha one, for the s'raddha for the three beginning with the father and the rest, one, and also for the s'raddha 25 for the three beginning with the maternal grandfather and the rest, one, thus four Brahmanas. (4) Even when this also is impossible, for the two Vis'vedeva s'râddhas one, and for the two s'râdhas viz. for the paternal ancestors (and the maternal ancestors), one for each, thus three Brahmanas. (5) When, however, these four alternatives are impossible, 30 for the śrâddha for the six ancestors one Brahmana, and for the Daiva no Brahmana. This is the meaning of the word api, 'even'. As says S'ankhah: "Or, one may even feed one Brahmana who can purify the company with his presence; having offered the naivedya for the gods, afterwards it should be made over to him." 'Having offered the Naivedya' i. e. having offered food with a mental decision. In this alternative in regard to the food set apart for the Vis'vedevas—"One may throw the food into the fire, or may give it to a celibate student." thus, there is this rule of appropriation under a text. Here the word wa, or', has been used to indicate indifference, thus even throwing into the water is also approved.

10

15

20

Thus by indicating incapacity for the Viśvedava S'rāddha, when even one Brāḥmaṇa who is a proper recipient cannot be found, even for the Pitr S'rāddha there may he incompetency, and by a parity of reasoning, the text of Likhita may also have a general force under the maxim of universal application. Otherwise, it should be remembered that there would be the possibility of the fault of an invisibility of result.

In the expression 'or even one', the word eva, 'even', in conformity with the text, 'one should not attempt expansion', if an apprehension as to the fault of expansion be felt, this excludes that. If there is no fear of any objection to expansion, then, however, even an excess of the Brâhmanas would be within the rule. For each one, two, or also three for each one, under the rule² of A's'valâyana. 'In an increase lies the accession of the resulting fruits.''

Here by stating that "the Vaiśvadevika may be in common,' the oneness of the S'raddka for the Pitrs &c. is clearly deducible; for it should be remembered that when there are separate performances, the rule of commonness would not be possible. (228).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 229.

Having given a hand-wash, and for sitting, the Kus'as also, one should invoke with their permission obtained, with the Rk^* visvedevâsah. 229.

Mitâksharâ:—After this, for the purpose of the vais'vadeva worship, after giving water into the hand of the Brâhmaṇas, and giving them Kus'a-seats too, doubled and joined together with their corners bent and in a place facing the south, he should ask the Brâhmaṇas'

^{1.} Vasistha. Ch. VIII. 31.

^{2.} अहमार्थनापत्ति: The general rule is that as far as possible दृष्टार्थs should be resorted to and अहमार्थs should be avoided.

^{3.} Somewhat of the rule 'the more the merrier'. The greater the number of Brahmanas, the more exalted the result.

^{4.} R. V. II. VIII. 9. & IV. VIII. 13. The full Rk is as follows:—
क्षि देवासुऽआर्गत श्रृणुतामऽडम्हर्व । एद्विहिर्निषीदत ।। permission by saying 'I will invoke the Vis'vedevas.' 'Do invoke:' thus permitted, he should then invoke them (gods) by the Rk beginning with "Vis'vedevâsa âgata &c." and with the S'mârta hymn beginning with Âgachchhantu mahābhâgâ &c."—"May the illustrious come" (the Vis'vedevas together with the Paitrkas &c.).

This should be done with the sacred thread on the breast, or on the left shoulder. Because of the special text²: "Then having done apasavya circumambulating the Pitrs by the Left." (229).

Viramitrodaya.

After the seating (of the Brahmanas) as stated before the Author states the part next in order in the performance of the S'râddha, ending with the text the night together with the Brahmanas."

Yâjñavalkya Verse 229.

Pådaprakshålanam5 'foot-wash' as stated in the text of Devala viz. "Then, to those who had returned after bathing, after standing up 15 near them with folded hands, water for the feet, as also water for the sipping, one should offer in respective order. ", having offered the foot-wash to a respectable Brahmana, he should offer to the Brahmana vishtarartham, 'for his seat', i. e. as a cover over the seat such as the brsic &c. intended for his being seated at the S'raddha; by the word 20 api, 'also' is indicated that 'having offered', datva, i.e. spread the Kuśa grass for the feet. The plural number in ' kusan' has the idea of these being for a seat; as says Devala :-- "Those, moreover, of the Brahmanas who have been invited for the Viśvedeva, for these, seats containing darbhas doubled and turned towards the east, and for those for the 25 Pitrs, turned towards the south with their ends to the south of a darbha and sprinkled with the sesamum water. Some, however, explain as one should scatter up the Kuśa grass as seats for the Viśvedevas and Pitrs. In their opinion also, the Gâyatri japa and such other acts are included as preliminary procedure to that. 30

Anujato, 'with (their) permission' i. e. by the Viśvedeva Brahmana when asked. 'Shall I invoke the Vis'edevas?' and permitted

^{1.} The full मन्त्र is आगच्छन्तु महाभागा विश्वेदेवाः सपैत्रिकाः। येऽत्र विहिताः श्राद्धे सावधाना भवन्तु ते ॥

^{2.} Verse 232.

^{3.} Verse 226

^{4.} Verse 249

^{5.} Viramitrodaya reads in पाद्मक्षालन for पाणिप्रशालन in the Mitáksharâ.

^{6.} ब्रह्म-is a seat for a yogi.

25

by him with the words 'yes, do invoke', with the Rh, Viśvedevasa agata, "Oh Viśvedasas do please come &c." he should invoke the Viśvedevas. So also Kātyāyana: "After having scattered the darbhas over the seats, with the question 'shall I invoke the Viśvedas?" and the permission with the words 'do invoke', he should invoke with the hymn' Oh Vis'vedas do please come', and spread &c." Here, the procedure stated somewhere in some other Smrtis, although not mentioned here, should be understood to be followed under the rule in the maxim' of the Sarvaśakhadhikarana. It should be understood that the Author of the work has not however noted it here on account of the fact that the procedural details of the S'raddha are universally too well known. (229)

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 230-231 (1).

Having strewn with barley and in a vessel containing the pavitraka, with the mantra $S'anno\ devi$ having poured water, with the mantra $Yavositi^3$, barley grains also, (230).

With the mantra $Y_{\bar{a}}$ divyá &c., in their hands one should pour down arghya. (231) (1).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Then, for the Vis'vedevas, on the ground near the Brāḥmaṇa yavairanvavakīrya, having strewn barley, by circumambulating by the right, thereafter, bhâjane, in a vessel, of metal &c. containing pavitras, sapavitrake, i. e. with a pair of Kus'a blades, thrown in with the recitation of the Rk. S'annodevîrabhiṣṭaye &c, poured water, and similarly with the mantra "yavosi dhânyarajo vâ &c." yavân, barley grains, then having thrown in perfumes and flowers, thereafter in the hands of the Brâḥmaṇas covered with pavitra* of the arghya

- 1. See Jaimini II. IV. 8-32
- R. No. VII. & VI. 5. The full mantra is as under— इांनी देशिरभीष्ट्ये आपो भवन्तु पीतर्ये । श्रंयोर्भिस्नवन्तु नः ॥
- 3. The full mantra is as under—
 यवोऽसि धान्यराजो वा वारुणो मधुसँगुतः । निर्णोदः सर्वपापानां पवित्रमृषिभिः स्मृतस् ॥
- 4. प्रित्र or प्रित्रक is prepared of a pair of darbha grass put together twisted and turned toward the ends into a knot. The body is either left straight as in अध्योपित्र प्रित्र तिचाय, or is turned and formed into a ring to be worn at the performance, as in प्रित्र प्राणि:

5. The vessel in which the arghya is prepared and kept for being offered to the Devas and the Pitrs.

vessel, and reciting the mantras "yā divyâ āpaḥ payasâ" &c., and with the words 'Vis'vedeva idam vo arghyam' he should pour arghya water. [230-231 (1)].

* Page 67. Yâjñavalkya, Verses (231)(2), (232).

Having given water, perfumes, flower-garlands, and the offer of incense along with the lamp; (231) (2).

So also the gift of a covering garment and water for washing the hand, then having done apasavya, circumambulating the Pitrs by the left. (292).

Mitâksharâ.—Now, karasauchârthamudakam dattwā, having given water for washing the hands, one should in their proper order offer perfumes and flowers, incense and a lamp; tathââchchhâdanadânam cha, so also the gift of a covering garment.

In regard to the perfumes, &c., the special rule mentioned in other Smrtis may be observed:—

"Sandal, saffron, camphor, agaru, or Padmaka wood, for ointment" have been stated by Vishņu.²

As to flowers, "For a S'rāddha the flowers of Jâti," Mallikà, white Yûthikà are praised, all flowers growing in water and champaka 20 flower", have been mentioned.

(Flowers) to be avoided also: "Those having nasty odours, or no odour at all, or those that grow on the road side; and all flowers that have blood-red colour, should be discarded."

Not those grown on thorny plants. Even though grown on 25 non-thorny plants, that which is white and sweet-smelling should be given, not red; even of the non-red, the saffron flower and the one growing in water should be given.

Regarding incense, a special rule has been stated by Vishņu⁴

^{1.} Taittiriya Br. II. VII. 15.

या द्विया आपः पर्यसा संबभूदुः । या अंतरिक्ष उन पार्थिवीयीः । तास्रो त्वा सर्वासाङ्करचा अभिविचामि वर्चसः ।

^{2.} Oh. LXXIX. II.

^{3.} जाती, मल्लिका, श्रेतायूथिका are all varieties of jasmine.

^{4.} Ch. LXXIX, 9-10. In the विष्णुरमृति the reading is जीवजं for प्राण्यजं।

"One must not give limbs of animals for incense. One should give bellium mixed with clarified butter, honey and sandal, aloe or wood, deodár, sarala and the like."

For the lamp a special rule has been mentioned by S'ankha:—

"With clarified butter the lamp should be given, or again with sesamum oil; lamp prepared with fat or marrow, one should carefully avoid." The covering garment also "white, new, not worn out, and with both ends intact", should be given". All this ceremonial, part of the Vais'vadeva worship, one should perform facing the north; aud part for the Pitriya, one should perform facing the south. As says Vriddha Sâtátapa:—"With his face towards the North, to the Gods, and for the Pitrs, facing the South. In Parvaṇa S'râddha all ceremonies must be preceded by those for the Gods, according to rules." (231, 232)

Viramitrodaya.

Then, after the invocation, having strewn with barley the ground intended for the Devaśrāddha, and after having poured milk and water with the recitation of the Rk 'Sanno devi &c'., in the pot known as the arghya vessel containing the pavitraka and having the pavitra referred to before, with the yajus 'Yavosi &c.,' one should scatter barley. By the use of the word tatha, 'also similarly,' he should pour in sandal paste, and flowers, in accordance with the text of the Brahmapurana viz., "With arghyas, perfumes, and flowers, these should be worshipped with attention" Having poured another water on the hands of the Brahmanas with the hymn 'Ya divya apah payasa &c. the arghya prepared of milk as stated before vinikshipet, one should discharge, i.e. should offer; that has been said by Kâtyâyana: "To each one, he offers the arghya upon the hands having the pavitra on with the hymn, 'ya divya apah' and with the words 'this is the arghya for you."

Gandheti, 'perfume &c.', the context is that the five things with the perfume and the rest, one should throw. Instead of dhapam wastram, where the reading is Dhapadanam, it should be supplemented by the words 'should be made.' Sadipakam, 'together with the lamp' is adjectival of 'perfumes and flowers'.

Here, moreover, on account of the text of Kâtyâyana: "and the offer of perfumes, flowers, and also clothes", and from the text: 'clothes

15

10

5

...

:1

30

afterwards, perfumes first", the mention of clothes should be understood to be afterwards. This, moreover, is indicative as part of the performance after the offering of cooked food. Here although the period has been stated by Kâtyâyana and others to be after the main act, still here, that period is after the particular portion has a reference to the performance of the Sapindana, and thus there is no contradiction. "The Sapindīkaraņa S'rāddha should be offered preceded by that for the Gods," thus S'âtâtapa having stated with a view to point out the period as following the special part in accordance with the Maxim' of "the general and special." In the Vaijâwâpa Grhya moreover even clearly has been stated to be after the special part in a Sapindì-karaṇa S'râddha. (230, 231, 232 (1).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 233.

Having given doubled kus'a blades, with the Rk 15 $us'antastwà^2$, having ivoked the Pitrs, with their permission he should then repeat $\hat{A}y\bar{a}ntu$ nah. (233).

Mitâkṣharâ—Tato, then, i.e., after the Vais'vadeva part (of the S'ràddha) having placed the sacred thread apasavya, on the side other than the right, i.e., wearing it in the manner called prāchīnàvita.³

Here by saying 'then' the author here indicates the sequence of the (several) parts of the ceremony.

For the three ancestors, viz, the father and the rest, an uneven number of kus'a blades, double-folded and circumambulating inversely to the right and having given, dattwâ, these for their seats preceded by (libation of) water, he should again pour water, vide the text of As'valâyana⁵: "Having given water, having

^{1.} पञ्चतिविञ्चतिन्याय—A general rule or process is stated which is called प्रकृति, the deviations from it are called विङ्गति.

^{2.} R. V. VII VI. 22. The full Rk is as follows— उद्यानस्वानिधीमाह्यदांन: सामेधीमाहि । उद्यान्द्रज्ञानऽआवह पितृन्हविषेऽअत्तेव ।

^{3.} निवीती, प्राचीनावीती and उपवीती—See above page 116 ll: 10-15; also pp. 113-115.

^{4.} काण्डानुसमय—The serial order in sequence of the parts of the Śrâddha ceremony, viz. the worship of the विभेदेवड, of the Pitrs &c.. काण्ड is a portion. अनुसमय the sequence in order.

^{5.} Grhya Sûtras IV. VII. 5-7.

10

25

30

given double-folded darbha blades for a seat and having again given water ".

Moreover, this giving of water, in the beginning, and in the end, both at the Vais'vadeva and the Pitriya portion, is to be understood as ordaining the observance at each part of the performance.

"Now, shall I invoke the father, grandfather and great grandfather?" thus having asked permission of the Brāḥmaṇas and "do invoke", thus being permitted by them, with the Rk. "Us'antastvā nidhîmahi &c," one should invoke the father and the rest and with the mantra "Âyantu naḥ Pitaraḥ, &c." he should honour them standing by them. (233).

Yājñavalkya, 232(2)-233.

Tato 'thereafter', i.e., after the worship of the Devas, apasavyam having put the sacred thread to the left i.e., prâchinâvitam, the Kuśa grass in pairs and turned twice round, one should offer i.e. give as seats for the pitrs in an inverse ambulatory manner by the left turn, and after asking permission of the Pitr Brâhmana, 'may I invoke the Pitrs', and being permitted by him with the words 'yes, do invoke', the performer of the Śrâddha with the Rk Uśantastvâ nidhīmahi etc., should invoke the Pitrs; and Tatah, 'thereafter', i.e. after the scattering of the sesamum, in remembrance of what is in the mind, one should repeat the mantra Âyantu nah pitarah etc.', (232(2)-233).

Yájňavalkya, Verses 234-235.

With the mantra 'apahatâ' having scattered sesamum all round, acts to be performed with barley should be performed with sesamum; one should perform the arghya &c. as before. (234).

Having given the arghya and having collected their drippings in a vessel in accordance with the ordained rule, with the mantra Piṭrbhyaḥ Sthânamasi he turns the vessel downwards. (235).

^{1.} The full text is आयन्तु नः पितरः सोम्यासे अग्निष्वाचाः पथिमिर्देवयानैः

^{2.} The Mitakshara reads 'कुर्याद्द्योदि पूर्ववत्', while the Viramitrodaya reading is द्याद्द्योदि पूर्ववत् .

15

25

Mitâksharâ:—Yawârthâ, acts to be performed with barley, i. e. performances which could be accomplished by the use of barley, such as the scattering down and the like, with sesamum, tilaih, should be performed. Then he should repeat as before viz. the putting up of the arghya vessel and ending with covering it. In regard to that this is the special rule.

"The sesamums should be scattered around the Brâhmaṇas from the left side beginning with the mantra? "Apahatâ rakṣhānsi &c.," and in three vessels of silver &c., within which are thrown kûrchas³made of uneven number of Kus'a blades with the mantra

* Page 68. "S'annodevî &c." he should pour water with the mantra4 "Tilosi Soma devatyah, &c.", one should throw sesamum, flowers, and sandal, and placing the arghya vessels before the Brahmanas with the words 'Svadhà Arghyah', and repeating the mantra "Yà divyâ," &c." at the end, one should pour the arghya water into the hands of the Brähmanas saying "—" Father! this arghya is for you; Grandfather! this arghya is for you; Greatgrandfather! this arghya is for you."

Under the text, one for each, or for both, in the alternative course also, three vessels should be placed. (234)

Having thus given the arghya, teṣhām arghyāṇám sāmsraván, of those arghyas the drippings, i.e., the arghya waters that have dropped from the hands of the Brāḥmaṇas, should be collected in the vessel for Pitṛs, and having placed on the ground a kus'a pillar with the ends towards the south with the mantra,

^{1.} विशेष:—Special, distinguishing it from the rule stated before.

^{2.} The full mantra is as follows:—अवहता असुरा रक्षांस वेदिषतः "Scattered away be the Asuras and the Rakshas, the enemies of the gods'.

^{3.} $\frac{2}{8}$ —of the Darbha grass. A sort of a sprinkling rod prepared by tying together blades of $Ku\dot{s}a$ grass and fastening them at the end with a knot to hold other substances such as the $Tulas\bar{s}$, $m\hat{a}k\dot{a}$, &c.

^{4.} तिलोऽसि सोमदेवत्यो गोसवे देवनिर्मितः । प्रत्तः स्वधया पितृनिमाँ होकान् प्रीणयाहि स्वधा नमः । see A'svalayana Gr. Satra IV. VII. 8.

^{5.} या दिव्या आप: see note above on p.

^{6. &#}x27;पितः इदं ने अध्ये स्वधा' 'पितामह—इदं ने अध्ये स्वधा ' &c.

^{7.} See Verse 228 above p.

^{8.} कुश्तम्ब.—as the pedastal seat.

^{9.} You are the resting place for the manes.

15

30

"Pitrbhyah sthånamasi", he should hold over it that vessel, nyubjam, turned downwards, and he should place over it the arghya vessel and the pavitras. Thereafter one should offer perfumes, flowers, incense, lights, commencing with the formulas "Father, this perfume is for you. Father, this flower is for you, etc." (234-235).

Viramitrodaya.

Daire, 'for the Daira Śrâddha', those acts which are accomplished with barley, should be performed with sesamums. Arghyâdi tu purvavat, 'the arghyas etc, however, as before,' i. e, after the manner of the devaśrâddha, one should offer. By the use of the word âdi, 'and like others,' are included even those things to be offered at the latter end, such as perfumes etc. If the reading be Kuryât, 'should perform', the meaning of arghyâdi, 'arghya etc.' is to be taken as commencing with the offer of the arghya and ending with 'the covering.' By the use of the word tu 'however', is this distinguished from the mantra 'Yavositi' etc.. Kâtyâyana having prescribed a different mantra for a Pitrya Śrâddha viz. 'Tilositi' with this direction, 'he shall offer tilas'. (234).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions a special rule of procedure in regard to the 20 arghya for the Pitrs

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 235.

Tesham, 'to those', i.e., to the Pitrs, arghyam datwa, 'having offered the arghya, sansravan, 'the drippings', i.e. the residual waters from the arghya, therefore also from the vessels of the two grand-parents, patre, 'in the vessel', i.e., in the vessel for the Pitrs, vidhanatah, 'in accordance with the ordained rules', in the order of the commencement, Krtwa, 'having collected' i.e., poured with the mantra "pitrbhyah sthanamasi, 'you are the seat for the Pitrs', pitrpatram, 'the vessel for the pitrs' one turns down i.e., one should turn downwords, nyubjam. This is the meaning. Similarly, also in the reading Prchchhati, 'asks', should be understood as being in the potential mood. By the use of the word adhah, 'downwards,' it is established, over the vessel for the father, the vessel for the grandfather, and over it, the vessel for the greatgrandfather, is to be turned down. In the Brahmapurana: "Having placed in the Pitr vessel, thereafter turned downwards, one should place it towards the North". Yama: "First the vessel for the father, on it one should place that for the grandfather, and thereon having placed the one for the great-grandfather, one should not lift up, nor should one repeat" (235).

11

20

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 236-37.

One desirous of offering in the fire, having taken up food flowing with ghee, asks, and on being permitted with the words 'Do offer', after having offered an oblation into the fire as in Pitr-yajña, (236).

The residue from the oblations, however, he should with attention place into vessels procured according to means, particularly in those of silver. (237).

Mitâksharâ:—Thereafter, desirous of offering in the fire, Agnau karishyan, having taken up food, annamâdâya, ghṛta-plutam, flowing, i. e., annointed with ghee, one should ask the Brâḥmaṇas, "I will offer in the fire". The use of the word ghee is with a view to exclude pulses, vegetables, pot=herbs, &c.

Then being permitted by them with the words "do offer," placing the sacred thread on the right shoulder, and after properly preparing³ the fire and taking up the food with the ladle, one should make oblations into the fire in accordance with proper sacrificial procedure for oblations with the words: 'Somāya pitṛmate swadhā namaḥ; Agnaye Kavyawāhanāya swadhā namaḥ".

"To some with the Pitrs, this food with my respects. To Agni the Kavyavahana, this food with respects".

^{1.} अभोकरण—is a special portion of a Śrâddha performance. A Śrâddha may be, and is often performed, in two ways, either with Pindadâna, or without it, in which case it is called Brahmārpaṇa. When the Śrâddha is offered with the accompaniment of the Pindadâna, the fire is worshipped. This fire is called कन्यवाहन, as distinguished from हन्यवाहन the fire invoked at the daily sacrifices of the householder. In this कन्यवाहन fire, the oblations are offered thus: सोमाय पितृमने स्वधा नम:, अभये कन्यवाहनाय स्वधा नम: &c. This is called the अभोकरण.

^{2.} i.e. asks the permission of the Brâhmanas, as in the case of the Viśvedeva worship.

^{3.} उपसमाधाय—काष्ठपक्षेपणपदीपनम्रपसमाधानम्—emblazing the fire by adding fuel. Bålam. p. 596 1. 27.

10

15

20

25

Thus having offered oblations, according to the ritual of the Pinda pitry ijña, and having thrown the mekshana, one should place the hutas esha, residue from the oblations, in vessels for the father &c. procured according to means, yathâlâbhopapanneshu, avoiding earthen vessels, but particularly in silver ones; but not in the Vais vadeva vessels, with attention, samâhitah, with the mind not diverted anywhere else.

Here, although it has been stated generally 'in the fire', still in the case of one who has consecrated the fire and has established all the five completely, the aupâsana³ fire being non-existent, in regard to the Pàrvaṇa S'rāddha which is part of the Pindapitryajāa 'sacrifice of oblations to the manes', for which the Dakṣhiṇa fire is prescribed, and that fire being available, the oblation should be offered in the Dakṣ'hiṇa fire, this being a case of an exception to the rule⁴ 'a Smarta performance in the nuptial fire'. As also says Márkaṇḍeya: 'One who has consecrated the fire may, however, offer oblations into the Dakṣhiṇa Fire with care; while one who has not kept the sacred fire should offer in the Aupâsana Fire; or in the absence of fire, to the twice-born, or in water.'

Where, however, fire is only half consecrated, in that case as the aupâsana fire is available, whether one who has consecrated the fire áhitâgnih, or even one who has not, anâhitâgnih, the agnaukarana oblation is in the aupāsana fire only.

So also in the three rites of anvashtakā, &c., and owing to the extended application of the ceremonial observances of the Pinda

2. मेञ्चण—Blades of Kus'a grass used for encircling the fingers at the time of offering the oblation.

4. See above verse 97 p. 267.

^{1.} These are the oblations offered to the fire in the agnaukarana. $Sw\hat{a}h\hat{a}$ and $Swadh\hat{a}$ are described as the two wives of Agni, the Fire God; $Swadh\hat{a}$ being invoked at the $\dot{s}r\hat{a}ddha$, and $Sw\hat{a}h\hat{a}$ at other ceremonies.

^{3.} ओपासनाग्नि:—also called प्ह्यामि, or the householder's fire, kindled at the wedding and kept permanently. दक्षिणानि also called अन्वाहार्यपचन is the southern fire, the sacred fire placed southwards, one of the three fires.

^{5.} अर्धाधानपक्षे—as explained by Laugakshi cited by Balambhatta thus, "अर्धाधानं स्पृतं श्रीतस्मार्ताम्योस्तु पृथकृतिः । सर्वाधानं तयोरैक्यकृतिः पूर्वयुगाश्रिता " ॥ इति स्नातको विद्धरे वीरा वनस्थवम्हचारिणः । सर्वाधानेन नष्टाग्निः पाणौ होमं करोति तु ॥ इति- pitryajña, in the four rites such as the Kâmya and the rest, the homa is to be made only on the hand of the Bráḥmaṇas, as says the revered Gṛḥya Kâra:

"The Anvaṣhṭakya, the Pûrvedyu, every month, and the Pârvaṇa S'râddha, the Kàmya, the Abhyudaya, the S'râddha on the Aṣhṭamī, and the eighth is the Ekoddiṣhṭa S'râddha. In the first four of these, for those who have maintained the fire, the oblation is ordained to be in the Fire; and it should be in the hands of the Pitrya Bráhmaṇa in the latter four."

The meaning of this:-

"On the eighth days of the four latter fortnights of the Hemanta and the S'is'ira are Aṣhṭakas celebrated." Thus have the aṣḥṭākas been ordained.

There, what is performed on the ninth day, is called Anvashtakya; that which is performed on the seventh day, is 15 Purvedyu, on the preceding day; Every month, in the dark fortnight, on the fifth or any other following day, that which has been ordained under an extended application of the Anvashtkya, and on the amâwàsyà day that which is ordained after the pinda pitryajña is Pârvanam. In connection with a desire for the heaven, that which 20 is ordained to be performed in krttikâ and the like other constellations is Kâmya; as also that which is ordained to be performed on occassions of prosperity, abhyudayeshu, such as e.g., the birth of a son, &c., or the consecration of a tank, a pleasure garden, or the image of a Deity. On the Ashtami, the same as has been ordained as 25 Ashtakû. Ekoddishta, here by the word Ekoddishta, sapindikarana is indicated, as in the performance of that, Ekoddishta also occurs. Not merely of the Párvana, as in the Ekoddishta by itself that is absent.

Or, according to the opinion of Grhya Bhashyakara it 30 may mean even direct Ekoddishta, as in the direct Ekoddishta also occurs the offering of oblation on the hand, it is ekoddishta itself.

Of these eight, in the first four, in the case of one who has maintained the Fire, the oblation is to be in the Fire. In the latter four,

^{1.} A'śvalâyana Gr. Sûtra II. 4-1. See p. 450 above.

10

15

20

30

the homa is offered on the hand of the Pitrya Bràḥmaṇa. Of a person who has not maintained the sacred fire, under the * Page 69. rule that for a twice-born whose father is dead the Pārvaṇa is nitya, of such a one also the oblation is on the hand alone. Vide the text:—

"The twice-born whose father being dead, and who does not offer S'râddha every month on the waning of the moon, that one becomes liable for a Prayas'chitta."

Similarly in Kâmya, Âbhyudayīka, Aṣhṭakâ and Ekkoddiṣhṭa, on hand also, for "In the absence of the fire, on the hand of the Brahmaṇa even, one may offer" as has been stated by Manu!

Of that which is offered on the hand, separate eating is prohibited. As says the revered author of Gṛḥya Sūtras:—"Food offered on the palm of the hand, the unwise eat separately; the manes are not satisfied thereby, and they do not get the remaining food. That (therefore) which has been offered on the hand, as also that which is otherwise presented, all that should be eaten by making it into one, no separation is allowed." (236, 237).

Viramitrodaya.

Ghrtaplutam, 'flowing with ghee' i.e. besmeared with ghee; annam âdâya' having taken the food' i.e. taken out of the food prepared for the Śráldha; "I will perform in the fire", thus he asks the Bráhmana for the Pitr. Then, 'Do perform', thus being permitted by the Bráhmana, pitr yajñarat, 'as in pitryajña, i.e. as in the pinḍapitryajña, agnau hutwâ, after having offered an oblation, 'into the fire,' hutaśesham annam, 'the food remaining as the residue from the oblation,' bhâjaneshu, 'in the vessels,' samâhitaḥ, 'with attention,' i.e. with unperturbed mind, pradadyât, 'one should place', i.e. one should pour.

The Author discriminates the versels, yatheti, 'according &c.' Yathalabham, 'procured according to means', upapanneshu, 'available' i. e. procured, višeshatah. 'particularly,' where a high resulting fruit is desired, especially raupyeshu, 'in those of silver,' i. e. in those made of silver.

Agnau, 'in the fire,' this is in regard to where it is with fire with a wish to encircle the food. For one without fire, however, the 35 oblation is in the palm of the Brahmana's hand, vide the text. "In the absence of the Fire, however, in the palm of the hand of the Brahmana or even in the water." By the use of the word, tu, 'however' in the reading śrtaśeshu and going with it even in the absence of Fire the oblation in the vessel has been separately noted. (236-237).

^{1.} Ch. III. 212.

15

20

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 238.

Having placed the food, and with the mantra 'The earth is the vessel' having consecrated it, with the Rk 'Idam Vishnuh &c.' one should in the food cause the thumb of the Brahmana to enter. (238).

Mitakshara:-Annam, food, consisting of boiled rice, broth, milk pudding, clarified butter &c., dattwâ, having placed, in the plates with the mantra The offering of Prthiwi te patram, 'the earth is thy vessel', the food. pâtrâbhimantranam krtwâ, having conse-With the Rk. Idam Vishnur' vichakrame, crated the plates. all this Vishnu strode, anne dwijangushtham niwesayet, &c. in the food one should cause the thumb of the Brāhmana to enter. In so doing, in the Vais'vadeva portion with the sacred thread on his left shoulder (yajñopaviti), with the mantra "O Visnu guard the havya";" as to the food in the pitrya portion, he should place the sacred thread on his right shoulder, prâchīnāvīti, with the mantra "O Viṣṇu protect the kavya food." Since in the Smṛti of Manu has been stated 'O Viṣṇu, protect thou the havya and kavya' should one repeat only.

The full texts वृथिवी ते पात्रं द्याःरिपधानं ब्रह्मणस्त्वाप्यखेळ्होमि स्वाहा ब्राह्मणानां त्वा-विद्यावतां प्राणापानर्योळ्होग्याक्षितमिस मोमेक्षेष्ठाः अत्राप्ताध्मिन्लोके.

^{2.} The Rk is इदं विष्णु विचक्रमे बेधा निद्धे पदम् । समूहमस्य पां हरे । ऋकसं ९-२-७

^{3.} Havya and Kavya—both mean oblations. Havya is used in reference to oblations offered on all occasions other than of a Śráddha, at which the oblations offered are called Kavya. Corresponding to these also, the fire which is supposed to be the medium for conveying these offerings is designated and invoked as हच्याहन—the carrier of the havyas on all ordinary occasions, while at a Śráddha he is invoked as क्रव्यवाहन the transmitter of the kavya offerings.

Viramitrodava.

Annam, 'food', even by adding to the residue from the oblation so as to make it adequate for the satisfaction of a man, datwa 'having placed', in the plates and encircling it, with the mantra, prthiwite patram, 'the earth is thy vessel', patrasya, 'of the plate' i.e, of the food plate, abhimantranam krtwa, 'after having performed the consecration', in the circumscribed food; of the twice-born, i.e., of the Brahmani invited for the S'raddha, the thumb with the rk, idam vishnur, 'this the Vishnu, etc.' niveśayet, 'one should cause to enter.'

Hereafter, the distribution of food will be stated in another connection under the text. "Food agreeable and sacrificial" its non-mention here, and its mention in connection with the encircling of the food desirable for the Brahmanas only is with a view to brevity of composition.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 239.

With the Vyâḥṛtis the Gâyatrī, and the three Rks Madhuvâtâ, &c., having silently recited, 'as you please' so should be addressed, and they also should eat with speech controlled. (239).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Thereafter, "to all the Devas this food which has been encircled and also is being presented let it be to their satisfaction," thus with barley-water, having to the Daiva Bráḥmaṇa announced and similarly 'to the father,' 'of such a gotra' and 'of such a name', this food which has been encircled and which is being presented let it be to his satisfaction, with the sesamum water having announced to the Brâḥmaṇa at the father's seat, and similarly, to the grandfather, and the great grandfather also, having announced, and afterwards having given the aposāna water with the Gáyatri, together with the Vyâḥṛtis already mentioned before and the three. Rks beginning with ^{1.} See further on Verse 240.

^{2.} विशेश्यो देवेश्यः इदमनं परिविद्धं परिवेक्ष्यमाणं चातृप्तेः स्वाहा. Thus is the food offered indicated to the Brahmanas at the Visvedeva seats.

^{3.} See Verse 23 above p. 88.

^{4.} The three Rks occur both in the Rgveda (1-6-18) as well as in the Yajurveda; these are:—

⁽१) मधु वार्ता ऋतायते मधु क्षरन्ति सिन्धवः । माध्वीनः सुन्त्वेषधीः ।

⁽२) मधु नक्तुमुनोषसो मधुमत्पार्थिन्ररजः। मधु द्यौरस्तु नः पिता। ⁽३) मधुमान्नो वनस्पतिर्मधुमाश्अस्तु सूर्यः । माध्वीर्गानो भवन्तु नः ।

Madhuvàtâ &c., and repeating thrice "Madhu", "Madhu", "Madhu", one should then address the words yathâ sukham jushadhvam, be plesed to eat at your pleasure, vide this text of Pâraskara and others. "After repeating the sankalpa and to the Pitrs and the Devas, the Savitri and the recital containing the Madhu Rks having communicated the food at the s'râddha, and offered the apos'ana, and the request to eat (at pleasure) thereafter the meals similarly, the Gâyatri three times or once, one should repeat together with the vyâhrtis; so also the three Rks beginning with Mdhuvātâ and three times the word Madhu.

Bhunjīranstepi, vâgyatāḥ they also should eat with speech controlled, those Braḥmaṇas also 'with speech-controlled i. e. in silence, should eat. (239).

Viramitrodaya.

Together with the three vyahrtis, the savitri Rh; madhu wata, &c., the three rks, having repeated, 'at your pleasure, may you eat', thus addressing the Brahmanas, the performer of the S'raddha should repeat. Those Brahmanas also vagyata, 'controlled in speech', i.e., in silence, bhunjiran, 'should eat'. By the use of the word api, 'also', are included the avoidance of laughter and the like. Since Devala has stated: "While yet laughing, one who eats, that one does not carry satisfaction to the Pitrs." (239).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 240.

Food which is agreeable and sacrificial, one should offer without anger, and without haste, to the satisfaction, however; all the while silently, one should recite sacred texts, and also the former prayer (240),

Mitâkṣharâ.—Annam, food, of five sorts viz. consisting of that which may be consumed, eaten, licked, sucked and drunk; ishṭam, agreeable, that which to the Brahmana, or to the deceased, or to the host is agreeable; havishyam, sacrificial, fit to be offered as an oblation at a S'râddha, viz. "Paddy rice, fine rice, barley, wheat, ^{26.} Savitr Rk is the same as the Gâyatri, see page 8 above.

^{27.} मुन्यकं—Food which can be used by hermits.

15

20

kidney-bean, black-bean, hermit's food, kālas'āka', mahās'alka', cardamom, dry ginger, black pepper, assafætida, raw sugar, refined sugar, camphor, rock-salt, lake salt, jack-fruit, cocoa-nut, plantain, plums, preparations of cow's milk, such as milk, curds, clarified butter, milk-pudding, honey, and meat &c., and the like' well known in Another smṛti, are to be understood.

By the use of the word sacrificial³ are excluded things which are improper and prohibited in other smrtis such as, Kodrava⁴ grain, Masura grain, gram, kulittha⁵, Pulâka⁶, nispâva⁷, râjamâṣhá,⁸ the white pumpkin, egg-fruit⁹, apodaki¹⁰, bamboo-shoot, long pepper, the vachâ, s'atapuṣḥpâ, uṣhara salt, biḍa salt, and the milk of wild buffalo or of chamari antelope, also the preparations of such milk, such as curd, clarified butter, or pudding of their milk."

Akrodhanaih, without anger; even where there may be occasion for anger; atvarah, without haste, without excitement; âtṛpteḥ, to the satisfaction, i.e. one should give. This is the connection.

By the use of the word tu, 'however', is indicated that one should so give food that something may remain as Page 70 * a residue, as the residue is the share of the servant class¹¹. "They declare the fragments which have fallen on the ground at a S'râddha to the manes, to be the share of dutiful, honest servants."

वर्षाभ्वो कालशाकं च सक्षारं कटुतिक्तकम् । दीपनं भेदनं हन्ति गरशोफकफानिलान् ॥

^{1.} কালহাক—the pot-herb, ocimum sanctum. Known in Hindi as ন্বা.
Its qualities are described by Vagbhata as follows:—

^{2.} महाहालक:—a fish with a prominent film—a kind of prawn or sea—crab.

^{3.} हविष्यं—i. e. pure food which can be used at a sacrifice. See Bâlambhatti p. 523 and the following pages; these have been detailed everywhere; see Manu III. 292 p. Vishnu.

^{4.} कोद्रव-Paspalum scrobiculatum, eaten by the poor.

^{5.} कुलित्य—Known in Marathi as कुलिय or हुलगा; dolichas biftorus.

^{6.} पुलाक-empty or shrivelled grain.

^{7.} निष्पाच—a kind of pulse.

^{8.} राजमाच-A kind of bean

^{9.} वार्ताक also known as वार्ताकु:

^{10.} अपोदकी—a pot-herb—अपनद्धं उदकं यस्याः

^{11.} Manu Ch. III. 246.

20

25

35

So also atrpteh pavitrani, to the satisfaction sacred texts, such as the Purushasûkta and Pâvamani hymns, and the like; japtvâ, after reciting, and having known that they have been satisfied, the aforestated japa silent prayer i. e. 'together with the vyâhrtis' thus mentioned, one should repeat. (240).

Viramitrodaya, Yâjñavalkya, Verse 240 (1).

Ishtam, 'agreeable' to one self, and to the Brahmana; that too havishya, 'sacrificial' only, i.e., only that which is proper for a S'râddha; ahrodhanah, 'without anger' and without haste also, so being, to the Brahmanas, dadyat, 'one should give, &c.'. By the use of the word cha, 'also', are included articles for seasoning, &c. 240 (1).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 241.

Taking up the food (one should ask) "are you satisfied"? and as regards the remainder, having in the same manner received their permission, he should scatter that food on the ground, and should give water once at a time to each. (241).

Mitâksharā:—After that, in entirety annam âdâya, taking up the food, and tṛptâh sthah, are you satisfied? thus having asked, and "we are satisfied," thus having been addressed by them and again asking "there is some remaining, what is to be done with it?", and after getting the reply "Eat along with the relatives", and after accepting it, that food, in front of the Bráhmana in the seat for the Pitrs, near the leavings on the ground covered with blades of darbhas with the ends turned towards the south, and with water containing sesamum, with the Rk Ye Agnidagdhā, those, who were burnt by fire &c., throwing it down, he should again scatter sesamum water.

After that on the palms of the Brâhmanas for gandusha 30 sipping, sakrt sakrt, once to each, apo dadyât, he should give water. (241).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 242.

Having taken up the entire food along with sesamum, and facing the South, near the leavings, one should offer pindas, even as in the Pitr-yajña. (242).

Mitâkṣharâ:—By an extended application of the ritual laid down for Pinḍa Pitṛ-Yūjña, where the The Piṇḍa- charu cooking exists cooked, with the remainder pradâna of the charu from the agnau karaṇa, sarvam annam upâdâya, having then up the entire food, sannidhau, near the fire, pindân dadyât, one should offer pindas. In the absense of that, annam, the food, prepared for the Bràḥmaṇas, sarvam upâdâya, taking up the entire, satilam, along with sesamum, i. e., mixed with sesamum, dakshiṇâmukhaḥ, facing the South, uchchḥishṭa-sannidhau, near the leavings, in the manner of Pinda-Pitr-Yajña pindân dadyàt, one should offer pindas. (242).

Viramitrodaya. Yâjñavalkya, Verses 240 (2)-243.

Atrpteh, 'to the satisfaction', i.e., until the satisfaction of the Brahmanas; para japam, 'the aforestated japa', consisting of the vyahrti, gayatri, and the Rk. madhu vata, &c., stated to be repeated; pavitrani, 'sacred texts', such as the Purusha Sahta and the like others; by the use of the word tatha, 'and also', the Rahshhoghnya' and the like others, having repeated; 'taking up the food', annamadaya, remaining from the S'raddha, bhamau vihiret, 'one should scatter on the ground', with the recitation of the mantra' agnidagdha, one should throw. Thereafter sahrt sahrt 'once to each', with the words 'this is for you, the apos'ana', he should give water.

1. रशोबस्क-such as the 10 Rks commening with.

कृणुष्वपाजः प्रसिति न पृथ्वीं याहिराजेवा मेवाँ इभैनं—

Rk Veda III. 4-23 = 4-1-4, so called from Rigg: its Rshi.

A. पानमानसूक्त—Rk Veda VII. 2-18 and परिशिष्ट., Commencing with নিমিন্তৰ ইব &c. These recitals are called স্মিপ্ৰবৃত্ত which either the performer himself should recite, or cause these to be recited through others. For the details of the স্মিপ্ৰবৃত্ত selections for the several Vedas see সাম্মুদ্ৰ pages 50-52, also p. 65 11. 22-25.

2. अभिद्रशा—Either the yajus येऽभिद्रशा येऽनिभिद्रशा &cc. or a mantra like the following:—

अग्निद्रधाः कुले जाता येऽप्यद्रधाः कुले मम । भूमौ दत्तेन पिण्डेन नृप्ता यान्तु परां गतिम् ॥ The two विकिर्ड are also offered as follows.

The part near the Viśvedeva Brâhmana's plate with this mantra Brāhmana's plate thus.

अतोमपाश्च ये देवा यज्ञभागविवार्जिताः । तेषामन्तं प्रदास्यामि विकिरं वैश्वदेविकम् ॥ The second near the pitr

असंस्कृतप्रमीता ये त्यागिन्यो याः कुलक्षियः। दास्यामि तेभ्यो विकिरमन्त्रं नाभ्यश्च पैतृकम् ॥

10

5

15

20

20

35

Then 'are you satisfied', i.e., by asking, as is understood; of course 'we are satisfied', thus answered by them, s'esham, the residue', i.e., of the food cooked for that s'ráddha, anumanya, 'having received their permission', i.e., after the question by the performer of the s'raddha, 'what should I do with the food which has remained?', and the answer ' along with the relatives, enjoy', thus having obtained the permission, sarvam, 'the entire', i.e., all varieties of all kinds. together with the condiments, &c., annam, 'food', satilam, 'along with sesamums', upadaya, 'taking up', and making it into the 10 form of a pinda, uchchhishta sannidhau, 'near the leavings', of the Brâhmana, after the manner of the pitryajña, pindân, 'the pindas', dakshinabhimukhah, 'facing towards the south', one 'should give' pradadyat.

By the use of the word tu, 'however', the japa after the reply of satisfaction, has been distinguished. In the expression 'S'esham cha', the word cha, 'and also', is inclusive of the seasoning articles. The word eva, 'only', accompanying the word 'anumanya', having the permission, is with a view to provide prominently the necessity of permission. By the use of the word cha, 'and' a second time, is added the question 'I shall now prepare the pinda.' And from the capacity of the question, the answer also may be understood. In the expression daduat cha, 'should give also', the use of the word cha adds by inclusion the sipping of the water after the scattering of the food. Hence also in regard to the achamana, sipping of water, there is an absence of a direction for facing towards the south, and again with a view to reach 25 that 'facing towards the south' has been stated. That, moreover, is to accompany the expression apo dadyat, 'one should give water', and everywhere. (240-243).

Yajñavalkya, Verse 243.

30 For the maternal grandfathers also similarly should one give. Then he should give water for the âchamana, then he should cause to be recited the benedictory recitals, and also the Akshayyodaka—243.

Mitâksharâ:-Mâtâmahánâmapi, for maternal grandfathers also, beginning with the invocation The Giving of the of the Vis'vedevas and ending with the offering of the pindas, the acts, evameva, similarly also, Akshayya water. he should perform. Thereafter to the Brahmanas

10

15

20

30

35

âchamanam dadyât, one should give water for sipping. Swasti vâchyam tatah kuryât, then one should cause to be recited the benedictory recital, i.e., may you be pleased to pronounce benediction." Thus he should cause the Brâhmanas to recite the Syasti-formula.

When by them also 'benediction' has been pronounced, 'Please say that this may be undiminishable' with these words one should pour water. By them also should be declared "Let this be undiminishable".

Viramitrodaya

The order of performance of the S'raddha for the father, etc., the Author extends to the three S'raddhas for the grandfather and the rest

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 243 (1).

By the plural number indicative of the first, are included the three. By the use of the word api, 'also', in the âbhyudayika S'râddha are included the three maternal ancestors. Tatah, 'thereafter', i.e., after the offering of the pindas, to the Brâhmans invited for the S'râddha, âchamaniyam dadyât, 'one should give water for sipping', vide the text, "Perfumes and the like, one should throw in silence, and thereafter one should cause the twice-born to do the sipping."

Yâiñavalkya, Verse 243 (2).

Tato, thereafter, i.e., after the sipping of the water by the Brâhmanas; the word swasti, should be got pronounced, i.e., is to be pronounced through the Brahmanas, where this is done, that is swasti vachyam, 'benedictory recital', i.e., a benedictory pronouncement. benedictory pronouncement, however, is an additional under the view of Yajnavalkya, since it has not been written by Katylyana and others. Akshayyodakam, thus: "On this day this food, drink, and the rest offered today for such and such a one of such a gotra, of such a name let it be undiminishable" by these and the like pronouncements, one should offer water mixed with sesamum, clarified butter and honey to the six beginning with the father and the rest. That in which is undiminishable water, thus the act of giving water in this manner, is the meaning of the expression akshayyodaka. The word cha, 'and' has the sense of wa, 'or'; the word eva, 'also' has the sense of distinguishing it from the swastivachana. Thus, the conclusion is that either preceded by the pronouncement of the swasti, or also not proceeded by that, one should perform the akshayyodaka dana. (243).

20

25

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 244.

Then having given the $dakshin\hat{a}$ according to capacity, one should bring about the pronouncement of $Swadh\hat{a}$; 'do pronounce' being thus permitted, he should say 'please pronounce $swadh\hat{a}$ for the concerned'. (244).

Mitâksharâ:—Afterwards, according to capacity dakshinâm dattwâ, having given dakshinâ such as gold, silver, and after saying, "May I cause now swadhà to be recited?" and by those Brâhmanas being permitted with the words "Yes, do cause it to be pronounced", prakṛtebhyaḥ, for the concerned, such as the father and the rest, and the maternal grandfather and the rest, 'may you pronounce the swadhâ', thus should he cause the swadhâ to be recited. (244).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 245.

They should say 'Let Swadhâ be', and after thus had been pronounced, he should sprinkle water on the ground. He should then say "May the Visvedevas be satisfied." And this having been pronounced by the Brâḥmaṇas should pronounce thus: (245).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Those Brâḥmaṇas also, sbrûyuḥ, should say "let swadhâ be." After thus had been Page 71* priuonneed, uktwâ, by them, thereafter, with the Kamandalu, he should sprinkle water on the ground. After that, he should say "May the Vis'vedevas be satisfied." The Brâḥmaṇas should respond "Be satisfied, the Vis'vedevas." Thus having been pronounced, this, idam, ie., to be stated hereafter, japet, he should pronounce. (244).

Yajñavalkya, Verses 244, 245 (1).

Thereafter according to one's capacity, having given Dakshina in gold or silver, to the Daiva and Pitr Brahmanas, one should bring 30 up the pronouncement of Swadha. 'Shall I cause swadha to be pronounced?' Thus he should address the Brahmanas. Then 'Do cause to be pronounced', being thus permitted, he should request the Brahmanas thus: "Be pleased to pronounce the swadha 'for the concerned', prakrtebhyah, i. e. for the father, grand-father, great grandfather, mother's father, mother's father's father, and mother's father's father's father." And when thus requested the Brahmanas should pronounce 'May swadha be'. (244).

10

Bhûmau 'on the ground', i. e. on the pindas closely placed on the ground and covered with the hus'a blades together with the pavitra with the mantra 'arjam vahanti, &c.', one 'should sprinkle water', jalam sinchet, i.e., in the form of a continuous water-line in the southern direction, one should pour. As has been said in the Chhándogyopanishat: "The pindas covered with the pavitra, one should sprinkle with water after turning up the vessels". Here, the giving of the Dahshina before the pronouncement of the swadha is another alternative course since Kâtyâyana and others have stated in an inverse order. 245 (1).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 246.

Liberal-donors may, among us, increase, and the vedas, and the progeny also. And faith, may it not forsake us; plenty to bestow, may we have. (246).

Mitâksharâ:—Dâtâro, liberal donors, of gold and the like, no, among us i.e. in our family, abhivardhantâm, may increase, many also may they be; Vedâscha, vedas also may increase, by means of learning, teaching and constant application for

Request to the knowing their meaning; santatisch, the progeny also, through sons, grandsons &c. in a line of continued succession; s'raddhâ cha, and faith also, regard for ancestral rites, no, us, mâ vyagamat, may not forsake, may not depart from us. Deyam ch, to bestow, such as gold &c. bahu, plenty, unlimited in quantity, may be with us. Iti, thus i. e. he should pronounce this; this is the meaning. (246.)

Viramitrodaya, Yâjñavalkya, Verses 245 (2)-246.

Viśvedevâh priyantâm, 'May the viśvedevas, be pleased'; he should speak loudly; thus is the connection. By the use of the word cha, 'and', the performance preceding this, i.e., the lifting of the pindas is added. Thereafter, when by the s'râddha Brāḥmṇas has been declared 'may they be pleased', one should utter the formula 'Dâtâro &c.' By the use of the word cha, 'also', the pronouncement of the performer of the s'râddha, viz., 'may our family increase' is developed by the responsive words of the Brāḥmaṇas 'may it increase'. The word

15

20

25

30

35

iti, 'thus', is not indicative of conclusion, but has the sense of commencement. In this way, "Food also, with us may be in abundance; guests also may we obtain; persons begging of us, may also be; and may we also not beg of any one. These may fructify as true benedictions" to this end, the pronouncement becomes established. 245 (2)-246.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 247.

Having said thus, and having spoken pleasant words, after saluting, one should send them away. With the Rk 'Wâje wâje' &c. pleased, commencing with the father, one should bid them good by (247).

Mitâkṣharâ—Iti, thus, having muttered silently, the abovementioned prayer, mantra, and uktwâ cha priyâ vâchaḥ, having spoken pleusant words, like this "Blessed have we become by our house being consecrated with the dust of your feet, and by your not minding taking the trouble of eating this humble repast of pot-herbs, &c.; we have been much obliged by you, and the like"; pranipatya, after having suluted, and after circumambulating and bowing to them, visarjayet, he should send them away;—How should he send them away? So the author says, wâje wâje, bata vijino na, "Deep-skilled in Law, enternal, O Vâjins, help us, &c." reciting this Rk3.

आयुः प्रजां धनं विद्यां स्वर्गे मोक्षं सुखानि च । प्रयच्छन्तु तथा राज्यं प्रीता नृणां पितामहाः ॥ and then दाता—सत्या आश्चिषः सन्तु ।

^{1.} i. e. at the end of verse 246.

^{2.} This is the complement of the full prayer, only the first portion of which is given as Verse 246, and the following is also added to সন্মান কৈ &c. recited in the Viramitrodaya viz.

^{3.} Rk. Veda VII. 38,-8.=V. IV. 5. The full Rk is as follows:—
वाजेवाजेवतवाजिनोनोधनेषुविपाऽअमृताऽऋतज्ञाः। अस्यमध्यः पिवत माद्यध्वं तृतायात पाथिभिदेवयानैः॥
Which has been thus translated by Griffith, (VII. 38-8). "Deep skilled in Law, eternal, deathless. Singers, O Våjins, help us in each fray for booty.
Drink of this meath, be satisfied, be joyful:—Then go on paths which Gods are wont to travel."

10

20

Pitṛpūrvam, commencing with the father, he should dismiss the Manes and the rest with the great grandfather, and ending with the Vis'védevas, with the touch of the darbha blades in his hands, saying "Rise up, O Manes"; prītah, pleased i. e. delighted in mind, visarjanam, the farewell, one should perform (247).

Viramitrodaya.

Iti, 'thus', i.e., liberal donors, &c., aforestated, priyâscha, 'also pleasant', so as to give pleasure to the Brâhmanas, wâchah, 'speech'; whiva, 'having spoken'; pranipatya, after saluting the Brâhmanas pleased by the acceptance of the dakshina with the mantra 'Vâje vâje vata, &c.', visarjayet, 'one should send them away', i.e., bid them farewell for going to their own places.

To the general rule that Deva performances shall have priority, the Author mentions by way of an exception, pitrparvamiti, 'commencing with the father &c.' The meaning is that the sending away should be made commencing with the Pitr Brahmana. For pritan, at some places, the reading is pritah. (247).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 248.

In which the drippings, before, in the arghyapâtra, were collected, that Pitṛ-pátra, after having turned up, he should send away the Brâḥmaṇas. (248).

Mitâksharâ — Yasminnarghyapâtre, in which the arghyapātra, pūrvam, before, towards the end of the giving of the arghya, te sansravâh, those drippings, i.e. the drippings of arghya water

^{1.} विसर्जनम्—Bidding farewell—The visarjana is to be in the inverse order of that followed at the offering of the pindas. Thus, the great grandfather who was the last to be placed should be the first to be removed, and this, it will be noticed, is convenient also. This procedure is followed after the middle pinda is lifted up with the acquirement. Secondly for the Pitrs, the root, while for the Devas, the ends of the darbhas should be held, touching them respectively with the other ends. Lastly—to the general rule (उरसर्ग,) that in all performances those for the Devas should have priority, this is an exception. Here, the Pitrs come first, and even among them, the last is to have priority in विसर्जन, and the Devas to be the last.

^{2.} दर्मान्वारंभेण-अन्वारंभ touching.

from the hands of the Brâhmanas, niveṣitâḥ, were collected, i.e. placed, tat pitṛpâtram, that Pitṛpátra, which was so long nyubja¹, turned downwards, uttânam, having turned up, i.e. with its face upwards, kṛtwâ, having made, viprân visarjayet, Brâhmanas, he shoùld dismiss.

This moreover should be observed after the recital of the benedictory prayer, and before the uttering of the Rk Vàje-váje &c. since the termination 2 $Kriv\bar{a}$ has been used in the expression $kriv\hat{a}$ visarjayet 'after having done, he should send away' (248).

10

5

Viramitrodaya.

The performance after the turning up of the arghya vessel has already been mentioned; the Author states it particularly

Yājñavalkya, Verse 248

Yasmin, 'in which', arghyapâtre, 'in the arghya vessel'; te, 'those', proceeding from which sañsravâḥ, 'drippings' in the form of the remaining water, pârvam 'before', nives'itâḥ, 'placed', i.e. held; that pitṛpâtram, 'the pitṛ vessel' before turned down, uttânam kṛtvâ, 'after having turned up', viprân, 'the Brâḥmaṇas', visarjayet, 'one should send away'. This is the meaning.

By the turning up of the pitr vessel, in due course, the grand-father's and great grandfather's vessel, by the extended application under the text³ 'for the maternal fathers also similarly', the turning up of the maternal grandfather's and the rest is obvious, and has not been mentioned in detailed particulars by the Author. (248).

25

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 249.

Then having circumambulated, and followed them, one may eat what was consumed by the Pitrs. And should also remain a brahmachari that night, however, along with the Brahmanas. (249).

Mitâksharâ:—Thereafter up to the boundary, anuvrajya, having followed, the Brâḥmaṇas, and by them being permitted with

^{1.} See Verse 235 above.

^{2.} The gerundial termination meaning 'having done' &c.

^{3.} See Verse 243 above.

10

20

25

30

the words 'now please rest', after circumambulating them when returning home, pitrsevitam, what was taken by the Pitrs, and had remained as residue from the s'râddha, along with the iṣhṭas, relations, bhuñjitā, one may eat.

This is only an optional rule, a niyama¹ and not a Parisankhyâ. With regard to meat food 'according to inclination' as has already been mentioned before, viz. "by the desire of the Brâhmaṇa".

On the day on which the S'râddha was performed, during the night of that day, along with the Brâḥmaṇas who had taken the meals the performer should remain a Braḥmachârî. By the use of the word tu, however, he should also remain without a second meal, vide the text:—

"Brushing the teeth, (chewing the) betel leaves, bathing by rubbing oil on the body, not eating, sexual intercourse, medicines, and eating another food, these seven acts the performer of the S'râddha should avoid.

"Taking a second meal, undertaking a journey, carrying a load, study, conjugal intercourse, giving alms, accepting gifts, oblations, one eating at a Srâddha, should avoid these eight". (249)

Viramitrodaya, Yajñavalkya, Verse 249 (1).

While circumambulating the Brahmanas whom 'he had bidden farewell, in a manner that it may lead round to the South, and 'following after' them, anuvrajya, pitrsevitam, 'what was consumed by the pitrs,' i.e. food remaining as residue from the s'râddha, bhunjita, 'one may eat'.

Here a special rule in the Matsya Purana³: "By the outside, one should go round towards the south, for eight steps one should follow after, together with the group of cognates, and accompanied by the son and the wife". Here, moreover, on the ekâdas'i day and the like, even without eating, by merely smelling, the purpose of the S'astra is served". So it has been said, by a reference to a S'ruti text cited in the Kâlâdars'a

^{1.} For Niyama, the optional rule, and Parisankhya, the restrictive rule, see above page 212 note 3.

^{2.} See above Verse 179.

^{3.} Ch. XVIII. Verse 60.

25

viz. "On the ekâdas'i and like days, the food at a pitrya ceremony should be smelt; that is never consumed; can never be consumed." 249 (1).

Yājnavalkya Verse 249 (2).

Tâm rajanîm, 'that night,' i. e. covering that day and night; braḥmachârî, 'celibate', "Remembrance, talking about, sporting, observing, talking in secret, moving together, eating together, and the completion of the (sexual) act itself, this is the eightfold sexual intercourse, which the learned declare", abstaining from the eight-fold sexual acts as aforestated, one should be so, along with the S'râddhi Brâḥmaṇas.

10 This is the meaning; in short, the S'râddhiya Brāḥmaṇas also should remain Braḥmachâris. By the use of the word tu, 'however', even an approach with the menstruated wife also is excluded. Thus necessarily in the absence of nights proper for an approach after the menses, that certainly should not be done by the performer of the S'râddha, as well as by the S'râddhi Brâḥmaṇas. The usage of the S'ishṭas is also the same, and so no search after other method has been made. This is the point. 249 (2).

* Page 72 Thus having described the Parvana Sraddha, now the Author describes the Vrddhi S'rāddha¹

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 250.

Thus to the right with his movement, in the Vrddhi the Nāndīmukha Piirs one should worship, Vrddhi S'râ- and should be mixed with curd and ddha.

Karkandhu the pindas. (and) with barley the rites. (250.)

Mitakshara:—Vrddhau, in the Vrddhi, i.e. in the S'raddha on the occasion of the birth of a son or the like occasion, evam, thus, in the manner described above, pitrn yajeta, one should worship the Pitrs, i.e. do honour to them.

There the Author mentions a special rule of procedure pradakshinavrtkah, with his movement to the right, from left to right is the movement, i.e., the method of performing the ritual of whom, such a one is one whose movement is to the right. In short, one proceeding towards the South.

^{1.} Same as the Abhyudayika mentioned and described above. See p. l.

10

15

20

25

30

The word Nândîmukhân is adjectival of the Pitrs. And therefore in regard to the invocation and other acts 'I shall invoke the Nândîmukha Pitrs, the Nândīmukha Grandfather, &c.,' should be the formula to be used.

How should he worship? So the Author proceeds: dadhikarkandhu mis'rân, should worship them by offering pindas mixed with curd and Karkandhu i.e. badari or plum fruit, with curds and with the pindas the badari fruits. The pindas so mixed should be offered as oblations; thus it is connected. All the rites which are performed with sesamum, yavain kartavyân, should be done with barley.

Here, moreover, the number of Brâhmaṇas has been as mentioned before, viz., in "Even in the vis'vadeva according to capacity".

Here, the mentioning of the movement (from left) to right is with a view to point out the special ceremonies set out in other Smṛtis. As says A's'valâyana:—"Now in the Ābhyudayika (S'râddha there should be) an even-number of Brahmanas, the Darbha blades without roots, face towards the east, the sacred thread should be hung on the left shoulder (yajñopaviti)2, the perambulation should be from left to the right, with barley the purpose of sesamum, the offering of perfumes and the rest twice3 for each, and one should give straight untwisted darbha blades for a seat."

"O Barley, Soma is thy deity; at the Gosava sacrifice thou hast been created by the gods. By the ancients thou hast been offered. Through the pushti oblation render happy the Nándi-mukha Pitrs and these worlds and be propitious to us, Svâhà." With this mantrâ the strewing of the barley should be done.

"O Vis'vedevas, this arghya is for you. O Nāndī-mukha fathers, this arghya is for you." Thus the arghya should be offered according to the sex of the ancestors.

On the hand the homa should be offered thus:—"To Agni, the Kavyaváhana svàhá; to Soma, the Pitṛmat sváhà."

^{1.} Verse 227.

^{2.} See note 1, on p. 500.

^{3.} E: E: In the Pitr sraddha it is thrice each time.

In the place of the three Rks viz. "Madhu Vâtá ṛtâyate &c.' the five Rks commencing with $Up\hat{a}smai^1$ $g\bar{a}yata$ &c., one should cause them to hear these containing the madhu. And the sixth Rk² "Akshannamimadanta."

After the Bràhmanas have performed the âchamana after eating, having smeared with cow-dung, and having spread the darbha blades with their top-ends towards the East, upon these he should offer to each ancestor two Pindas made of the remnant of the food eaten by the Brâhmanas mixed with curd and ghee." and so on.

Although "The pitrs one should worship" has been stated in general terms, still all the three S'rāddhas and the order also may be ascentained from other Smṛtis, as says S'âtâtapa:—

"The mothers' S'ráddha should be the first; of the father's thereafter, and then of the maternal grandfathers' three s'rāddhas have been declared, thus in a Vṛddhi S'raddha." (250.)

Viramitrodaya.

As the basic for all S'raddha, having mentioned the Parvana, as regards varients from it, viz., the Abhyudayika, Ekoddishta, and Sapindikarana, the Author states special rules of procedure in these

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 250.

Evam, 'thus', in the manner of the Pârvaṇa; vṛddhau, upon the birth of a son, the marriage of a daughter, and the like occasions. Here, however, the special rule is this: To the right is the ambulatary movement of one who is the Performer. By that is the annulment of the ambulation of the Párvaṇa inversely to the right.

This, moreover, is indicative by an extension of a negation of the whole ritual for the Pitys. By the word Nandimukhan has been expressed the godhood of the ancestors who have the special qualitative description

^{1.} Rk Veda VI. 7.36. The Rks run thus: उपारंमी गायतानरः पर्वमानायदंवे । अभिदेवाँऽहयक्षेते । अभिते मधुना पयोर्थवाणोऽअज्ञाश्रयुः । देवं देवाय देवयु । &c.

^{2.} अक्षन्तमीमदन्त हावप्रिया अधूषत अस्तोषत स्वभानवे। विप्रानविष्टया मती । योजान्विदने हरी.

^{3.} पुषद्दिय—is ghee mixed with coagulated milk.

Thus the formula ' Nandīmukha pitarah' of being Nandimukha. comes to be established. Dadhi, 'curds' is well known; Karkandhu is the plum fruit; mixed with these two should be made the pindas prepared of the material for the S'raddha under performance. Even without a pinda, the modern sishtas perform an A'bhyudayika S'raddha. In that course, however, by reason of the text:-"The Agnaukarana, and the invocation, as also the wash, one should perform in the pinda-S'râddha; in one without pinda, one may drop", agnaukarana and the rest stand annulled. Yavaischa, with the barley, moreover, should be made all performances hitherto-before prescribed with the use of sesamum; on account of the text of Katy yana: 'With barley, sesamum performances."

Moreover, the word pitrs here, applies by extension to the three with the mother and the rest: "The mother's S'raddha, however, shall be first; of the pitrs thereafter, and the maternal grandfather and the like; thus in a Vrddhi S'raddha, three S'raddhas are declared ", vide this text of S'atitipa: The S'raddha for the mothers as matr S'raddha. Here, moreover, other special constructions with the word svaha in the place of the word svadha should be ascertained from other Smrtis. Thus. even in regard to the Ekoddishta and Sapindana which will be hereafter described in special forms of the Parvana, all these remaining, not mentioned here, may be seen in other compositions. Here, however, these have not been detailed in particular through fear of swelling the bulk of the work. (250).

The Author now describes the Ekoddishta

Yâjñavalkya. Verse 251.

The Ekoddishta is without the Devas, with one arghya, and one pavitravaka; without invocation, and agnaukarana; and indeed with the Apasavya, (251.)

Mitakshara:-Ekoddishtam, ekah, one uddishtah, is intended in which S'râddha, that is Ekoddishtam, thus it is a name (indicative) of action. 'The rest, one should perform as before', thus having been stated in the concluding portion¹; all the rites of the Pârvana being applicable, (only) the peculiarities are being mentioned

See Verse 254.

25

15

20

30

35

Devarahitam, without the Devas, i.e. without the Vis'védeva (worship), ekârghya pâtram ekadarbhapavitrakam, with one arghya vessel, and one pavitraka, and avahanagnaukarana homena cha rahitam, without invocation, and also without the agnaukarana oblations; apasavyavat i. e. as having the sacred thread suspended by the right shoulder, i.e. with the sacred thread in the form called Prâchinâviti.1 By this the Author suggests that in the Abhyudayika mentioned immediately before, that it should be vainopaviti, i.e., the sacred thread should be suspended 10 in the ordinary manner from the left shoulder. (251).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 252.

'Upatishthatâm' in the place of akshayya; at the bidding of farewell abhiramyatâm, one should pronounce; they should reply abhiratah sma ha. 252.

Mitakshara.—Moreover, what has been stated:2 "Then he 15 should pronounce the Svasti and the akshayyodakam also", there in the place of akshayya, one should Page 73 * say Upatishthatâm 'be pleased to stand by '.

Vipravisarjane, at the bidding of farewell to the Brahmanus, after reciting the mantra "vaje vaje", after taking the darbha 20 blade in his hand, one should say abhiramyatam, 'be pleased.' Te, they, also should say, abhirtah sma ha, 'we are pleased indeed.' The remainder as before. This is the purport.

This moreover, should be performed at mid-day; as says 25 Devala:-

"In the forenoon, the rites in honour of the Gods, while in the afternoon those in honour of the pitrs. The Ekoddishia, however, in the midday, and in the morning, that on account of Vrddhi."

"One should eat what was partaken by the pitrs" to this a prohibition has been stated under the special rule regarding 30 Ekoddishta viz.

^{1.} उद्धते दक्षिणे पाणानुपनीत्युच्यते द्विजै: । सन्ये तु प्राचीनावीती निवीती कंटसज्जने ॥ मन २-६३. See above page 1.

^{2.} See Verse 243.

^{3.} See Verse 247.

10

15

20

25

30

35

40

"What remains at the ceremony of Navas'râddha, what remains as stale food in the home, and the residue of the meals by a couple, one must not eat on any account." The Navas'rādha has been (thus) indicated: "On the first day, on the third day, on the fifth, and so on the seventh, and also on the ninth, and the eleventh, that which is performed, is called the Navaṣrâddha." (252)

Viramitrodaya

One alone is the object intended in which, that is Ekoddishtam, 'intended for one', such as the S'râddha for the Preta, the (first) anniversary, &c.; Daivam, the Visvedeva S'raddha. without that: one only is arohya in which, such is ekarahya, 'having one arghya'; one only is the pavitraka, for being placed in a vessel, in which, is ekapavitrakam, 'with one pavitraka'; of these two, is the Karmadharaya Without avahana, 'invocation', a.d 'agnaukarana.' compound. apasavyavat, 'with the apasavya', i.e., having the ritual procedure, of the Parvana, such as the apasavya and the like. By this is excluded the possibility of regarding as the basis, Vrddhi S'raddha which has been mentioned just immediately before. Here, moreover, the Deva S'raddha, and similar rites have been prohibited under the rule of 'the General and Special' powers. Or, in its exclusion may be inferred the approval for including other rites of the Pârvana S'râddha. Here, also, by the mention of one arghya itself, one pavitra being inferred, that its special mention is for the establishment of the pavitraka in one vessel, is a faulty manner of exposition; when the meaning is obtainable from the expression of the word itself, there is no scope for a rule of construction. Otherwise, from the very expression Ekoldishta, one arghya being obtainable, it would appear that the expression 'one arghya' would be meaningless.

The word hi, 'indeed' is used to indicate motive; the Ekoddishta character of the S'râddha has for its basis the condition of one arghya, and one pavitraka.

Upatishthatâm ityâdi, 'be pleased to stand by, &c.' Here, moreover, in the place of the words Akshayyam astu, 'may there be undiminishedness', in the clause for the offering of the Akshayyodaka water, one should pronounce the words upatishthatâm. In the matter of bidding farewell to the Brâhmanas, instead of the mantra 'vâje vâje', one should pronounce the words abhiramyatâm. The word Te, 'they', is in regard to the Brâhmanas invited for the S'râddha. The word ha, is an expletive used to fill up the line. "The words tu, hi, cha, sma, ha, and wai are used to fill up a line" so in the Amara Kos'a. (251-252):

14

The Author describes the sapindikarana

Yájňavalkya, Verses 253-254.

Containing perfumes, water, and sesamum, one should prepare four vessels for the arghyas; in the Pitr vessels, should pour the Preta vessel, with the two mantras beginning with 'ye samana'; the rest, one should perform according as before. This sapindikarana and Ekoddishtam (is) for a woman also. (253-254).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Gandhodakatilairyuktam, containing perfumes, water, and sesamum; pâtrachatuṣhṭayam, four vessels, for the purpose of the preparation of arghya, in accordance with the procedure aforestated, kuryât, one should prepare. By mentioning four vessels containing sesamum, four Braḥmaṇas for the group of pitṛs have been indicated. At the Vais'vadeva seats should be two (Braḥmaṇas) as already fixed.

Here the water in the Preta vessel, leaving a little behind, dividing in three parts, one should pour into the Pitr vessels with the two mantras beginning with "Ye samanah samanasah" &c.,

S'eṣham, the rest, beginning with the invocation of the 20 Vis'vedevas and ending with the farewell to the Brâḥmaṇas, pūrvavat, according as before i.e. according to the rites of the Pârvaṇa S'rāddha, âcharet, one should perform.

With the water remaining in the arghya vessel for the Preta, after giving arghya water in the hand of the Brâḥmaṇa at the 25 Preta seat, the remaining ceremony one may finish like the Ekoddiṣhṭa. With regard to the remaining three Pitr Brâḥmaṇas, same as in the Pârvaṇa (S'râddha).

Etat sapindīkaraņam, this sapindīkaraņa, and the previously mentioned ekoddishta also, striyā api, for a woman also, i. e. 30 for the mother also, as stated theretofore, should be performed.

By laying this down, it comes to be stated that at the Parvana, the mother's s'râddha should be separately performed.

^{1.} See Verse 249.

10

Here, some say that the word Preta in the verse, has a reference to the great grandfather of the father. For the reason that he is included in the An objection. three² ancestors, and therefore in the period the Sapindikarana ceremony occurs the of the offering of Pindas &c., such inclusion of the recently deceased is not reasonable, as by so doing there would be thereaftar a cessation of the offering of the Pinda and water to him (i. e. after the Sapindikarana.). Therefore Yama has said :- "He who appoints a recently deceased person for a separate Pinda, for whom the Sapindikarana ceremony has been performed, thereby commits a breach of the law, and becomes liable as a patricide."

The word Preta is properly applied to the fourth ancestor also because it is made up of the two words Pra, prakarshena, meaning 'completely,' and itah, meaning 'passed away.' He who has passed away completely is a Preta. Therefore it may apply even as to the fourth (ancestor) also. Moreover, the word Preta is employed in this sense

^{1.} The Author states a position taken according to one view, viz. that the word Preta need not be confined in its application to the father only. It may extend in its application to the highest ancestor, viz. the four, inclusive of the deceased. It should be remembered that the Sapindikarana ceremony means joining the deceased to the line of his immediate ancestors, and thus placing him among them. See for a detailed description of this, Gharpure's Vyawahāra Mayūkha (English translation), note on pages 83 and 84. The other side suggests that the word Preta refers to the last of the line of Pitrs invoked by the deceased during his life-time.

^{2.} Before one's father dies, the father used to offer Pindas &c., to his three ancestors. But after the death of the father, on the completion of the Sapindākaraņa ceremony, the fourth ancestor or the great-great-grandfather of the son ceases to receive any Pindas and therefore, the water in the fourth pot which represented him is called the Preta pot, and henceforth this fourth ancestor will not receive any separate oblation but through his three successors. This is the meaning of the symbolism of mixing his water with the water of the three other pots. It is often seen exhibited in the Pindas. The preta pâtra cannot mean the pot representing the immediately or recently deceased person. For, if it were so, then mixing the water of the pot of the recently deceased person with three other waters would indicate that the recently deceased person had merged into the three higher ancestors.

^{3.} प्रेत—one who has been removed completely at a long distance in passages like the following:—Pretebhyah eva niprīnīyàt &c., "one should offer to the deceased only." Constructions like this are seen (where the word Preta is employed to designate any deceased person).

10

15

20

Further: "The Sapindikarana S'râddha should be performed by first performing the Deva S'râddha; one should feed the Pitrs therein and thenceforward he should not be referred to as the Preta" in this text, there appears to be a prohibition for a S'ràddha, &c., in regard to a Preta after the completion of the Sapindikarana ceremony; and this cannot be applied to a person recently dead, for in his case the S'ràddha is enjoined on the amàvàsyā and other days.

Moreover, the text, "The Sapinda relationship ceases with the seventh ancestor" can hold only on the assumption that the fourth ancestor is considered as merged in his three successors; viz., that the pervasion of the fourth ancestor extends in the three Pindas, of the fifth ancestor to the two Pindas, and of the sixth ancestor to one Pinda, the seventh is excluded.

Moreover, the expression Pitr pàtra 'father's vessel', meaning thereby that the father is the principal, can hold only in this alternative, and not otherwise, as the great-grandfather would be the principal, the word Pitr is taken in its primary sense meaning father and therefore the water of the Preta pātra or in the pot of the fourth ancestor is poured into the pots beginning with that of the father.

Therefore, the position that in the vessels for the ancestors, the vessel of the recently deceased Preta should be poured is not proper.

Here the object of linking together the pindas is not that thereafter at all times there should be a cessation of the offering of Pindas &c., but the object is that by the cessation of the condition

^{1.} of Manu Ch. V. 60.

^{2.} सप्तमे निनिनतेन-i. e. the sapindahood ceases after the seventh.

15

20

25

30 of a Preta there should accrue to the deceased the position of a Pitr.

The condition of a Preta is a condition of suffering extreme pain caused by hunger and thirst. As says Markandeya:—"The sojourn of men in the region of the Pretas is reputed to be for one year; of men in the region of the Pretas is reputed to be for one year; 5 there hunger and thirst are felt every day, O son of Bhrgu."

The condition of obtaining Pitrhood is getting into connection with the Vasus¹ and the other S'râddha Devatas. By the performance of the Sapindīkaraņa with the previously described ekoddiṣhṭa, it is inferred that there is the cessation of Pretahood and the attainment of Pitrhood, vide the following and similar other texts. "He, to whom are not given these sixteen Preta S'râddhas, his pretahood remains firmly fixed even though hundreds of (other) S'râddhas are given for him." So also: "One should make four Pindas, and the first he should merge in these; and thenceforward the Preta attains a state on a par with the Pitrs.".

Even as regards the text, viz.: "He who, for a Preta, for whom Sapindī has been performed", that text prohibits the offering of piṇḍas by the Ekoddiṣhṭa ceremony, and it is with the Pârvaṇa rite that the offering of the piṇḍas can be inferred.

Again in the text, viz., Punah Pretam na nirdis'et, 'and thenceforward one should not refer to him as Preta,' that also means that thenceforward one should not use the word Preta in connection with him, but on the other hand the word pitr only; this is what is meant.

Moreover, the word Preta must not be confined to its etymological meaning indicating a person who has passed away for good—pra-ita-since the condition of suffering of particular pain is by current usage indicated by the word Preta.

^{1.} The three orders of the Śrâddha devatas are वसु, रुद्र, and आहित्य, the ancestor first in the order having the वसुह्न, the one next the रुद्रह्म, and the last, the आहित्यह्म.

^{2.} Of Yama, above set out; see p. 503 l. 9.

Again (as to the fact that) the word Preta is employed to denote a deceased person in general, there also, such a person is called Preta, because he has experienced that condition of pretahood previously.

As regards the objection based on the text "that Sapinda-5 hood ceases in the seventh," we reply that that text does not conflict, for the first pinda pervades up to the fifth ancestors, and the third pinda pervades up to the sixth, and there is cessation in the seventh.

Moreover capacity to offer Pinda does not (alone) constitute Sapinda relationship. Such a definition is open to the objection of non-pervasion. On the other hand, it has already been mentioned before that it is by the possession of the particles of one body, i.e. corporeal body.

The word Pitr also, by reason of the cessation of the condition of Pretahood, is used as indicative of those who have reached the status of S'râddha Devatas. Therefore, in the expression Pitrpātreshu there is no incongruity.

Therefore that the water in the pot representing a person recently deceased, and his Pinda also, is to be Conclusion. mixed with the waters of the Pitts and with their Pindas also representing his three ancestors has been established.

The revered Acharya, however, sets out the other view.

Moreover this Sapindikarana of the deceased father is to be understood (only) when the three ancestors, i. e. the grandfather and the rest,

^{1.} Although he has now gone beyond that and attained the Pitrhood.

^{2.} उपन्यस्तवान्—This is rather ambiguous. If Vijnanesvara suggests by this that Vis'varûpa himself accepted the position, he is not correct. A reference to Vis'varūpa's text at, p. 123 of his book (now available in the Trivendrum Series) shows beyond doubt that Vis'varûpa, not only does not accept the position, but even refutes it by positions on the same lines as are set out by Vijnanesvara. Thus he says, 'प्रेतराङ्केन च केचिद् बृद्धप्रितामहं व्याचसते, प्रकर्षणितः प्रेत इति च ब्युत्पाद्यन्ति, तदीयं च पात्रं पित्रादिपात्रेष्वसेचयन्ति । तत् पुनर्न युक्तं, स्मृत्यन्तरिवरोधात् । ''पिण्डकरणे प्रथमः पितृणां प्रेतः स्यात् पुत्रवाश्चिदिति पारस्करः । न च बृद्धस्यापुत्रत्वाशङ्कोपपात्तिः । न चार्वचिन आसेको युक्तः, सङ्घद्धा इव ''पराञ्चः पितर '' इत्यन्नायविरोधात् । रूढ्या च पेतराङ्कः प्रथम एव वर्तते, सर्वत्र प्रयोगदर्शनात्। योगोऽपि च तद्गत एवानुगन्तव्यः। न तु तत्सम्भवमात्राद् रूढ्यातिक्रमी युक्त इत्यनया दिशा श्रान्त्यपनोदः कार्यः।'' are dead. When the father has died, but the grandfather or the great-grandfather is alive, there is indeed no Sapindikarana of the deceased father. Because of the following text:—"Of those who have died out of their order, there is to be performed no Sapindikarana.

10

15

25

As to the text of Manu² viz. "One however, whose father is dead, while the grandfather is living, such a one, after pronouncing his father's name, should mention (that of) his great grandfather." That also is for the purpose of restricting the use of the word Pitr and not for the purpose of propounding the offering of

A question two Pindas. How? What of this text3:

"When however the father is alive, one should indeed offer Pindas to the preceding ones only; So also when one's father is dead and the grandfather
The Answer is alive." That text also is to be construed with the words "He also should offer Pindas to the higher ones only,"; such is to be the construction.

Indeed, even in the two alternatives, how should one offer the exequial oblations? So the answer is: Another question. "That one, after pronouncing the name of the father, should pronounce (that of) the great-grandfather", in this text by taking the first (i.e., father) and the last (great-grandfather) the general form should be "to the father, the grandfather, and great-grandfather, and not, at any time, with the first place for the grandfather or the great-grandfather, or the last place for the great-grandfather, or his father."

^{1.} Here Vijñanes'vara appears to be quite definite, viz.—that where a junior in the line of direct ascent has died before any of the two seniors next to him in the ascent, his sapindīkaraņa is held over until the line is cleared by the death of the intervening ancestor or ancestors. This, however is not accepted by other writers, nor is the rule followed up by practice; See; Nirnaya Sindhu, III Part II pp. 673-674.

^{2.} Ch. III. 221.

^{3.} Manu Ch. III. 220.

^{4.} As set out above, viz. who is to be taken as the Preta, the recently deceased or the fourth ancestor. But the entire reasoning suffers from the fact that the first alternative needs no consideration, as when the father is alive, it is he himself, and not his son who is entitled to perform. On an incapacity of the father, the son my perform but only as his deputy and not in his own right.

And hence since the words father, &c., are expressed relatively, it follows, when the father is alive, the form should be: "To the father, grandfather and the great-grandfather of the father", where the grandfather is alive, "to the father, grandfather and the great-grandfather of the grandfather1."

And, therefore, in the Pindapitryajña the words² "S'undhantâm pitaraḥ", etc., of the mantras cannot be altered³ for adaptation.

Although there is the text of Viṣṇu:4

"He whose father is dead must first of all offer a Pinda to his father, after that, two Pindas to the two ancestors higher than his grandfather."

The meaning of this is, that while the grandfather is alive, and the father is dead, then having offered one Pinda to the father, according to the ritual of Ekoddishta, he who was the grandfather of the father beginning with him to the two higher ancestors one should give two Pindas. The grandfather, however i.e., one's own great-grandfather is always entitled to receive his offering of Pinda. The meaning is, to the great-grandfather and to the higher ancestors above from him, one should give. The rule at the employment of proper words in the form, however, should be as has already been mentioned before.⁵

^{1.} In other words, the form should be, begin with Pitr and end with Prapitamaha thus, 'Pitr, Pitamaha—Prapitamahanam &c.

^{2.} A'svalayana Śrauta Sūtra II. 6. 14, A'pastamba ss. 7-13.

^{3. 55:—}See Jaimini IX. II. 1-2 and II. 1-34. The rule of construction, under which the intention of command which is most agreeable to convenience, reason, justice, and legal principles should in all doubtful cases be presumed.

^{4.} Ch. LXXV. 4. The preceding sutras in this chapter make the positions quite clear पितिर जीवित यः श्राद्धं कुर्यात् स येषां पिता कुर्यात् तेषां कुर्यात् । (?) पितिर पितामहे च जीवित येषां पितामहः (२) पितिर पितामहे च जीवित नैव कुर्यात् (३).

^{5.} i. e. Father, grandfather, great-grandfather, of course, of the grandfather, who was recently deceased and whose sapindikarana is under consideration, i. e. अस्मित्वामहस्य पितृपितामहम्पितामहानाम्. It should be noted that these two texts of Manu and Viṣṇu do not teach the Sapindikarana of a person who has died out of his order; but it only teaches that his Śrâddha is to be performed by the Ekkodishta rite. This is the case also in other instances of particular kinds of deaths as mentioned later on.

10

15

20

Similarly also of those killed by a cow or by a Brâhmana an absence of the Sapindīkarana must be understood. As says Kâtyâyana:—

"When however a father is killed by a Brâhmana and the like, or has been degraded, or has become an ascetic, or has died in an inverted order, then he (the son) should offer (Pindas) to those persons to whom he (the father) used to offer."

Of the father who is killed by a cow or by a Brâhmaṇa, when an occasion² arises for performing the Sapindi-karaṇa, then passing him over, only the Pārvaṇā S'ráddha of the grandfather and the rest has been

So also in Another Smrti:

"Those men whose issues have been cut off, for them there is no Sapinda. Nor for these should be performed the sixteen $Ekoddishta \ S'r\bar{a}ddhas^3$ " ordained, and thus an absence of the Sapindikarna is to be inferred.

As regards the offering of Pinda, &c. to the mother, there is a doubt as regards the gotra to be used, with For the mother. the husband's or her father's gotra should it be offered, as for both (alternatives), texts are seen. For: "From her own gotra a woman is removed, after the marriage at the completion of the seventh step. With the gotra of her lord should be performed her ceremonies of the Pinda and water." This and the like, are in support of the husband's gotra.

"Abandoning the father's gotra, no ceremony should one perform with the grotra of the husband. In birth certainly, as also in death, for women, is the family of the father". This and similar texts support the father's gotra.

1. i. e. has predeceased his higher ancestors.

2. There is another reading viz. सर्विडीकरणासंभव, which prima facie is tempting, but does not fit in with what follows.

3. But as a matter of usage, good men now-a-days perform Sapin di-karana of such persons though opposed to the texts of Manu and Viṣṇû. Otherwise such deceased persons would always remain in the painful state of purgatory or Preta-Loka. In fact Braḥma Purāṇa endorses this modern innovation; so also is the dictum of the Skanda Purāṇa, Sumāntu and of Hemādri and Madanapārijata. See Bâlambhaṭṭi, page 592, lines 3-18.

Thus, when a doubt has arisen, in the case of the marriages being in the A'sura or the other (unapproved) forms, as also in the case of an 'appointed daughter', it should be with the father's gotra, as in those cases special texts exist, and also as the gift (of a daughter in marriage) has not been completed.

In the cases of the marriages which are performed according to the $Br\hat{a}hma$ and the other approved forms, in such cases according to the maxim² of Vrīhiyava (rice and barley), as well as the maxim of Brihadrathantarasâma, there is only an option.

In these cases also "By that road by which his fathers have travelled, and by which the grandfathers have walked, by that road of the good men should he go, for by so walking he incurs no guilt.", by this text³ according to the family usage and in consonance with it is to be the decision; since in cases other than these, these texts have no application.

Where, however, under the texts, there is no adjustment, nor is there any usage, in such a case, following the text⁴ "one's own satisfaction alone indeed", one is at liberty to follow his own inclination for a decision. As in the case of the text⁵ "Eighth from the conception, or in the Eighth year."

Sapindikarana of In the S'apindikarana of the mother also the Mother. quite conflicting texts are seen. Thus: 'With the grandmother and the rest, the Sapindikarana has been ordained.'

Similarly: "The husband also, the Sapindikarana of the wife, 25 should perform along with his mothers and the rest," thus has been declared by Paithinasi.

"Of the wife dying without a son, the husband should perform her Sapindikarana. With her mother-in-law and the rest alone should be her Sapindikarana."

^{1.} Note that the gift of a daughter in marrige is the only case of a gift, where the last words 'न मम' are not used. There is still a connection left between her and the father.

^{2.} बीहियनगर, बृहद्यन्तरसामगर्—See Jaimini IX. II. 46-49. Where the result is the same, and no particular object appears in stressing one thing, any of a type may be chosen. The rule of vikalpa applies. Where the ordinances are of equal force तुल्यार्थास्त्र विकल्पेरन्।

^{3.} Of Manu Ch. IV. 178.

^{4.} Manu II. 6.

^{5.} See above Verse 14 page p. 44.

Yama has declared this Sapindikarana with the husband.—

"With the one, viz., with the husband (alone) should be performed the Sapindikarana of a woman; because even though dead, she had become one with him with the accompaniment of the mantras, offering of oblations, and (performance of) vows."

5

By Usanas however the Sapindīkaraņa with the maternal grandfather has been declared thus:—

"As of their father with their grandfather, on the completion of full one year, in the same manner, of the mother with the maternal grandfather, they should perform the Sapindikarana."

10

Similarly: "The father with the grandfather should be united, on the completion of full one year, by the sons; so of the mother with the maternal grandfather in the same manner, so has said the adorable S'iva."

Thus among these texts of so many types; when the wife has died without any son, then the husband should The Author's con-perform her Sapindikarana with his own mother clusion.

But if she has followed the deceased father on the funeral pyre, then the son should perform the Sapindikarana of his mother with his father only. A son born from a woman married by the rites of A'sura, &c. as well as a Putrikâ-son (should perform the Sapindikarana of his mother), with his maternal grandfather only (i. e. with her father). One born to a woman married by Brâhma or the like from, may perform the Sapindikarana of his mother with his father, or with his maternal grandfather, or with his paternal grandmother, at his option.

15

20

But here also if there is a fixed family usage, then he must do so according to that usage alone. If the family usage also be uncertain, then under the rule "according to his own satisfaction", he may do as he likes.

25

30

There, moreover, by whichever way, the sapindikarana of the mother has been established, where on the $Anvashtak\bar{a}$ and the like occasions, the mother's $s'r\acute{a}ddha$ has been ordained to be performed separately, such as in the text:

"In the Anvashtakas, as also in the Vrddhi, at Gaya, or on the day of death, the mother's S'raddha one should perform separately; in other cases along with the husband."

there, the Pàrvaṇa S'râddha is to be performed (by associating with the mother) along with the paternal grandmother, &c. only; in other cases, "along with the husband", because in the sapinā of the husband she is entitled to her share of it. Where her Sapinākaraṇa has taken place with the maternal grandfather, there, as she is entitled to a share along with him, it should be done along with him only. As says S'âtâtapa:—"The deceased gets unity of form on the performance of the Sapinākaraṇa with her husband and the fathers; consequently she becomes entitled to share (in the oblations) to them."

In such a case, where, with the maternal grandfather the Sapindīkaraṇa of the mother has been performed, the maternal grandfather's s'rāddha, like the father's s'rāddha, is nitya certainly. But where the the Sapindīkarana of the mother has taken place with her husband, or with the paternal grandmother, there the S'râddha of the maternal grandfather is not nitya. If done there is prosperity; 20 if not done, no objection. This is the conclusion. (253, 254).

Viramitrodaya.

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 253-254.

Pâtrachatushtayam, 'four vessels'; gandhodakatilairyuktam. 'containing perfumes, water, mixed with sesamum'; arghyartham, 'for the purpose of the arghya'; one should prepare in a sapindikarana. There, of the four vessels, of those for the Pitrs with whom the sapindikarana 25 of the Preta is intended, in those vessels while dripping, the dripping in the Preta vessel with the three Rks "ye samanah samanasa etc." prasechayet, 'one should sprinkle' i. e, join. With the object of securing the sprinkling of the drippings from the Preta vessel in particular, by the use of the word preta vessel, by implication, the 30 dropping has been indicated. By the use of the word pra, 'out', an element in addition to that found in the ordinarily ordained arghya, as also a special stress on the portion of the water has been expressed. Vide the text "With the two rks 'ye samana &c.' one should divide the first in three parts "thus having stated in connection with pinda. "This also is the procedure in connection with the proceeding for arghya vessels ".

15

20

S'esham, "the remaining', uncontradictory and comprehended also, rite, pûrvavat 'as before' i. e. like the Pârvaṇa S'râddha, âcharet, one should perform'.

It may be said that by the text 'four vessels, etc', the inference is that it is intended for more than one, and thus the sapindikarana śrāddha would be allied to the Pārana Śrāddha', and in such a case, the absence of the performance by a woman, as also the absence of its performance in connection with a woman, would come to be inferred; to obviate such a doubt, the Author mentions its Ekoddishta character. Etatsapindi-Karanam, 'this śrāddha in which there occurs the joining together of the Pindas, in the form of offering oblations of cooked food intending the same for the deceased, of this nature the Ekoddishtam, 'intended for one', is of the woman 'striyaḥ', is part of the bundle of woman's rights. By the use of the word api 'even', is intended to state, even by the woman. (253-254).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 255.

(One) whose Sapindikarana may take place before the expiry of a year, for him even, food with a water-pot, one should give for one year, to the twice-born. (255).

Mitâksharâ:—Samvatsarâdarvâk Sapindīkaranam yasya kṛtam, before the expiry of full one *Page 80 year whose Sapindikarana has taken place, tasya, for him, intending for him, every day or at least once every month as far as the end of the year, according to one's ability, annam, food, together with a pitcher (full) of water to a Brahmana, dadyat, one should give.

^{1.} For a correct understanding of the long discussion in the Mitâkṣharâ and in this passage in the Viramitrodaya, it is necessary to visualise the several aspects of the Ekoddiṣḥṭa, viz., (1) Primarily, it means the s'râddha which is offered with one piṇḍa only, each of the 16 Śrâddhas culminating at the end of the year in the Åbdika, or death anniversary, when the Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa is properly timed to be performed. (2) Secondly, in cases, as is almost the general custom now, where the Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa takes place on the 11th or the 12th day. In such a case also the 16 Śrâddhâs are performed at their proper periods; and although, as a result of the Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa three piṇḍas are offered, it is essentially Ekoddiṣḥṭa, (3) The third is the performance of the death anniversary S'râddha annually. Here although in form it is Pârvaṇa, in essence it is किशिइस, (4) The real Pârvaṇa is what is performed after the Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa, on occasions other than the death anniversary of the person such as the किश्वाह, अस्कादि, and in the Piiṛ-pakṣha.

15

25

By saying "before the expiry of the year" it is shown by implication that Sapindikarana may take place either on the completion of a year, or before that. As says A's'valâyana! "Now the Sapindikarana at the end of the year or on the twelfth day".

Kâtyâyana also has said—"Then on the completion of the year, Sapindīkaraņa takes place, or when three fortnights have elapsed; or even before, if an auspicious event occurs".

10 (1) On the twelfth day, (2) after three fortnights, (3) when some auspicious event has occurred, (4) or when the year has elapsed; thus four cases have been pointed out.

There, on the twelfth day, the Sapindikarana of the father should be done by son, one who has maintained the Fire; as without Sapindikarana the Pindapitr Yajna cannot be accomplished. Vide the following text:—

"When the performer has maintained the Fire, or the deceased had kept the Fire, then on the twelfth day the Sapindikarana of the father should be done."

But a person who is without the Fire, may perform after three fortnights, or on the occurrence of an auspicious event, or when the year has elapsed.

Here arises a doubt:—When before the end of the year there takes place the Sapindikarana, then should the A doubt. Sapindikarana be performed after having finished the sixteen S'rāddhas or whether, after the performance of Sapindikarana those should be performed at their proper period? This is the doubt because for both alternatives, texts are seen. Thus:—

"Without having offered the sixteen S'râddhas, never should the Sapindatâ be performed; after having finished the sixteen S'râddhas, the Sapindikarana should be performed." The sixteen S'râddhas moreover are:—"On the twelfth day, after three fortnights, Grhya Paris'ishţa III.

^{2.} i.e. वृद्धवसिष्ठ, लोगाक्षि.

on the sixth month, every month, and at the end of the year. These are the sixteen S'râddhas declared by the wise."

Moreover, "Of one even whose Sapindikarana may take place before the expiry of a year, the monthly (S'râddha), and also the water pitcher should be offered to him also during the year."

5

Here, that after performing the Sapindīkaraṇa these sixteen S'rāddhās (or any of the remaining of them) should be performed at their proper time, is the first course, because as their proper time had not arrived, there would be no authority (for its performance) before. And although there is a text saying "after finishing the sixteen S'rāddhas, the Sapindīkaraṇa may be done even before the expiry of the year, still that is a course for (one in) adversity. When however under this rule of adversity before the Sapindīkaraṇa he performs the Preta S'rāddhas, then he should perform them according to the Ekoddiṣhṭa rite.

15

10

When however following the first course, one performs at the proper time only, then in whichever way one performs the annual S'raddha, either as Parvana or as Ekoddishta in a similar manner may he do the monthly S'raddhas. Vide the following text:

20

"Before the Sapindikarana when one performs the sixteen S'râddhas by the method of the Ekoddishṭa he should perform them all. But when he performs the sixteen S'râddhas after Sapindikarana then again, according as he performs the usual annual S'rāddha, so he should do all these."

25

This Sapindikarana, moreover along with the Freta S'rāddha, even where there are brothers who are divided in estate, it is enough that it is performed by one only. It need not be done by all. Because of the following Smṛti:—

"The nava-s'rāddha, the sapinda-s'rāddha, and even sixteen s'rāddhas as well, should be performed by one person only, (even) when they are divided in estate."

30

This Sapindikarana moreover along with the Preta-s'rāddha must necessarily be performed by the sons of those who were not Sannyāsins, as the object is a release from the state of Preta-hood.

25

For the Sannyâsins, however, it must not be performed. As says Usanâ:—

"The Ekoddishta, one should never perform for the Yatis. When the eleventh day (of their death) arrives, the Pārvaṇa is ordained. The Sapindikarṇa for them should not be done by their sons and the rest; by their very taking up of the three-fold staff the condition of Preta-hood is never produced."

If on account of the son not being near, the rite of cremation has been performed by some Sagotra or the like, then by that person even the Preta rites up to the end of ten days should be performed according to the following authority:—

"Whether a Sagotra or an Asagotra, whether a female or a male, whoever offers on the first day, that one should complete it for the ten days'.

15 For the S'ûdras also this should be performed, but without the (recitation of) mantras, on the twelfth day. Vide Viṣnu 2;—

'In the same manner Supindikarana 'without the recitation of the mantras' for the S'ûdras also, on the twelfth day.'

After the Sapindikarana all the annual and the Pârvana 20 S'ráddhas and the rest should be done by the son alone as an obligatory duty, while for others, not obligatory. (255).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions the S'raddha intended for the Preta in the form of the gift of food together with a jar of water

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 255.

Owing to the reason of an auspicious occasion or the like samvatsarādarvāk, before the completion of the year, i.e. in the period intervening between day of death and a year, one whose sapindana S'rāddha happens to be performed, for that Preta, sodakumbham, 'together with a water-jar', annam, 'food,' samvatsaram, 'for one year,' dwije, 'to the twice-born', dadyāt, 'one should give.' By the use of the word api 'also', that much more when the Sapindākarana has not been performed, one should give, becomes established. In the Chapter on the Preta S'râddha, Pâraskara has mentioned the donation of a jar, full of water, and there may arise a wrong impression that by the performance of the Sapindî, the condition of Preta-hood having ceased, this S'râddha, therefore, need not be done. To obviate such wrong impressions this text has been stated. In the text of Pâraskara, however, the word Preta has been used in regard to the deceased alone. This is the import. (255).

^{1.} The त्रिकंड of the Sannyasi.

^{2.} Oh. XXI. 20.

25

The author now mentions the times for the *Ekoddishta*Yâjnavalkya, Verse 256.

So also on the day of death, however, should be 10 performed every month, for the year, and similarly every year; the first on the eleventh day (256).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Mṛtehani pratimāsam, on the day of death, every month, up to the end "of the year."

*Page 77. the Ekoddishṭa should be performed. After the 15 Sapindīkaraṇa pratisaṃvatsarameva, every year only, and Ekoddishṭa only, (and not Pârvaṇa) should be performed;
Âdyam, the first, Ekoddiṣhṭa which is the basic for all subsequent ones (should be performed), ekâdaséhani, on the eleventh day.

If the day of death be not known, then either on the day he hears of it, or on the $am\hat{a}v\hat{a}sy\hat{a}$ day; vide the following Smṛti: "If the day of the death be not known, then on the amâvâsyâ or on the day on which he hears the news." By $am\hat{a}v\hat{a}sy\hat{a}$ is meant the $am\hat{a}v\hat{a}sy\hat{a}$ of the month in which the deceased had started on the journey. Vide the following Smṛti:

"The Ekoddishta offering should be given on the day of (the starting of) the journey out, or on the day of the waning of the moon of that month."

Mṛtehani, on the day of death, Regarding this Jâtukarnya has laid down the following special rule in regard to one who had 30 maintained the sacred fire (Âhitàgni):—

"The S'ráddha which is to be performed after three fortnights should be performed on the day of death only. But the one before, should be got performed from the day of the cremation of the twice-born who had kept the sacred fire."

^{1.} सर्वप्रकृतिभूतं.

20

25

Here the ceremonies for the deceased (Preta) which are to be done before the period of three fortnights, are to be done, in the case of a person keeping the sacred fire, commencing with the day of the cremation. But the Sràddha (which is to be done) after the period of three fortnights should be done on the day of death only.

But in the case of a person who had not kept the sacred fire, all should be done on the day of death only.

Adyamekâdas'eḥani etc., the first on the eleventh day. As regards this, some say that this is illustrative of âs'aucha because under text: "By one who is pure, all ceremonies should be performed" ceremonial purity is a necessary condition (precedent to the performance of all rites), and because: "Now then on the day after the as'aucha is over", and thus by premising in general for all the varnas Viṣḥṇu¹ has laid down the precept for the performance of the Ekoddiṣḥṭa.

But this is incorrect, as it is opposed to the text of Paithinasi viz: "That S'ráddha which is to be done on the eleventh day has been ordained generally. The periods of impurity for the four varnas are different for each one;" and is also opposed to the text of S'ankha viz:—"The first (âdya) S'râddha, though impure, one should perform on the eleventh day. Of the performer (of the S'râddha), purity is considered to be for the time being; afterwards he again becomes impure."

The text of Vishnu introducing generally the subject of as aucha, is also reconcilable as applying to ten days' impurity.

Pratisamvatsaram chaivamiti, and similarly every year; by this, the Lord of Yogis has advised Ekoddishta every year on the anniversary of the day of the death of the deceased; so also Another Smṛti: "Year by year must indeed be performed the

^{1.} Oh. XXI. 1.

10

15

20

25

30

beneficial rite to the mother and the father; without the Daiva he may feast a Brâhmana and offer one pinda only."

Yama also has said:—"Subsequent to the performance of the Sapindikarana, every year the son should perform "separately the Ekoddishta on the anniversary day of death."

Vyasa moreover prohibits the Parvana:

"Abanonding the Ekoddishta, if a man performs the Pârvaṇa, that should be considered as not performed, and he shall be deemed a patricide."

Jamadagni however ordains the Párvaṇa1.

"After having secured the sapindahood according to rites, the Aurasa son should perform the Darśa S'râddha of his father and mother on the anniversary day of death."

S'âtâtapa also says: —"After having performed the Sapindikaraṇa, the learned performer should always perform according to the Párvaṇa rite every year, this is the rule upheld by Chḥâgaleya."

Thus in the conflict of texts the Southerners have thus stated the adjustment: By the Aurasa and the Kṣhetraja The Southerners sons on the anniversary day of the death of their father and mother, the Pârvaṇa alone should be performed, by the Dattaka and others the Ekoddiṣhṭa. Because of this text of Jâtukarṇya:—"Every year by the Pârvaṇa ritual alone the Kṣhetraja and the Aurasa sons should perform; the other ten kinds of sons should perform by the Ekoddiṣhṭa."

That is not correct. There is no mention of the 'day of death'; but on the other hand, the expression is every year. And there are many annual S'râddhas besides that of the death anniversary, such as the $Akshaya\ trt\bar{\imath}y\acute{a}$ and in the months of Mâgha and Vais'âkha and the like others. Therefore, the adjustment regarding the performance of the $P\hat{a}rvana$ and the Ekoddishta on the death anniversary day is not satisfactory. As regards the text of Parasara

^{1,} i. e. in the Parvana method.

20

25

35

"For the father who has attained Devahood, the Aurasa sons should everywhere perform the S'râddha. And generally for men of diverse gotras, for a single person only on the day of the death anniversary,"

This also is not sufficiently adjustive, for its meaning is this: For a father who has attained Devahood, i.e. whose Sapindikarana has been done, always by the Aurasa son should be performed the tri-ancestral rite, i.e., the Pârvaṇa rite. But in regard to those of diverse gotras, i.e., belonging to separate gotras such as the maternal uncle and like, the S'râddha which is to be performed on the day of the death anniversary, that must be by the Ekoddishta only.

Morever, Paithinasi has said that: - "Even after Sapindikarana, the Ekoddishta alone should be observed even by the Aurasa son. Thus Ekoddishta indeed should be performed by the Aurasa son on the day of the death anniversary; after Sapindikarana, for the mother and the father no Párvana."

The Northerners on the other hand, thus suggest the adjustment: On the Amâvâsyâ or during the The Northerners, dark half of the month of Bhadrapada, if the death anniversary falls, the Pârvana rite, on any other day the Ekoddishta only.

"For him whose death occurred on the amávasya or during the Preta fortnight, there the Parvana should be performed, and never the Ekoddishta."

That also the elders do not approve, because the text above quoted is of uncertain origin, while there are many texts of well ascertained origin, which declare that the Pārvana should be performed only on the anniversary day of death, and also because if be confined to those persons only, who had died on the amāvāsyā day, or during the Preta-paksha, there would be an unneces. 30

sary curtailment of its scope; and further, the text * Page 78. which is of a general character would be rendered meaningless. There alone is a general text curtailed by a special text where as a result of the appreciation of the relationship between the general and the particular rule both rules yield a useful meaning. As "In him (the hotā) should recite seventeen smàidhen?" this text which appears without any context enjoining seventeen wooden sticks, has its scope in the ectype or the modified sacrifice only, and so, this sentence about the seventeen sticks, having found a scope through its relationship with the general characteristics of the Samidhenï firesticks, it is applied to the modificed sacrifies like Mitrâvinda and the like, where it teaches new (apûrva) relationship in the subject-matter of Mitrâvinda sacrifices, becomes merged (in it).

10

15

But here both kinds of texts, having the death-day as their subject, do not both find their scope under this explanation. Therefore, here, excluding as the alternative of the Ekoddishia, it is proper to regard the Pârvaṇa rite as a restrictive rule.

Nor, moreover, would it be proper adjustment of the texts by treating the Ekoddishta texts as having for their subject the deathday of the father and mother, and the Pârvaṇa texts as having for their subject the death-day of relatives other than the parents. For in both,

1. This is the second Adhikarana, in the sixth Pâda of the Third Chapter of Jaimini VI. 9. It is called the सामिधानीनां सप्तद्शसंख्याया विकृतिगामिता अधिकरणम्. See Jaimini Nyâya Mâlâ pp. 179-180 सप्तद्शारित न्याय:।

2. सामिधनी—Wooden pieces for being thrown into the fire. See Aitareya Bráhmana I.1.

- 3. अनारम्य श्रूपते i.e. the श्रुति text has no context to any other text or topic—a statement in the abstract. It is a rule which stands by itself, out of connection with some particular sacrifice to which it might be referred, so that it might be considered as a general rule "This is called the अनारम्य निधि—An abstract principle, (see Dr. Thibaut's Translation of Arthasangraha.)
- 4. प्रज्ञाति विकृति—प्रकृति is arche-type, the model or bases; विकृति, the ectype, or the modified forms.
- 5. There is a mistake in the print here at l. 4 on page 78. For मिन्नविन्द्राद्यधिकारात्पूर्व, read मिन्नविन्द्राद्यधिकारापूर्व—(अधिकार + अपूर्व). अपूर्वसंबंध—New relationship.
- 6. In order to understand this passage it is necessary to refer to Jaimini's Pūrvamīmāmsa III. 6.9. A discussion is held in that Adhyāya regarding texts which may be applicable to a particular sacrifice, and the other, a general statement not connected with any context. Both of these treat of the same subject and both are to be used in model sacrifice. Thus two texts, bearing on the same subject speak of the same thing. This is a case of tautology. How is it to be obviated? A text which is directly connected with a context is to be used in a model sacrifice only; and all general texts, not connected with any context, are to be introduced into a modified sacrifice".

10

20

30

the words "father," "mother," and "sons" exist. Thus in: "After the Sapindikarana, every year the Ekoddishta of the mother and the father should he performed by the sons on the day of the death anniversary."

Similarly,: "Having finished the Sapindikarana the Aurasa son should perform the Dars'a S'rāddha on the anniversary of the death of his mother and father."

Although it has been maintained by some that on the death-day of mother and the father, one who has maintained the fire should perform; the Pārvaṇa, and the one without the fire, the Ekoddiṣhṭa, and quote this text of Sumantu: "Year by year the twice-born son who has maintained the Fire, should perform the Pārvaṇa for his parents, while the wise who is without Fire should perform the Ekoddiṣhṭa on the anniversary of their death."

Yet, that should be discarded, as it is opposed to the opinion of the good e. g. in the following Smrti text:—

"Those Brâḥmaṇas who maintain many sacred fires, and those also who have only one Fire, for them after the Sapinḍīkaraṇa should be the Ekoddishṭa, and never the Pârvaṇa."

Here this is the conclusion:

For the Sannyâsins, on the death-day the Párvaṇa alone should be performed by the son. Vide the following text of Prachetâs:—

"For a Yati there is no Ekoddishta here for he shas 25 taken up the triple staff, and because there is no Sapindikarana for him here. For him there is always the Parvana."

For those who have died on the amâvâsyâ or during the Preta-pakṣha¹ there is the Párvaṇa alone. "Of one who has died on the amâvâsyâ or during the Preta-pakṣha &c." this text as has been stated before being of a Niyama character, where the day of death is any other, there is an option, either the Pàrvaṇa or the Ekoddiṣhṭa like the maxim of "barley and rice." But where there is a well ascertained family usage this option even becomes limited;

^{1.} The dark fortnight of Bhadrapada which is sacred to the Manes.

^{2.} Vyavasthita Vikalpa.

ភ

10

15

20

25

30

where no such option, exists, it is at his will. Thus no need of prolixity. (256).

Viramitrodaya.

While pointing out the periods for the masika (monthly) and other śraddhas, the Author mentions the masika and other śraddhas

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 256.

Starting with the death, every month, on the date of the death, i.e., in the fortnight of the death, on the date of the death, śraddha should be performed. This is inferred from the context of the Chapter. That itself is called the masika: By the use of the word tu, the two sixmonthly śraddhas are separated from the death-day śraddha: "When six months are short by one day or three days, and also the year, then fall the six-monthly śrāddhas" in this text the separate periods have been indicated. By the use of the word tu a second time, after the first year; 'every year', pratisamvatsaram, i.e., year by year, by the use of the word cha on the day of death, are inferred. "After this, every year. to the Preta, one should give food on the day on which he died", vide the text of Kâtyâyana. Evam, 'thus', in the aforestated Ehoddishta ritual. This, moreover, follows for the three also. Adyam, 'the first', i.e., the first śrâddha of the sixteen preta śrâddhas; ekâdêśehani, 'on the eleventh day', i.e., after the cessation of the death impurity in point, vide the text of Vishnu2 "after the cessation of the death impurity ". (256).

With the exception of the daily Nitya śráddha the following rule is being stated as applicable to all the remaining S'rāddhas

Yajnavalkya, Verse 257.

The Pindas, however, one should give to a cow, or to a goat, or to the Brâḥmaṇas, or even into the fire or into water, one may throw. While the Brâḥmaṇas are still present, one should not sweep the leavings of the food of the twice-born. (257).

^{1.} of Katyayana. see Nirnaya Sindhu.

^{2.} Oh. XXI. 1.

10

Mitâkṣharâ:—Of the pindas or a single pinda, which have been offered before, this is the method of disposal.

The method of disposal To a cow, or to a goat, or to the Brâhmana who of Pindas.

asks for them, Pindân dadyât, one should give the Pindas; agnau, into the fire, or fathomless water, jale wâ prakṣhipet, one may throw. Satsu vipreṣhu, while the Brâhmanas are still present at the place of dinner, dwijoch-chhiṣhṭam na mârjayet, one should not sweep, i.e. should not remove the leavings of the food of the twice-born. (257)

Viramitrodaya.

The Author states the methods of disposal of the pindas offered at the śrâddha

Yajnavalkya, Verse 257.

To a cow, to the aja, or a goat, or to a Brāḥmaṇa, one should give the piṇḍas, or agnau, 'into the fire', wâ, 'or', jale, 'into the water', prakṣhipet, 'one may throw'. By the use of the word api, 'even', are included other modes of disposal mentioned in texts such as: "the middle-most piṇḍa, the wife eats, when desirous of having a son', and the like. By the use of the word tu, 'however', when there are proper recipients for the S'rāddha food, the Author distinctly mentions different modes of disposal. Moreover, while the S'rāddha Brāḥmaṇas are still continuing at the place of the S'rāddha, dwijochchḥiṣhṭam na mārjayet, 'one must not clean the leavings of food of the Brāḥmaṇas,' i.e., should not carry away. (257).

25 By regard to the particular kind of eatable, the Author mentions the particular fruit.

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 258, 259.

With the havishya food, verily for a month; for a year, however, with the milk-rice, with the fish, the meat of gazelles, mutton, the flesh of birds, the flesh af kids, the flesh of spotted deer; (258).

The flesh of the black antelope, that of the ruru deer, the meat of boars, the meat of hares, respectively for a period progressively inscreasing by a month, are satisfied, when offered here, to Grandfathers. (259).

15

20

25

30

Mitâksharâ:—Havishyam, fit for offering at a sacrifice, *Page 79. such as sesamum grains, rice &c., as says Manu¹:

"With sesamum grains, rice, barley, mâṣha beans, water, roots, or fruits, which have been given according to the prescribed rules, the ancestors of men are satisfied for one month."

offered at S'râddha here together to complete the sentence.

This food is called havishya food. "With this food the ancestors are satisfied for a month"—this Kinds of food sentence which is not here, should be read

Pâyasena, with milk-rice, rice boiled in cow's milk, 10 samvatsaram, for a year, vide the Smṛti²: "One year, however, with cow-milk and milk-rice."

"With the fish" i.e. with the fish that is allowable, such as $p\bar{a}thina$ &c., of that, this, mâtsya, of the fish. harina, gazelle, the copper-coloured deer; ena, the black antelope, is black coloured. As described in the Ayurveda: "By Ena is to be known the black antelope, while the copper colored is called harina." of that this, is hârinaka.

The sheep is called urabhra, of that, is, aurabhra, mutton.

S'âkunam, of birds, i. e. of birds allowed to be eaten as food. Chḥâga is a goat; its meat is called Chḥagam the flesh of kids.

Pṛṣhat is the spotted deer. The flesh of the spotted deer is called pāṛṣhata. Eṇa is the black antelope, its meat is called aiṇam. Ruru is the same as Sámbara; the meat of it is called raurava. Varāha is the wild boar; its meat is called vārāham. The meat of s'as'a or hare is called s`āsam. With the meat of these offered to the pitṛṣ 'with the haviṣḥṣa food, for a month,' having expressed thus, for a month more than that, yathākramam, respectively, for a period progressively increasing by a month are satisfied the Pitṛṣ (258-259).4

1. Ch. III, 267.

^{2.} of Manu Ch. III. 271.

^{3.} तस्येदं; the word मात्स्यम् is formed by the affix am added to मत्स्य. See Pâṇini IV—3. 154.

^{4.} Compare Manu III. 267-271.

15

30

35

Viramitrodaya.

By regard to the particular kind of things used for the S'raddha, and by regard to the particular place and time, the Author states the period of satisfaction by means of four (verses)

Yajnavalkya, Verses 258, 259.

Havishyam, 'sacrificial', fit for a sacrificial oblation; annam, 'food,' such as sesamum, paddy, barley; by it being given-thus is the construction of words by an inversion of texts. In the same manner, further also. Pitamahah, 'the grandfathers', masam, 'month', i. e. for 10 the interval of a month, abhi, 'from all considerations', trpyanti, 'are satisfied'. By the word pitamaha, 'grand-father', is the demonstration of all the pitrs. So also Manu,1 "By sesamum grains, paddy, barley, black-beans, roots, waters and even by fruit, being given in accordance with the ordinance, the pitrs of men become satisfied for a month". The word wai is used to fill up the foot (of the stanza). By the excellent rice and milk-pudding for a period extending over a year, the grand-fathers become satisfied. Thus is the connection everywhere. By the use of the word tu, 'however', the Author discriminates a shorter period. By the fish and the rest, in this S'raddha, when given, respectively i. e. in the order of the one next following by the addition of 20 a month i. e. of one month each in addition to the period indicated, extending to that, they become satisfied. Thus, matsyaih, 'with fish' i. e. the flesh of the fish, for two months they remain satisfied, thus in this order it should be understood. Aurabhram, 'of a ram'. 25 S'akunam, 'of birds', i. e. of birds fit to be eaten as food; Chhaqam, 'of a goat', belonging to a goat; Prshat, is a spotted deer; of that, is parshatam; Enah is a black antelope; of that is ainam; Ruruh, a particular kind of deer; of that is rauravam; varaham, belonging to a wild hoar; sáśam, belonging to the hare. (258, 259).

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 260-261.

He who gives "The meat of rhinoceros, or of mahā-s'alka or honey, or the hermits' food even, or the flesh of the red goat, or the mahâ-s'āka, or the flesh of vârdhrinasa, (260), or gives offerings while at Gaya, he causes all that to give endlessness to the Pitrs, so also on the varshâ-trayo-das'i especially when the moon happens to be in the asterism of Maghà that day. (261).

^{. 1.} Ch. III. 267.

Mitakshara:-Moreover, Khadga, rhinoceros, the meat of that, mahâ-s'alka, a kind of fish; madhu, honey, collected by the bees; munyannam, the hermits' food, namely, all kinds of forest produce such as the nīvāra, &c.; loha, is a red goat, its flesh is lohâmisham; mahasaka, i.e. the kálasaka; várdhrinasa, the white goat, "Drinking through three (ends), emaciated in the organs, the white old male goat, such a one the Yajnikas called the wardhrinasa, (useful) in s'rāddha rites". Yājñikah, sacrificer, is well known; Tripibah, because while drinking, his two ears and the tongue also touch the water, such a one; he drinks through three (organs), therefore he is called tripibah. Of that, i.e., of the wardhrinasa, mansam yaddadati, gayasthascha the flesh of this vardhrinasa, and also that which one gives while at Gaya, anything, even vegetables, which while at Gaya one gives. The force of cha, and, is to indicate that also which one offers at Gangādvâra, &c. "At Gangàdvâra, Prayàga, Naimisha, Pushkara, at Gayâ, the S'râddha offered, attains Arbuda as well as imperishableness."

A'nantyamas'nute, enjoys endlessness, i. e. he gets the merit of being the cause of conducing to endlessness as the resulting fruit. The clause 'enjoys endlessness' is to be connected with each.

Similarly, on the vars'â-trayodas'i, i.e., the thirteenth day of the dark fortnight of Bhâdrapada, especially when it is in conjunction with the Maghà asterism, whatever, (even a trifle), that is given, all that conduces to endlessness; such is the connection with the preceding clause.

Here although the hermits' food, meat, honey and the like have been mentioned in general for all the varnas as fit to be offered at a s'rāddha, still the adjustment mentioned by Pulastya is worthy to be respected: "The hermits' food is said to be for the Brāḥmaṇa, meat for the Kṣḥatriya and the Vais'ya; and the offering of honey for the S'ūdra, while for all, all that is unincongruous."

The meaning of this is this: The hermit's food, such as the $n\bar{v}ara$, &c., mentioned above as fit for a s'raddha, that is the principal offering for a Brahmana, capable of yielding the entire fruit, while all the (varieties of) meat mentioned above, are, for the Kṣhatriyas and

5

10

15

20

25

30

35

Vais'yas, the principal. And what has been mentioned above as $K_{\$}haudra$, that is fit for the $S'\hat{u}dra$. And whatever is outside these three, that, if unincongruous, i.e., unprohibited, such as 'the $v\hat{a}stuka^1$ &c.', or which has been ordained, such as the 'sacrificial food, and $k\hat{a}las'\bar{a}ka$, and the like,' that is capable of giving the entirety of fruit to all the four classes. (260, 261).

Viramitrodaya, 260, 261.

Of a Khadga, i. e. 'a rhinoceros', flesh; mahdsalka, 'with big films', the robita and the like fish; flesh belonging to these is mahasalkam; 'mahasalka is a salkah' so Medhatithi; madhu, 'honey' is well-known; munyannam, 'heremit's food' such as the nivara grain. By the use of the word cha, 'and also' any edible mixed with honey; vide the text of Yama: "Whatever is (offered) mixed with money, that is calculated for (yielding) unendedness. " Loho, i. e. 'the red ram,' its flesh, meat; mahas'akam, kalas'akam, particular varieties of pot herbs. known as ladicha, Wardhrinasasya, 'of the wardhrinasa,' such as has been descriptively defined in Nigama thus: "Drinking through three (ends), with emaciated organs, white male of a goat, such a one, the yajñikas call the wardhrinasa useful in Pitr rites. With a black neck, red veins, and white plumage—such a bird is called the wardhrinasa, thus is 20 the nigama pronouncement." The flesh of such a one; by the use of the word cha, the flesh of a wardhrinasa, a particular bird, secondly defined in Nigama. Such a thing, which one gives that, the meal of a goat and all that, whatever one donates when at Gaya, or whichever thing one gives on the 13th of the monsoon, or on the 13th of the second half 25 of a month, or on the magha constellation, all that and in particular in an enhanced: way, anantyam, 'unendedness' i. e. pervading over a kalpa, he secures, i. e. occupies as the means of the satisfaction of the Pitrs. The word eva. 'also', moreover, is indicative of the resulting fruit from the flesh of a rhinoceros and the like, quite independently of each other, and is connected with all. By the expression 'Gayasthascha', 'and also, one, when at Gaya', by the word cha equality with gaya has been stated, and the expression is indicative of the inclusion of one staying at any holy place, where he has purified himself. By the word tatha, 'similarly', are included the periods stated by Yama viz., "On that in the month of A'shadha, or the Kartika, or the Magha, whoever gives satisfaction to three or four Brahmanas preceded by the worship of the

^{1.} A kind of pot-herb known os Wathuwa. Amara II 4-158,

Pitrs, that is declared as securing unendedness for him." The plural number in the expression Maghasu, 'in the Maghas', is used by regard to the many stars which make up the constellation, or by regard to it individually. By the word cha, 'and also', is included the period of Rahu's attack as stated by Yama thus: 'The S'raddha offered at the appearance of Rahu, is calculated (to last in its results) as far as the moon and stars (continue)". (260-261).

The Author mentions special fruits resulting from (offerings on) particular days

Yájňavalkya, Verses 262, 263, 264.

A daughter, the husband of the daughter, and indeed, cattle, good sons, also bets, husbandry, commerce, the two-hoofed and one-hoofed animals, likewise. (262).

Endowed with the Brâhma lustre the sons, gold and silver with base metals, the superiority of 15 birth, and, one offering the s'râddha always and all desires obtains (263):

beginning from the first day, and excepting the fourteenth day, for those who have been killed by weapons, to these on that day is offered. (262-264).

Mitâkṣharā:—Kanyām, A daughter, possessing beauty, (auspicious) signs, and character; kanyâ vedino, the husband of the daughter, i.e., the son-in-law possessing intelligence, beauty and auspicious signs; pasavaḥ, heasts, small beasts such as goats, &c., satsutâḥ, good sons, who are well-behaved; dyûtam, bets, success in gambling; kṛṣhiḥ, agriculture, i.e., agricultural yield; vâṇijyam, commerce, i.e., profit in commerce; dwisafâḥ, two-hoofed such as the cow and the like; ekasafâḥ, one-hoofed, such as horses and the rest.

Brahmavarchasvinâh putrâh, sons possessing Brahma-lustre, Brahmavarcha is the luminous energy generated by the study of the Vedas and its observances; those possessing that. Svarna-rūpye gold and sülver; with the exception of these. The metals like bronze, lead, &c., are called kupyaka, base metals.

10

õ

20

25

30

20

jati-s'raishthyam, superiority of birth, the excellance of one's family; sarvakâmâh, all the desires, what is desired is called a desire, such as heaven, sons, beasts, &c. These fourteen kinds of fruits, beginning with a daughter etc., one offering S'râddhas on the fourteen days beginning with the first day of the dark fortnight and ending with amâvâsyà with the exception of the fourteenth day, obtains in the respective order1.

Those who are killed by weapons, to them one should offer s`râddha on the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight by the Ekoddishta rite, provided they have not been killed by Brahmanas and the like others. As says the following Smrti text:-

"Even of the father who has been placed on a par, but who was killed by weapons, the Ekoddishta should be performed by the sons on the fourteenth day of the Mahalaya."

'Placed on a par' i.e. for whom Sapindikarana has been 15 performed.

During the Mahalaya, on the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight of the month of Bhàdrapada, of one killed by a weapon alone should the S'râddha be performed and of no other, thus is this stated as a restrictive rule Niyama2; and not that of a person killed by weapons on the fourteenth day only. And, therefore, that on the day of the anniversary of death or on other days, even of a person killed by weapon, the sraadha should be performed for him in due course as it occurs, and not that on fourteenth day of the dark 25 fortnight of the Bhâdrapada only. Thus is this rule to be understood. Vide this text of S'aunaka:

"In the dark fortnight of praushthapada, as well as every month likewise." (262, 263, 264).

¹ Thus of the fourteen days or tithis, the giver of s'araddha obtains these fourteen rewards respectively, e.g., the performer of śrâddha on pratipad gets a good daughter, on dvitiya or the second day of the moon gets a good son-in-law, on the third day of the moon gets a large stock of small beasts like goats, &c. and so on.

^{2.} नियम: पाक्षिके सति—Therefore, in such a case there are two courses open; either on the day of death or on the fourteenth of the dark half of Bhâdrapada; and not on the fourteenth only.

Viramitrodaya

Now the Author mentions the Kamya S'râddhâs on the dates and also the resulting fruits

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 262, 263, 264

Excepting ehâm, 'one', viz. Chaturdashim, 'the fourteenth,' Varjayitwâ, 'excluding,' always and on all dates for each one beginning with the first and the rest, the S'râddhadaḥ, 'one offering the S'râddha' i. e., one who performs the S'râddha, Kanyâdīn, 'the daughter and the rest', obtains respectively.

Here the days should be understood as occuring in the second half 10 (of a month). Vide the text: 'amâvâsyâm sarvakâmâḥ,' 'on the amávâsyá, all desires'.

Kanyâ, 'daughter', i. e. a child in the form of a female; Kanyâvedino, 'daughter's husbands' i.e., the sons-in-law; Paśavaḥ, 'beasts', principally the sheep etc. Sutâḥ, 'sons,' i.e. the Aurasa sons. In the reading 'Paśun vai sat sutânapi' the meaning of the word 'Sat' is 'law abidingness'. Dyuṭam, 'bets' i. e. success in bets. Kṛshi-wânijyâpade, the words 'Kṛshi' and 'Wânijya' (agriculture and commerce) are used in the sense of profuse profits in the undertakings; Dwiśafāḥ 'two-hoofed', such as the cow and the like; Ehaśafâḥ, 'one-hoofed', such as the horse and the like. Here, even in the compound, for each word are the days connected. (262).

Brahmavarchasam, 'Brahmavarchasa' is the special lumination generated by the study of the Vedas; those possessing that, are Brahmavarchaswinah, 'endowed with the Brahma lustre'; Putrah, 'sons'; Swarmarupye, 'gold and silver together'; Kupyam, is 'base metal' other than gold and silver, such as lead, bronze etc.; Tatsahite, 'together with that', that is together with the base-metal. Here, where can the base metal be connected at the end of the day? There the mention together is solely by regard to their connection with the second half.

Jñyâtiśraiśthyam, 'the superiority of birth', i.e., the excellence of ones' family; Sarve Kâmâh 'all the desires' stated here, such as the daughter and the rest, in all thirteen; here, by the use of the words api 'even', and tathâ 'also', are included the various kinds of resulting fruits stated by several sages. These, moreover, have not been pointed out here through fear of prolixity. (263).

S'astrena tu, 'by weapon however'. The word weapon is inclusive by implication of poison, and the like, that says Marichi: "Of those, who were killed by poison, weapons, beasts, serpents, by animals, or by

15

20

25

30

35

30

Brahmanas, the worship shall be on the Chaturdasi day. Of the others it has been censured". Here death by poison indicates by implication death otherwise than by disease. Since by way of brevity they have been dealt with in one clause, such as 'in regard to the course of conduct. in pursuance of the preceptor.' Evam cha, 'And Thus' of one who has died 5 of child-labour, or one who has destroyed herself after her husband, the S'raddha comes to be established to be as of one who was killed by weapon. Tatra, 'there' means on the Chaturdasi day, these Śrâldhâs are offered. Here by the use of the word 'tu' are separated those who were killed not by weapon. The word wai, 'indeed' is by way of filling up the gap. Moreover, this Śrâidha for those killed by weapon is in the form of the Ekoddishta. Vide the text: 'That of those killed by weapon should be performed by the Ekoddishta rite'. The resulting fruit of this stated in the Chapter on Kanya performances should be seen as stated by Harita: "For the Chaturdasi, however, one who 15 desires prosperity." Hence, also premising 'now the Kamyas', Kâty yana has stated: "Of one killed by weapon, on the Chaturdasi day." On the fourteenth of the second-half of the month of As'wing the S'râddha, although the Nitya also. Vide the text: "For those who had perished in a battle or have fallen into the water, fire or by Bhrqupatana1 20 the worship shall be on the chaturdasi day. On the amarasya day, however, when with a special desire". (262-264).

By regard to specific asterisms, the Author now mentions the specific fruit

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 265, 266, 267, 268.

Heaven, offspring, virility, bravery, land, strength, a son, pre-eminance, good luck, prosperity, leadership, welfare, (265) unresisted authority, commerce and the like, also absence of disease, fame, freedom from sorrow, the highest end, (266) wealth, the Vedas, success in medical treatment, baser metals, cows, goat, and sheep,

^{1.} AUTHAT—The special ceremony by which one wishing to destroy himself may do so. Shortly stated it consists of the individual after performing the necessary rites prescribed to take a plunge into the deep waters of the Ganges or throw himself into fire; and for this, special confluences are generally mentioned as proper places. A look at these and the contemplation of the rapid flow of waters offers justification for the choice recommended.

etc., horses, long life; one who offers S'râddha according to rules, (267).

on these asterisms beginning with $Krttik\bar{a}$ and ending with Bharani shall obtain all these objects of desires respectively', in a spirit of faith, devotion, and who has discarded arrogance and spite. (265-268).

5

Mitâksharâ:—Beginning with Krttikâ and ending with Bharani for any asterism, one who offers a s'râddha, he, respectively, in the order enumerated beginning with 'heaven' up to 'long life' obtains the objects of desires, provided he has faith and the spirit of devotion, and has discarded arrogance and spite.

10

Astika, "one who has faith," one who is a believer.

S'raddadhânah, who has devotion, one who is endowed with great reverence. Vyapetamadamatsarah,

*Page 81 who has discarded mada 'arrogance' ie. pride; matsaraḥ, 'spite', jealousy; free from these two;

svarga, heaven, a condition of intense happiness; apatyam, offspring, (whether male or female) without any specification; ojas, strength, exhuberance of one's own power; s'aurya, bravery, i. e. fearlessness; kshetra, land, i.e. having crop; balam, strength, i.e. bodily strength; putra, a son possessing good qualities; s'râishthyam, pre-eminence i. e. amongst kinsmen. Saubhagyam, good luck i. e. popularity among people; samrddhih, prosperity of wealth etc; mukhyatâ, leadership, front position; subham, welfare in general; pravrttachakratâ, unresisted authority, i.e. uncontradicted command; vânijyaprabhrtayah, commerce and the like such as trade, agriculture, money-lending, cow-keeping etc., arogitvam 'absence of disease' i. e. freedom from disease; yas'ah, fame, distinction. Vītas'okatâ, freedom from sorrow, the absence of grief caused by the separation from what is desired; parama gatih, the highest end, the attainment of the world of Brahman; dhanam, wealth, such as gold and the rest; The Vedas like the Rk-veda and others;

25

20

30

^{1.} व्याह्मपम्—respectivly, i. e. the performance on the nakshtras beginning with kṛttikâ & ending with Maghā yields respectively the results according to the time of the performance, i.e. one performing on Kṛttika obtains heaven; on Rohini, offspring; on Mṛgaśīrṣha, strength; and so on.

bhishakṣiddhiḥ, success in medical treatment, realisation of the fruit of medicines; kuppyam, metals other than gold and silver, such as copper &c; gâvaḥ, cows, are well-known; ajâschâvayascha as'vascha, so also, the goats, sheep, and horses; âyur, long life, longevity, (265, 266, 267, 268).

Viramitrodaya 265-268.

The Anthor mentions the Krttika and other Kamya S'raddhas Yajnavalkya, Verses 265, 266, 267, 268.

Astikah, 'believer' i. e. who has accepted the authoritativeness of 10 the Vedas; S'raddadhanah, 'devout' i. e. who has a firm faith in the certainty of results accruing in a vaidic performance; Madah, 'arrogance' i. e. pride; Matsarah, 'Spite in the form of malice', these two are excluded from whom, such a one is Vyapetamada-matsarah, one who has driven arrogance and spite. By the word cha is added purity. 15 Thus qualified, one who Krttikadi bharanyantam S'raddham Vidhivat, commencing with the Krttika and ending with Bharani offers S'raddha according to the ordinances' i.e. in conformity to the ordinance of the S'astras, Samyak, 'well' i. e. specially characterised by the special features such as proper recipients etc., prayachchhati, 'offers i. e. gives i. e. in short performs; Sa, 'he' iman Kaman apnuyat, 'shall obtain the fruition of the following desires.' Which are these? anticipating this question, the Author says 'Heaven etc.'. Ojah, 'virility' i. e. lustrous energy. Balam, 'strength' i. e. power. sauryam, 'bravery' i. e. fearlessness. S'raishthyam, 'pre-eminence' i. e. the prominent position 25 among the kinsmen. Saubhagyam, 'good luck' i. e. popularity with people. Sameddhih, 'prosperity', i. e. accumulation of wealth and the like. Mukhyata, 'leader-sship' i.e. pre-eminance among the S'ubham, 'good'. Kalyanam, 'welfare'. Pravrttachakrata. 'unresisted authority,' i. e. uncontradicted command; Vânijya-pra-30 bhratayah, 'commerce and the like', the resulting fruits of trade, agriculture etc. Parama gatih, 'the highest end' i. e. the attainment of the region of Brahma. Vedah, 'the knowledge of the Vedas', Bhis'aksiddhih, 'success in medical treatment' i. e. realization of the fruit of medicines. Ajavikam, 'the goat and sheep'. In this expression each goes with the two nakshtras. Ajah, chhagah', 'a goat. Avih, 'a ram' (sheep); the prefix ham, is indicative of its own meaning. A'yuh, 'life' longevity. The rest is well-known. The word hi is for the preservation of the metre. The words tatha and cha are indicative, as before, of the inclusion of resulting fruits stated by other

10

20

25

R shis. The word eva, in an inverse order is with a view to single out an unbeliever or a similar other performer. (265-268).

"For a period progressively increasing by a month are satisfied, the grandfathers, when offered here" by An objection. this it is shown that the ancestors obtain satisfaction through S'ràddha; that is unreasonable; for men gone to heaven or hell as the result of their own acts, it being impossible to have satisfaction by food and drink &c., offered by the sons &c.; and even if it be possible, how when they themselves are powerless, can they award the fruits of heaven &c? So the Author says

Yajnavalkya, Verses 269, 270.

The Vasus, the Rudras, and the sons of Aditi. the Pitaras, the deities of S'râddha, give satisfaction to Pitrs of men when they are gratified by the s'râddha offering (269).

The ancestors of men being thus satisfied, give life, progeny, wealth, learning, heaven, emancipation, pleasures; and they confer even a kingdom when gratified, the men's grandfathers (269-270).

Mitakshara:—It is not that merely Devadatta and the like who become the objects of offerings at a S'raddha performance are indicated by the words Pitr and the rest, but they are referred to along with the presiding deities also, such as Vasu and the rest. As by the word Devadatta and the like not merely the physical body, nor the soul merely, of that person, but the souls qualified by the

1. See Verse 259 above p. 524.

अस्मत्पितृ-पितामह-प्रपितामहानां छष्ण-रामचंद्र-नारायण शर्मणां वस्र-रुद्र-आदित्ये-स्वलपाणाम् &c. S.milarly in the case of women thus.—

अस्मन्मातृ-पितामही-प्रपितामहीनां रुक्तिमणी-जानकी-लक्ष्मी शर्मणां वछ-रुद्-आदित्य-स्वरूपणाम् &c.

^{2.} See note No. 5 above on p. 508, and No. 2. on p. 464. Along with each Pitr invoked by the names they bore in this world, they are each linked to the deities or devatas corresponding to their grade in the trio or trayi made up by them, e.g. supposing that the deceased father was named Kṛṣhṇa, and his father Ramachandra, and his father Nâráyaṇa, the invocation by the performer of his Pitr's together with the Pitr devatas would be like this:—

bhishaksiddhih, success in medical treatment, realisation of the fruit of medicines; kuppyam, metals other than gold and silver, such as copper &c; gâvaḥ, cows, are well-known; ajâschâvayascha as'vascha, so also, the goats, sheep, and horses; âyur, long life, longevity, (265, 266, 267, 268).

Viramitrodaya 265-268.

The Author mentions the Krttika and other Kamya S'raddhas Yajnavalkya, Verses 265, 266, 267, 268.

Astikah, 'believer' i. e. who has accepted the authoritativeness of 10 the Vedas; S'raddadhanah, 'devout' i. e. who has a firm faith in the certainty of results accruing in a vaidic performance; Madah, 'arrogance' i. e. pride; Matsarah, 'Spite in the form of malice', these two are excluded from whom, such a one is Vyapetamada-matsarah, one who has driven arrogance and spite. By the word cha is added purity. 15 Thus qualified, one who Krttikadi bharanyantam S'raddham Vidhivat, commencing with the Krttika and ending with Bharani offers S'raddha according to the ordinances' i.e. in conformity to the ordinance of the S'astras, Samyak, 'well' i. e. specially characterised by the special features such as proper recipients etc., prayachchhati, 'offers i. e. gives 20 i. e. in short performs; Sa, 'he' iman Kaman apnuyat, 'shall obtain the fruition of the following desires.' Which are these? anticipating this question, the Author says 'Heaven etc.'. Ojah, 'virility' i. e. lustrous energy. Balam, 'strength' i. e. power. sauryam, 'bravery' i. e. fearlessness. S'raishthyam, 'pre-eminence' i. e. the prominent position 25 among the kinsmen. Saubhaqyam, 'good luck' i. e. popularity with people. Samrddhih, 'prosperity', i. e. accumulation of wealth and the like. Mukhyata, 'leader-sship' i.e. pre-eminance among the assemblies. S'ubham, 'good'. Kalyanam, 'welfare'. Pravrttachakrata, 'unresisted authority,' i. e. uncontradicted command; Vanijya-pra-30 bhratayah, 'commerce and the like', the resulting fruits of trade, agriculture etc. Parama gatih, 'the highest end' i. e. the attainment of the region of Brahma. Vedah, 'the knowledge of the Vedas'. Bhis'aksiddhih, 'success in medical treatment' i. e. realization of the fruit of medicines. Ajavikam, 'the goat and sheep'. In this expression each goes with the two nakshtras. Ajah, chhaqah', 'a goat. Avih, 'a ram' (sheep); the prefix kam, is indicative of its own meaning. A'yuh, 'life' longevity. The rest is well-known. The word hi is for the preservation of the metre. The words tatha and cha are indicative, as before, of the inclusion of resulting fruits stated by other

10

20

25

R. shis. The word eva, in an inverse order is with a view to single out an unbeliever or a similar other performer. (265-268).

"For a period progressively increasing by a month are satisfied, the grandfathers, when offered here" by An objection. this it is shown that the ancestors obtain satisfaction through S'ràddha; that is unreasonable; for men gone to heaven or hell as the result of their own acts, it being impossible to have satisfaction by food and drink &c., offered by the sons &c.; and even if it be possible, how when they themselves are powerless, can they award the fruits of heaven &c? So the Author says

Yājnavalkya, Verses 269, 270.

The Vasus, the Rudras, and the sons of Aditi. the Pitaras, the deities of S'râddha, give satisfaction to Pitrs of men when they are gratified by the s'râddha offering (269). 15

The ancestors of men being thus satisfied, give life, progeny, wealth, learning, heaven, emancipation, pleasures; and they confer even a kingdom when gratified, the men's grandfathers (269-270).

Mitakshara:—It is not that merely Deradatta and the like who become the objects of offerings at a S'raddha performance are indicated by the words Pitr and the rest, but they are referred to along with the presiding deities also, such as Vasu and the rest. As by the word Devadatta and the like not merely the physical body, nor the soul merely, of that person, but the souls qualified by the अस्मत्पितृ-पितामह-प्रपितामहानां ऋष्ण-रामचंद्र-नारायण शर्मणां वस्र-रुद्र-आदित्ये-स्वल्पाणाम् &c. Similarly in the case of women thus.—

अस्मन्मातृ-पितामही-प्रपितामहीनां रुक्तिमणी-जानकी-लक्ष्मी रार्मणां वस्र-रुद्-आदित्य-स्वरूपाणाम् &c.

^{1.} See Verse 259 above p. 524.

^{2.} See note No. 5 above on p. 508, and No. 2. on p. 464. Along with each Pitr invoked by the names they bore in this world, they are each linked to the deities or devatas corresponding to their grade in the trio or trayi made up by them, e. g. supposing that the deceased father was named Kṛṣḥṇa, and his father Ramachandra, and his father Nārāyaṇa, the invocation by the performer of his Pitr's together with the Pitrdevatas would be like this:—

possession of the particular body are referred to, in the same way along with the presiding deities are Devadatta and the rest referred to. And therefore, the presiding devatās, the Vasus and the rest, being pleasingly satisfied (by the food and drink offered by the sons and the rest) bestow satisfaction upon even these, viz. Devadatta and the rest, 5 and join the offerers of S'râddhas such as the son and the rest with the fruits. As a mother during pregnancy by means of the food and drink &c. presented by another as a dohada gift with the object of nourishing the fœtus in the womb when after herself eating and getting satisfaction herself, gives satisfaction to the child in her womb also, 10 and also confers on the giver of the dohada gifts of food &c., the good merit of such gift, in the same way the Vasus, the Rudras, and the sons of Aditi, the A'dityas, are the real pitrs denoted by the terms "father," "grandfather" and "great-grandfather" respectively, and not merely the souls of Devadatta &c.; these devas are the s'râddha 15 devatās the true recipients of the offerings in the S'râddha ceremony, but they themselves being satisfied, satisfy in their turn the Pitrs of men, namely Devadatta &c., and the rest, by reason of the posseesion of great wisdom and power. Moreover, not only they satisfy 20 the dead ancestors, merely, but also they give to the offerers of Sráddha, 'life, progeny, wealth, learning, heaven, emancipation and pleasures. These ancestors of men being satisfied give kingdoms even." The force of the word "cha" in the text subhani cha indicates that other rewards also are conferred by them as mentioned in other scriptures. These ancestors of men, namely Vasus &c., being satisfied, give men all good things.

Here ends the Chapter on S'râddhâs.

Viramitrodaya.

Here that the father and the rest should be contemplated in the form of Vasu and the rest is the main duty in a S'râldha. With this object the Author mentions the fruit resulting from it

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 269, 270.

The sons of Aditi, the Âdityâs, viz. Vasu and others, the three, the S'râddha devaâth, pitrs, by means of concentration, being contemplated to be in the place of one's own father and the rest, and being satisfied by that much; tarpitâh i.e. pleased, Manushyânâm, 'of men'

i. e. of the performer of the S'râddha, pitra S'râddhena prinayanti, the pitrs pleased on account of the S'râddha made by the performers give pleasure to them, by warding off the devils; tathâ, 'similarly' by reason of the satisfaction of Vasus and the rest, being pleased themselves, the grandfathers i. e. the father and the rest of the men performing the S'râddha, confer on the performers of S'râddha long life and the like fruits. By the use of the word cha are added the fruits of the S'râddha mentioned in other Smṛtis.

Here ends the Chapter on S'râddha in the commentary upon Yâjñavalkya.

CHAPTER XI.

10

*Page 82. The Rules relating to Ganapati.

(Desirous of teaching the ceremony of S'ânti rites in the next chapter) The ceremonial rites which are the means of obtaining visible and invisible fruits have been described before, and will be mentioned later on also; of these, the consummation of the form as the means of securing the results, can be possible by an absence of obstruction.

Therefore, for securing an absence of obstruction, the Author mentions the causative and the informative sources of obstruction

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 271.

20

30

Vinâyaka, for the purpose of bringing about obstacles in the performances, has been appointed at the headship of the ganas by Rudra and Brahmâ as well. (271).

Mitâksharâ:—Vinâyakah karmavighnasiddhyartham, Vināyaka for the purpose of bringing about obstacles in the performances, this verse - by knowing both sorts of causes, for guarding against the antecedence of obstacles, and also for the annihilation as well of those which have arisen, those who set about after examination begin work just as in the case of a disease, by a knowledge of both sorts of causes.

Vinayaka, i.e. Vighnes wara, Lord of obstacles, in the ceremonies performed as means to accomplish worldly objects, vighnasidhyartham, to bring about obstructions, to bring about destruction of the means of securing the form and the fruits; viniyojitâh, has been appointed, has been set up, Rudrena Brahmana, by Rudra and Brahma, by force of the word cha, and, by Viṣṇu also; Gaṇanam, of the Gaṇas like Puṣhpadanta and the rest, adhipatye, at the headship, and as the Lord also. (271).

Thus having mentioned the causative source of obstruction and with a view to point out its informative source, the Author proceeds Yâjñavalkya, Verses 272, 273, 274 (a).

By him, one who is obsessed by him, of him know the symptoms. In dreams he bathes in deep water, head-shaven persons also, sees; (272.)

wearing red garments, or mounts on carnivorous animals, or that he is in the company of the $antyaj\hat{a}s$, donkeys, or camels; (273) that although (himself) walking, still he thinks he is being pursued by others. (274) (1).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Tena i.e. by Vinâyaka, upasṛṣḥṭaḥ, obsessed i.e. possessed, yastasya lakṣhaṇâni, he, of hin the symptoms i.e. the informative signs, nibodhata know, O sages. The allusion to the sages again is with a view to the commencement of the chapter on S'ânti.

Svapne i. e. in a dream, in the condition of dreaming Jalamatyarthamavagâhate, he bathes in deep water, by the current is carried away (or sinks in it). He dreams of persons with shaven heads; pas'yati, he sees of kâshaya wâsaso, red garments, red, blue or the like clothes and garments; krawyâdâ, carnivorous animals, i. e. flesh eating birds such as vultures &c., and beasts also such as tigers &c. adhirohati, mounts. Similarly antyajaih by the low born such as Chandâlas and the like; by gardabhaih, by donkeys, ushtraih, by camels called Kramelaka', is surrounded by such. Vrajan-while walking, or going âtmânam paraih, he finds himself followed by others, i. e. by enemies running from behind as 'he considers himself followed' and overpowered, manyate, thinks. [272, 273, 274 (1).]

^{1.} See Amara 11 9-75. क्रम्र पाद्विक्षेपे.

10

30

Having thus mentioned the visions in dreams, the Author mentions actual sights

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 274 (2), 275, 276.

Absent-minded, unsuccessful in undertakings, is depressed without cause. [274 (2).]

When obsessed by him, does not obtain the kingdom (althoguh) the son of a king; a maiden likewise, not a husband, a woman, not a child, or conception; (275).

The A'chârya's honour, a S'rotriya, nor a pupil, education likewise; the merchant does not get profit, and also the crop, an agriculturist. (276).

Mitâksharâ:—Vimanâh, absent-minded, with a distracted mind; viphalârambhah, unsuccessful in 15
* Page 83 undertakings, unsuccessful are the undertakings of whom, such a one, so called, never anywhere obtains the fruit; sansīdatyanimittatah, is depressed without causes, without anycause becomes low in spirits, râjanandano, though a king's son, though born in a royal family, and though possessed of learning, bravery, courage, and the like qualities &c., râjyam na labhate, does not obtain kingdom; kumârī, a maiden, although possessing beauty, auspicious marks, and good family, &c., does not obtain a desired bhartáram, husband.

Anganâ, a woman, (when) pregnant, apatyam, a child; (when) menstruated, garbham, conception. Although possessing learning and a knowledge of its meaning âchâryatwam, the Achárya's honour, a S'rotriya. Nor though endowed with humility and good conduct s'ishyodhyayanam wâ, a pupil, education either, na labhate, does not get; is connected everywhere.

Vanik, the merchant, living upon trade, though an expert therein, in the purchase and sale of corn &c., labham, profit; kṛṣhīvalaḥ, the agriculturist, tilling the soil, and, though labouring therein with industry, napnoti, does not obtain the fruit of agriculture. Thus if one who earns his livelihood by a particular occupation finds his undertaking fruitless in it, then it should be understood that he is possessed by him. [274(2), 275, 276.]

10

Viramitrodaya.

While describing the worship of Vināyaka and the stars and the rest which is part of the procedure regarding Mahādānas which are expected to be fruitful by way of abating difficulties, and as if pointing out the sources of the knowledge of obstructions to the remedies under operation, and by reason of Vināyaka being the origin of obstructions, the Author mentions the causes of Vināyaka's non-propitiation which is the source of difficulty

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 271-276.

The production of the fruit in the form of obstructions, the desired fruit of actions in the form of the worldly and the Vaidic rites, and in accomplishment of that, Gananam, 'of the ganas' viz., of Pushpadanta and the rest, at the head, Pura 'in the former age,' by Brahma, by Rudra, and by the use of the word cha, by Vishnu also—the tendency is always of giving to the beings the desired or undesired fruits according to their actions—Vinayakah, 'Vinayaka,i.e., the Heramba, Viseshena, 'particularly', i.e., with special request, viz., of those who do not worship Vinayaka and the other grahas to cause undesirable results and for his worshippers give the desired result, thus Niyojitah,
'appointed', i.e., ordered. Tena, 'by him', i.e., by Vinayaka, aprītena,
'when displeased', upasṛṣhṭaḥ, 'obsessed', i.e., when one is possessed, of such a one, O sages, know the symptoms.

Lakshananyewaha, the Author mentions the symptoms themslves thus: One obsessed by Vinayaka, swapne, 'in a dream', i.e., when he is in a state of dreaming, sees that he is immersed in deep waters or jale majjati, 'sinks in the water,' is carried away by the stream.

30 (272). All visions in a dream should be understood as prepared by the mind. Munditashirasah, 'with heads shaven', kashaya vasasah, 'with red garments', i.e., garments dyed red with barks of trees, etc., kravyadan, 'carnivorous', i.e., those who eat raw meat, such as the vultures, etc., and tigers, etc., adhirohati, 'mounts,' i.e., rides. Along with the Antyajas, i. e., chandalas, and donkeys and camels, in one place is staying, i. e. surrounded by them, is standing. (273).

15

After having mentioned the symptoms in the dreams, the Author mentions those which occur when awake. Vrajan etc., although as a matter of fact going himself, he feels himself to be pursued by others i. e. followed after, and thus through illusion he considers that to be real. Some, however, describe this also as part of the dreams, and explain as paraih, 'by others' i. e. enemies, dhâvadbhih, 'followed in hot pursuit' and threatened, thus he considers. Vimanâh, 'with a perturbed mind' i. e. with a disturbed intellect, Viphalârambhah, 'one whose undertaking is generally unsuccessful'. Without any reason whatsoever one who feels despondency in mind. By the use of the word cha, 'many others' such as being besmeared with oil and the like stated in their respective places, are included. (274).

Having thus stated the symptoms, the Author mentions the obstructions to the undertakings, and the results proceeding therefrom: tenopasyshto labhate ityadi, 'possessed by him one obtains etc.' This has been explained before. Rajanandanah, 'one born in the Royal family' i.e., 'the king's son', although deserving the acquisition of a kingdom, does not get a kingdom. The expression na labhate 'does not get' is connected everywhere upto the end of adhyayana. Kumarī, in the words maiden and woman in conception, and the Upasyshtah connection should be taken by an inversion of the sex. The śrotriya has been described. The position of an Acharya is the special capacity produced as a teacher of those after initiation. The rest is clear. The several Chas include, by addition, the occurrence of undesirable things in spite of attempts at avoiding the undesirable and of securing of desired objects wished for at the respective periods of desires. (271-276).

Thus having described the causative ($K\hat{a}raka$), and the informative ($J\tilde{n}apaka$) causes, the Author mentions the rite for the abatement of the obstruction

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 277 (1).

30

25

Bathing should be made of him on an auspicious day according to rites—277 (a).

Mitâksharā:—Tasya, of him i.e. of one who is obsessed by Vinâyaka, or of that person who though not actually obsessed, is anxious to remove the apprehension to an approach of such obsession; snapana, bathing i.e. a wash, kartavyam, should be made, punye, on an auspicious on which the stars &c. are propitious to oneself, anhi, on the day i.e. during day time, and not at night time.

o.

vidhipurvakam, according to rites, according to all the details of the ceremony taught in the S'astra. 277 (1).

The author states the bath ceremony

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 277 (2)-278.

5 With the paste of white mustard and with ghee also, besmeared.—277 (b).

With all the herbs and with all sweet scents the head besmeared likewise; to him, seated on Bhadràsana, the holy Brâhmanas should be made to pronounce the auspicious Svasti.—278.

Mitakshara: -Gaurasarshapakalkena, with the paste of white mustard i.e. with the paste of the mustard called Siddhartha, sajyena, with ghee, with ghee well-agitated and made into an emulsion, utsâditasya, besmeared, rubbed over the body; tathâ, likewise, sarvaushadhaih, with all the herbs viz., 15 with the Priyangu, Nâgakesara &c., sarvagandhaischa, with all sweet scents, the sandal, aguru, musk &c. viliptas'irasah, with the head besmeared, and hereafter to be described bhadrasanopavishṭasya, seated on Bhadrasana, dwijah, the twice born Brahmanas who are 'holy,' endowed with the study of the Vedas and good man-20 ners, having handsome appearances, and over four in number should be made to pronounce the blessing with the request "May ye venerable Sirs, pronounce Svasti." Thus should they be requested. The meaning is that on such an occasion he should perform the Punyaha formula 25 according to the method given in one's Grhya. (277-278.)

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 279-80.

From the stable of horses, from the place of elephants, from an anthill, from a confluence (of rivers), and from a pond, earth as well as Rochanâ the perfumes, and guggula 30 also, one should throw into waters, (279).

which have been brought in four vessels of the same colour from a pond. On the hide of a red bull the Bhadrâsana should be placed thereafter. (280).

10

15

20

30

Mitâksharâ:—Moreover, the earth brought from the stable of horses, the stables of elephants, the anthill, the confluence of rivers, and from a pond which does not dry up, thus earth of five kinds together with the drug Gorochanâ and the gandhân, perfumes, such as the sandal paste, saffron, musk &c., and guggula also, resin, incense, one should throw into those waters; yâ, those, waters which ahṛtâḥ, were brought, ekavarṇaischaturbhiḥ, in four jars of one colour, white, which are without scars, are clean and free from blackness, rḥadât, from a pond, which is inexhaustible, sangamâdvâ, or from the confluence of rivers.

And thereafter, anaduhe charmani rakte, on a bull's hide of red i. e., of red colour, with the hair towards the North and the head towards the East, bhadram, charming to the mind, asanam, seat, made of s'riparni wood and leaves, sthapyam, should be placed.

Then the above mentioned waters in which had been mixed aforementioned earths and perfumes and which are contained in four pitchers adorned with the leaves of mangoes and other trees, the pitchers being surrounded with various

* Page 84 garlands of flowers and smeared with sandal paste and adorned with new untorn cloth, the four pitchers should be placed in the four quarters, such as the East &c., on a platform pure and plastered, on which is painted the figure of Svastika with five colours and on which is placed the hide of a red bull with its hair bristling up to the North and its neck pointing to the East, and on it should be spread another seat covered with white cloth. Thus this is called the Bhadrâsana, or the auspicious seat. On this seat being seated the Brâhmanas should be made to pronounce swasti. (279-280).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 281.

Having thousand eyes and hundred streams, and made pure by sages, with that (water) I sprinkle thee; may these sacred waters sanctify thee. (281)

Mitâksharâ:—Moreover, after the Svastivāchana is done, and after the ladies whose sons and husbands are alive, possessing handsome beauty and good qualities, dressed in good clothes and taking up the pitcher placed in the eastern quarter, and over which the auspices have been administered, with this mantra should sprinkle guru. Sahasrâksham, having thousand eyes i. e. having manifold power; satadhâram, with hundred streams i. e. having many currents; ṛṣḥibhih, by sages, like Manu and the rest that water which pāvanam kṛtam, has been made sacred, or sanctified and whose sanctity is produced by sages, tena, by that water, twām, thee, who art vināyakopasṛṣḥṭam, obsessed by Vinâyaka with the object of removing the evil influence of Vinâyaka abhis'hinchāmi, I sprinkle and with pâvamânis'also. May these waters punântu etc. purify thee. (281.)

10

Then afterwards taking hold of the second pitcher placed on the southern quarter, with this mantra he should sprinkle him

Yâjnavalkya, Verse 282.

Auspicious may the King Vâruna be to thee, and auspicious may be Sūrya and Bṛhaspati, auspicious be also Indra and Vâyu, and may the Seven Rshis give thee auspiciousness. (282.)

Mitâksharâ:—Bhagam i. e. auspiciousness, te, to thee.
20 may the King Varuṇa, bhagaṃ Sūryo, may the Sun give thee prosperity, bhagam Bṛhaspatiḥ (give thee) prosperity, bhagam Indra, also (give thee) prosperity, and Vayu, (give thee) prosperity;
bhagam saptarṣhayscha the seven sages give thee prosperity.

Then taking hold of the third pitcher, with the following Mantra he should sprinkle

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 283

Whatever ill luck may be in thy hair, whatever in the parting of thy hair, and whatever in the crown of thy head, or in thy forehead, or in thy two ears and eyes, may these waters destroy them always. (283.)

Mitâksharâ:—Te, of thine, kes'eshu daurbhâgyam, in the hair ill luck or want of prosperity, sīmānte mūrdhāni cha

ð

10

15

lalâte karnayorakshnos'cha, or in the parting line of thy hair, or in the crown of thy head, or in the two ears, or in the two eyes, may all that these divine waters destroy or abate Sarvadâ, always, (283.)

After that, taking, hold of the fourth pitcher of water, he should sprinkle with all the above three mantras, because of the mantra text "with all the mantras, the fourth."

Viramitrodaya.

Now the Author mentions the propitiatory ceremony for the abatement of obstructions, by the whole chapter. There, first he mentions the bath of one possessed by Vinâyaka

Yājñavalkya, Verses 277-283.

Tasya, 'of him', i.e., of the one possessed by Vinayaka, punye, 'on an auspicious', i.e., when the moon and the constellations are favourable anhi, 'day', vidhiparvakam, 'according to rites', i.e., preceded by the ritual prescribed in S'astra, snapanam kartavyam, 'the bath should be performed'.

The Author mentions the ceremonial itself. Sajyena, 'with ghee', i.e., profusely besmeared with ghee, and with the paste of white mustard powder rubbed over; "Suramansi, vachapusta saileyam, benzoin, rajanidwayam, 'two kinds of turmeric and lac', S'ali, 'garment', champak musta, these are known as sarwaushadhih''; or " paddy, corn, green beans, wheat, mustard, sesamum, barley, these seven vegetables aushadhayah, when worn annihilate diffi-Thus technically characterised are sarvaushadhis." "Two parts of musk, four of saffron, sixteen of sandal, and one of camphor, all 25 these four mixed together, is known as sarvagantha". Samasta suravallabhah, 'loved by all the Gods', thus technically characterised, sarvagandha, with that his head besmeared. According to Kalpataru, "Kunhuma, saffron, aguru', camphor, the Jati fruit is sarvagandha". Bhadrasanam, 'the auspicious seat', viz., the seat upon a raised platform well besmeared and a swastika of five colours made over it, placed on a hide spread as will be described hereafter and covered by a cloth produced in Kashmir, tatra, 'there' seated three Brahmnas subhah 'of auspicious form,' and endowed with Vedic scholarship and good conduct should be made to pronounce the benediction with the request. " May you pronounce the benediction ". The substance in short is that one should perform the Punyahawachana according to the prescribed rites in the Grihya through the Guru. According to the Mitakshara four should pronounce the 'Swasti'. (278).

There the Author mentions by two verses the ceremony to be seating on the Bhadrasana commencing with performed before Aswasthana, etc.' From the horses' stables and the like other places; 5 clods of earth brought over from such five places, the five varieties of rochands, sandal, aguru, and other kinds of perfumes, guggula, and waters brought in four pitchers of one colour and of one kind, one should pour on the place of the Kalasa. Hradah, 'the undrainable lake' a particular kind of water reservoir. By the use of the word cha, 'and' are included in addition the directions given in other Smrtis, viz., 'the jars of this kind surrounded by the mango and other leaves and encircled at their necks with various garlands besmeared with sandal, covered with new cloth, one should establish in the four quarters such as the East and the rest'. Then, on the place mentioned before, the red hide of a bull with its neck towards the East and the hair towards the North, so placed, spread on that, Bhadram, 'auspicious', i.e. charming to the mind. Asanam. 'a seat' prepared with the S'riparni leaves, should be established. It is on this Bhadrásana, when seated that the benedictory pronouncements should be caused to be made. Tatha, 'and', with the benedictory auspices performed by women with husbands and sons living, and seated on the Bhadrasana, the Guru should bathe him, with the four jars placed in the East and other directions with the mantras contained in the three verses beginning 'Sahasraksha', etc., (i.e., verses Nos. 281-283), respectively repeating one mantra for each pot. 25 With these preliminary performances, the investment of the Guru should follow. Thus only can the mantras Abhishinchâmi, etc., 'I sprinkle (over you), etc.', be reconciled. Some, however say, relying upon other Smrtis that of the three mantras, each consisting of one verse, the bathing with each of the three pitchers (Kalashah) and by the repetition of the three together with the fourth pot prescribe the bath, citing the text: "With all the mantras the fourth".

Mantrarthastu, 'the meaning of the mantras', however, Sahasrahsham, 'With thousand eyes', i.e., with a thousandfold power, S'atadharam, 'with hundred streams', i.e., with numerous water courses, such water which was consecrated by rshis, i.e., by sages like Manu and others and created. That water I sprinkle over you, who are possessed by Vinâyaka for the abatement of his attack. Pâvamânyascha etah âpah, these purifying waters, moreover, may purify you. (281).

May King Varuna give you good fortune, also Surya and Brhaspati may bestow good luck, Indra and Vayu may give you fortune, and may the seven Rshis give good fortune; Daduh, is the same as dadyuh 'may give.' (282).

15

20

25

In the hair, in the parting line of the hair, in the forehead, on the head, in the ears, and in the eyes, whatever daurbhagya, 'ill luck', may be about you, that may the water divinities always ghnantu, 'destroy', i.e., abate. (283).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 284.

In regard to him thus bathed, holding in his left hand the Kus'as, mustard oil through a ladle made of the Udumbara wood he should pour on his head. (284).

Mitâkṣarâ:—In the afore-mentioned manner on the head of the person who had been thus bathed, covered with the kus'as held in his left hand, mustard oil with a ladle made of the Udumbara trees, with the mantras hereafter to be stated, the Âchārya should pour as oblations. (284).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 285.

To Mita, Sammita, S'âla, Kaṭankaṭa. Kuṣhmâṇḍa, and Râjaputra, at the end of each, with the word Svâhâ added. (285).

Mitâksharâ:—With Mita, Sammita, &c., which are the names of Vinäyaka, with the word Svâhâ at the end and with the Praṇava in the beginning he should 'perform the Homa', Juhuyãt, thus is the connection with the preceding verse. By the addition of the word Svâhâ, the terms Mita &c., should be in the dative (case). Thus, "Om Mitâya svāhā, Om Sammitāya svāhà, Om S'alāya svàhā, Om Kaṭankaṭâya svâhâ, Om Kuṣhmâṇdâya sváhà, Om Râjaputrâya svâhâ". these six mantras arise. (285.)

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions the performance after the bath Yajñavalkya, Verses 284-285.

Of one, on whom a bath had been administered, who had been possessed by Vinayaka, on the forehead by the left hand having held blades of the kuśa grass and placed them as intervening, with the mustard oil, with the six names of Vinayaka viz., Mita, Sammita, S'ala, Kaṭankaṭa,

20

25

Kushmanda and Rajaputra, with these six names, accompanied with the word swaha, and by the use of the word cha, commencing with the Om, and ending in the dative case, in this manner he should offer oblations in accordance with the rites prescribed in the Sastra. The word eva 'only' is followed by the word iti 'thus.' Thereby a distinction is stated that these should be in these names only and not by the name Vinayaka. By the use of the word cha 'and', in the preceding verse is added by inclusion the sthalipaha sacrifice on the Lauhika Fire with the food prepared on it mentioned by other smrtis, to be performed after the oil oblations on the head. In the expression 'mitascha' by the word cha is indicated the character of a mantra in each of the six names. (284, 285).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 286.

With the names and with the Bali mantras accompani-15 ed with Namaskâra, he should offer at a cross way, in a winnowing basket, having spread Kus'as on all sides. (286).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Thereafter, the obsessed, in the Laukika Fire, having cooked according to the rule of Sthâlipāka
* Page 85 the Charu, with the very same six mantras, in the same fire having offered oblations with whatever remains of that Charu, with the Bali mantras to Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirṛti, Varuṇa, Vâyu, Soma, Indra, Braḥmâ and Ananta as the last with their names being īn the dative case and with the word Namah added, he should offer Bali to them.

Then what should be next done? So the Author proceeds
Yâjñavalkya, Verses 287-290.

he should invoke" Husked and unhusked rice as well as cooked rice mixed with sesamum paste, fish, raw and cooked fish, so also meat of a similar type. (287.)

Flower of various colours, perfumes and liquor of three kinds; also radish, Pūrikas, Apūpa and so also Underaka garlands. (288.)

Rice mixed with curds, pâyasa (milked rice), Gudâpishtam, together with modakas, having brought together all these. and having then placed his head on the ground, (289).

he should then humbly offer obeisance to $Ambik\hat{a}$, the mother of Vinâyaka. 290 (1)

5

Mitâksharā:—Afterwards, he should place the things mentioned above, such as the husked and unhusked rice &c., and all the consumable articles having placed in front of Vinâyaka, and by reason of contiguity, of his mother also, and with his head having bowed on the ground with the following Gâyatri mantras:

10

To Vinâyaka he should address this mantra respectively: "Tat Purushâya Vidmahe Vakratuṇḍâya dhimahi, tauno-danti prachodayât", "We know that Spirit, and meditate on him; having a crooked neck, may that tusked one illumine our intellect." with this mantra, to Vinâyaka.

15

20

"Subhagâyai vidmahe kàmamâlinyai dhimahi, tanno Gaurī prachodayât:" "We know the most prosperous, we meditate on the lady adorned with the garland of desire, may that Gouri command our intelligence." and with this mantra to Ambika also, he should make a bow to her. Thereafter having placed the remaining offerings in a winnowing basket on which kus'a grass has been spread, he should place it at the junction of the four roads with the following mantras: "This bali may the Devas accept viz., the Adityas, and also the Vasus: Maruts, and the two As'vinas, Rudras, Suparnas, Pannagas, Grahas, Asuras, Yâtudhànas, Pis'achas, Uragas, Mâtaras, Sákinīs, Yakshas. Vetàlas, Yoginis, Pûtanas, Sivas, Jrmbhakas, Siddhas, Gandharvas, the Mayas and Vidyadharas of men, the guardians of the quarters, the guardians of the worlds also. All the Vighna-Vinayakas. May all the peace-makers of the worlds, may Brahmâ and the great Rshis be not obstructive to me; may they not be evilly inclined towards me; may they not be destructive to me, may they be quiet and satisfied also; may all the spirits and the dead bring happiness."

-

With these mantras.

Krta-krtah, husked and unhusked, i.e., which have been pounded, once; tandulâh, rice; palalam, means sesamum paste, mixed with that the cooked rice, palalodana; matsyah, fish, raw and cooked; so also mansam, meat, etavadeva cha, raw and cooked also, pushpam chitram, variegated flower, i.e., of red, yellow and various other colours, sandal paste and other sweet-scented things; sura, liquor of three kinds, viz., Gaudi, made from gooda or raw sugar, Madhvi, made from honey, and Paishti, distilled from grain flour; mûlaka, a particular kind of edible of the form of the root called radish or mulaka. Purikas, are well-known. Apupas, 10 wheat preparation boiled in ghee or oil. Underaka srajah, the underaka garlands; underakas, are made of flour; a garland of these; dadhyannam, rice mixed with curd; payasam, milk-pudding; guda-pishtam, rice flour or other flour mixed and prepared with raw sugar; modakas, the sweet balls called laddus. 15

After this he should offer respectful obeisance to Vinâyaka and his mother Ambika with the mantra to be mentioned hereafter. (285-289).

After doing what? so the Author says
Yâjñavalkya, Verse 290 (2).

Filled with durvâ, sesamum, and flowers, after having given the arghya, he should give anjalí filled with the same. 290 (2).

Mitâksharâ:—He, with water and flowers after having given arghya, and after giving a handful (Anjali) consisting of durvagrass, mustard, and flowers, he should respectfully offer obeisance; this is the connection with the preceding line. 290 (2).

The Author mentions the upasthâna mantra Yâjñavalkya, Verses 291-292.

Grant me beauty, grant me success, grant me oh prosperous Lady! good luck; Grant me sons, grant me wealth, and grant me all desired objects. (291).

J. বৰ্ম্থাৰ—বৰ্—near, ম্থাৰ-standing; standing near in a posture for offering prayers and offering them.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 292.

Then dressed in white raiments, and garlanded with white flowers, and besmeared with paste, one should feed Brâhmanas, and present a pair of garments to the Guru also. (292).

Mitâkṣharâ:—In the prayer to Vināyaka the substituted * Page 86. word should be Bhagavan, Oh Lord.

Tato, then, after the abhisheka bath is over, the Yaja-mâna the performer, dressed in white raiments, wearing white garlands, and being annointed with white paste, should feed the Brāḥmaṇas, (who officiated in the ceremony). Let him also give according to his power a vastrayugmam, pair of cloth, to his Guru. By the word api, also, is indicated that according to his means he should give Dakṣhiṇā to the officiating Brâḥmaṇas also in honour of Vinâyaka.

There this is Procedure:—With the help Brāhmaņas the Guru possessing the above-mentioned qualities, and knowing the mantras, after preparing the Bhadrasana, after going near it, and after placing with proper rites Vinayaka and his mother Ambika, and worshipping them with scents and flowers &c., with the two mantras given above; and having cooked a mess of charu, and having pronounced punyāha on the Yajamâna seated on the Bhadrasana, they should sprinkle him with the waters of the four jars. After this a homa of mustard oil should be performed on the head of the Yajamana and the charu oblation shoud be offered; after that the bali offering should be given in the abhisheka Hall on all the four sides to the Lokapâlas, Indra, Agni and the rest. The Yajamana, however, after the bath should dress himself in white raiments and in the company of his Guru should offer upaharas to Vinâyaka and Ambikâ, and stooping down with his head on the ground, and giving arghya with flower and water and anjali with durvâ, mustard, and flower should humbly offer his obiesance to Vinâyaka and Ambikâ. Then the Guru putting the remainder of the eatables in a winnowing basket, and having bowed down his head on the ground to the deities, should carry the basket to the

15

10

5

20

35

30

35

cross-roads, and leave it there. After this the Yajamana should present the Guru with a pair of cloth, and the dakshina and a meal also to the Brahmanas.

Here ends the ritual of the bathing of Vinâyaka,

Viramitrodaya

Thereafter,

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 286-291.

Then one should give in the names of Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirrti, Varuns, Vâyu, Soma, Îsâna, Brahmâ and Ananta, bali offerings with the recitation of the Bali mantras ending with the expression Namah, and by the word cha, beginning with Omkar should offer with dative ending.

The residue from the oblations should be offered to Indra and others as a Bali offering in the form of Sthalipaka. This follows from the above. Then all the things enumerated, such as the husked and the unhusked rice etc., all these taking near the Vinayakas and their mother, and having offered to them with head bowed to the ground, and in the winnowing basket having spread the Kusa grass and of course having also spread the residue of the Upahara articles, he should abandon it at the cross-roads; thus is the connection. The meaning is that it should be offered as placed in the basket. For the obeisance to the Vinayaka the Mantra should be Tatpurushaya vidmahe etc., 'We know that great being and contemplate in our mind the Vakratunda; may the tusked one inspire us." For the bow to Ambika however, the mantra is: "We know Subhaga and contemplate in mind the deity who dims desires; may that Gauri inspire us".

For throwing at :the cross-roads the mantras, however, are:
"May this Bali offering, the Gods, the A'dityas, and similiarly the Vasavas accept; similarly the Maruts, the twin Gods As'wins, the golden plumaged divine birds, and also the grahas; the Asuras, Yatudhanas, the ghosts, the reptiles, and the mothers; the S'akinis,
Yakshas, and Vetalas, Yoginis, Putanas and the S'ivas; Jrasmbhakas, Siddhas; Gandharvas, and of men the Nagas and Vidyadharas; the guardians of the quarters, the guardians of the worlds, and the Vighna-

^{1.} So that the form would be ॐ इन्द्राय स्वाहा नन: and so on,

35

Vináyakas; as also the Brahmâ and other great Rishis who spread peace over the worlds; may not any obstruction be in my way, nor any evil influence; may all these be gentle, satisfied, and auspicious, as also the spirits, and the dead". (286).

Kṛtâkṛtaḥ, 'husked and unhusked' once pounded rice; palalam, 'sesamum paste cooked rice' mixed with it, is palalodana; cooked as well as raw fish, matsyâḥ, meat of similar kind. (287).

Chitram, of various i. e. red, yellow and various other colours 'flowers' pushpam; sugandham, 'perfume' such as sandal and the like; surâ, 'liquor' of three kinds, viz. Gaudi, made from raw sugar, Mâdhvi. from honey, and Paishti, from flour; mulakam, 'root'; purikapuascha well-known; Underaka srajah, 'underaka garlands.' Underi is a flour preparation, the garlands of that. Dadhyannam, 'curds rice', rice mixed with curds: payasam, 'milk-pudding' a highly delicious food: qudapishtam. 'raw sugar and flour mixed', flour of rice or other corn; modakas, 'sweet balls': with all these. The words cha and other adverbial words are indicative of these being mutually required together. Then, after depositing the winnowing basket with fragrant flowers and water, and after having offered the arghya, and with folded hands having offered dnrva-grass, with mustard and flowers i. e. to the mother of Viuayaka to whom the prayer is to be given; the prayer should be offered to her with the mantra Rupam dehi etc. 'may you give me good form' etc., One should offer obeisance to Ambika, the mother of Vinayaka. Hereafter giving the arghya to Vinayaka and the anjali as before, he should also make humble obesiance to Vináyaka in the Mantra however. Bhagawan, 'Oh Lord,' in the masculine2 gender, should be substituted, thus say the traditional scholars. Here, the offering of the upahara etc. all this is to be done by the Yajamana as is apparent from the mantra about the upahára. (286-291).

Viramitrodaya, Yâjñavalkya, Verse 292.

Thereafter, the performer dressed in a white cloth and decked with white flower garlands should offer meals to the Brahmanas and a pair of clothes to the Guru also. By the word api, 'also', is added the Dakshina as part of the ritual. Some say that the cloth itself is the dakshina, and that the word api suggests the addition of meals. (292).

^{2.} For the feminine of mother.

Of this very Vinâyaka bath, by way of supplement to the abovementioned description and with a view to show another fruit the Author proceeds

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 293.

Thus having worshipped Vinâyaka and the Grahas also, according to rules, one obtains the fruit of all actions, and also gets the highest fortune. (293).

Mitäksharâ:—Evam, thus, according to the abovementioned method, Vinäyakam sampujya, having worshipped 10 Vináyaka, karmanâm phalam âpnoti, one obtains the fruit of all acts. This is the summary of what has been said above.

The Author mentions another result, s'riyam cha, fortune also, âpnoti, he obtains, highest fortune; the meaning is, that a person desirous of good fortune should worship Vinâyaka according to the method above laid down.

The one who desires to perform S'anti for removing the malefic influences of planets like Âdityas &c., or who desires to obtain prosperity &c., and for which purpose the ceremony of the worship of planets will be described in the next chapter, the Author 20 hints at the planet worship.

Grahâns'chaiva vidhânatah, the Grahas also according to rules, i. e. a person worshipping the planets such as the Sun &c., according to the rules to be mentioned hereafter, obtains success in all undertakings, and also gets good fortune. (293).

Viramitrodaya.

Of the S'anti described before, the Author mentions the fruit Yâjîavalkya, Verse 293.

Evam, 'thus' i.e. in the manner stated, Vinayakam sampujya, 'having worshipped Vinayaka'; karmanam phalam, 'the fruit of the 30 performances' in the form of the pacification of the obstruction; apnoti, 'he obtains'; not only that this performance is a pacificatory one, santikah, but it is also paushtika, conducive of prosperity. So the Author says S'riyam cheti, 'good luck also'. Anuttamam S'riyam, than which a hetter one does not exist, is the best, and the best good luck is uttamâm śriyam; dhanâdi sampattim apnoti, 'and he obtains profuse wealth etc.' By the use of the word cha are included the other fruits from the Graha-vajña to be mentioned hereafter.

After the fruit of the performance is secured, the Author mentions the fruit of the worship of the Grahas to be treated hereafter. Grahanscheti, 'the Grahas also'. One worshipping the Grahas in accordance with the ceremonials to be detailed hereafter, secures the result of the performances. The form pujya is a poetic The use of the word cha suggests the addition of the feeding of the Brahmanas and the other final acts in the worship of the Grahas. Here the use of the word Eva is assertive. Thus-'he certainly obtains'-is the connection. (293).

> The Author now mentions the nitya kāmya accessory fruits Yâjñavalkya, Verse 294. 15

He who always performs the Puja to the A'ditya and makes the tilaka of the Swami and of the Maha Ganapati. obtains success. (294).

Mitakshará:—A'dityasya, with the divine power, sada, always, daily, the adorable Aditya with red sandal paste, saffron and red flowers, pujam kurvan, one who performs the worship, of Skanda, and to the Mahá-Ganapati always offers worship, obtains siddhim, success, absolute emancipation through the avenue of the knowledge of the Supreme Self. This is a nitaya perpetual result.

So also, by making a tilakal of gold &c., or of silver &c., of Aditya, Skanda, and Ganapati, or of any one of them, one obtains success, or the wished for result, as also one who makes the two eyes; this is the Kamya or transitory reward.

Here ends the chapter on the worship of Ganapati.

Viramitrodaya.

30

On the occasion of the Vinayaka Santi, the Author mentions acts conducive to the fruits resulting therefrom

^{1.} The word 'tilaka' means a full size image. One who cannot make a full sized image in gold or silver, he may make merely the eyes of these deities and he will get the same reward.

Yâjñyavalkya, Verse 294.

Sadá 'always' i. e. everyday, of the Sun as also of Ganapati, pújám 'worship'; Swāminaḥ, i. e. of the Kārtikaswami with the Gorochanā and other auspicious stuffs, the tilaka, and by the word tathā, 'also', one offering the worship obtains the fruition i. e. the resulting fruit of the performances begun or in contemplation. The prefix mahat, 'great', is, as in the expression Mahābhārata, indicative of praise, or as in the expression Mahendra; as Mahāganapati is praised by other Devatas also. By the word cha is indicated worship and the other results mentioned in the various Purānās. The word Eva is a conjunctive adverb of action showing the necessary resulting fruit. In the Mitāksharā, however, the word Siddhi has been explained as Moksha. The worship with the golden tilaka is connected with Âditya and all others. By the context of tilaka, its offer also is introduced. (294).

15

CHAPTER XII.

On the Propititation of the Planets.

"By worshipping the Grahas also according to the rules, one obtains the fruit of performences as well as he gets great good fortune." by this text, it has been stated that by the worship of the planets, by reason of the removal of obstructions from performances, results are accomplished. The Author now mentions other results

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 295.

One desirous of S'rī, or S'anti, should perform Graha Yajña. So also one desirous of rain, long life, and health; 25 similarly also one resorting to sorcery. (295.)

Mitâkṣharâ:—Srîkāmaḥ, one desirous of good fortune, this is merely a repetition of what has already been said.¹ S'antikâmaḥ, desirous of S'ânti, i.e., desirous of abating calamities. Showers for the growth of crops, etc., is Vṛṣḥṭiḥ, rain. Âyuh, life, by conquering untimely death, living for a long time. Puṣḥṭiḥ, possessing a faultless body. One who desires these is Yṛṣḥṭyâyuḥ-puṣḥṭikâmah, desirous of rain, life and health. These, i.e., those who desire good fortune, etc., should perform Graha yajna, i.e., do the worship of the planets. Tathâ abhicharannapi, similarly also one

10

15

20

25

30

resorting to sorcery—by invisible means causing injury to others is sorcery—one desirous of that, also may perform Graha-yajña. (295).

Viramitrodaya

"Grahas also according to the rules1", so it has been stated before. There, while demonstrating the rituals, the Author mentions the additional fruit resulting from the completion of performances stated before Yajnyavalkya, Verse 295.

S'rîh, 'prosperity', has been explained; śāntih, 'quiet' by means of religious observances, the avoiding of worldly evils; vṛṣhṭiḥ, 'rain', shower; âyuh 'life', by overcoming untimely death, living for a long time; puṣḥṭiḥ, 'accession', acquisition of what was not possessed before and also the preservation of what is acquired; a person having desires other than these, and abhicharan, 'resorting to sorcery', by invisible means wishing for the affliction of others, graha yajāam 'the sacrifice to the grahas', i. e., a sacrifical performance with the grahas as the objective, samyah, 'well'. i. e., in pursuance of rites prescribed by the Sastras, 'acharet', 'should conduct' i. e. should perform.

By the use of the word $w\hat{a}$, 'or', has been stated what already is established under the maxim of $y\hat{a}gasiddhi$ viz. 'in one performance, one fruit only'. By the use of the word api 'even', is the addition of absence of disease. By the clause, tathaiva, 'and similarly also' it has been pointed out, that even of one wishing to resort to sorcery, the details of procedure are the same, as in the case of one desiring $\dot{s}r\dot{s}$, and not that like the abhichara sacrifice, there is any particular rule. (295).

The Author now mentions planets

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 296.

Sûrya, the Sun, Soma, the Moon, Mahīputra, Mars, Somaputra, Mercury, Brhaspati, Jupiter, S'ukra, Venus, S'anáis'chara, Saturn, Râhu, the ascending node, and Ketu, the descending node; these are remembered as the Grahas. (296)

Mitâkṣharâ—These Surya and the rest are the nine Grahas or planets. (296).

^{1.} Verse 293.

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions the grahas.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 296.

Smrtah, 'have been declared', i. e. stated in the Smrti; by the use of the word cha, 'also', in the śruti also have been stated. By the use of the word eva, the Author excludes others from being regarded as grahas. Of these, although exhibited by the word 'son of the earth' and the like, the divine character is to be understood from the mahadana and other rules stated. The singular number in Ketuh is by regard to the collected group, as Ketus are many. (296).

It has been mentioned that the planets should be worshipped. By doing what? so the Author says

Yájňavalkya, Verses 297, 298, 299.

Of copper, crystal, red sandal wood, gold for two, 15 silver, iron, lead, and bell-metal should the images of the planets be made respectively. (297).

Or in their own colours they may be inscribed on a piece of cloth, or by sandal paste in different discs; according to their respective colours, should be offered 20 raiments and flowers also; (298).

Perfume and balis also, incense should also be offered as well as Guggula; and should be offered boiled rice (charu) with their respective mantras to every deity. (299).

Mitâksharà:—Of the Sun &c., the images should be made respectively of copper &c. In the absence of that, their images should be drawn on cloths of their respective colour, or even on the ground within discs, with sweet scents like red sandal paste &c. according to their respective colours and painted. This is the construction.

The particulars such as two arms &c, may be learnt from the 30 Matsya Purâna.

Thus, the image of the Sun should always be made as seated on a lotus, having a lotus in his hand, and having the colour of the pollen of lotus and seated in a chariot drawn by

See Vol. 54, Ânandāshrama Series Chapters 93 and 94 pages 163-170.
 The verse No 2 is identical with Verse no. 295 of Yājūavalkya.

seven horses, and having two arms, such should always be Ravi, the sun."

"His colour should be, white in colour dressed in white raiments having ten horses and white ornaments, with a mace in his hand, having two arms, should be made S'asi, the Moon, the bestower of boons."

ers, and wearing red

"Adorned with garlands of red flowers, and wearing red raiments, holding a javelin, triad, mace in his hand, having four arms and driven by rams shall be the son of the Earth, the bestower of boons."

10

5

"Adorned with yellow flower garlands, and dressed in yellow raiments and his colour like that of Karnikara, * Page 88. holding a sword, a shield of hide, a mace and seated on a lion! is Budha, Mercury, the bestower of boons."

15

"The Two Gurus of the Devas and Daityas—Jupiter and Venus—should be similarly made of yellow and white colour respectively, and having four arms holding a staff, should be made as conferring boons, holding a rosary of beads and a Kamandalu (water pot)."

20

"The son of the Sun, Saturn should always be made of the colour and lustre of an emerald, having a vulture for his conveyance, and having a lance, a bow and an arrow always should be made the son of the Sun - Saturn, prepared to bestow a boon."

25

"Having a terrible mouth, armed with a sword, a leather shield, spear armed, of blue colour and seated in a lion seat, prepared for a boon. Thus is Rāhu praised here".

30

"Of smoky colour, for his conveyance all having two hands, holding a mace, with distorted faces, always ready to bestow a boon, seated on a vulture seat, thus should be made the Ketus."

"All the planets should be made with a crown on their head calculated to bring benefit to the people and all the images should be 108 times size of one's own thumb finger."

The places of these images also are stated in the same work. Thus "(1) In the centre the Sun should be located; (2) The scarlet i.e. the Mars in the South; (3) the Jupiter in the North; (4) the Mercury in the North-East; (5) the Venus in the East, (6) the Moon in the South-East, (7) the Saturn, in the West, (8) the Râhu in the South-West, and (9) the Ketu in North-West. All the planets should be drawn with white rice."

The Author now mentions the method of the worship of the nine planets:—

"Yathâvarṇam, in respective colours, viz. of the particular graha, whichever colour may be of that colour the garments, perfumes, and flowers should be offered, balayascha, the balis also, dhûpascha, and the incense to all guggula should be given.

Charavah pratidaivatam Charus should be offered to every deity obtains prepared after having established the sacred fire and performed the anvådhåna ceremony etc, and then should be performed the Homa. According to the rule one should offer four handful each with the mantra 'Amushmai twâ jushtam nirvpàmi.'

'To you who are pleased I offer this' &c.,

After that, in the well-lighted blazing fire one should perform all the rites beginning with the oblation of the Idhma bundle into the fire, and ending with the Âghâra homa; that after offering samidh, oblations in honour of the Sun and the rest, into the fire reciting the proper Vedic mantra for each planet as will be stated hereafter, and then he should offer the Charu oblations. (297, 298, 299).

Viramitrodaya

As the worship of the grahas can be accomplished through images, the Author mentions the materials for these

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 297

30 Here the ablative has the sense of Instrumental case. The shape of the graha images, however, may be noted from other Smrtis; out of fear of prolixity, these have not been written here. (297).

^{1.} Matsya Purana, Chapter 93 verses 11 et seq.

15

35

Viramitrodaya.

This, moreover, is in regard to the performance of the Ayuta homa which lasts for a long time; in other cases, however, the worship of the grahas should be made on images drawn on cloth &c. Author says

Yājnavalkya, Verse 298 (1).

Swavarnaih, 'in their own colours', i. e., in colours similar to those stated for the several grahas; pate, 'on a cloth', the grahas should be 'written' lehhyah; or gandhaih, 'with perfumes', i. e., with sandal paste or the like, mandalake, 'in the discs', i.e., on well polished portions of the ground, should be drawn. By the first use of 10 the word wa, the Author states an alternative choice with copper and other pots not mentioned. To that effect is the Devi Puranam: "In a copper pot should be made the grahas with portions designed; or also in a black circle even, capable of bestowing forth the fruition of all desires." (298).

Viramitrodaya 298-299.

The Author states the Pûjâ ceremony Yâjñavalkya, Verse 299.

Gandhascha, 'perfumes also', yathavarnam 'according to the colours', i.e. in accordance with the colours of the respective grahas, deyah, 'should be offered'. Balayo, 'the bali offerings', as will hereafter be stated, should be given. Dhupaścha 'the incense also'; when not possible, guggula for all should be given. On a possibility however, a special rule in Chintâmani: "For the Sun, the Kunduraka, incense; ghee is for the Moon; for the Mars the sarjarasa, the aguru has been declared for Mercury; the sinhalaha should be offered to Jupiter, for Venus is remembered the bilwaguru; guggula for the Saturn, and the lac for Rahu and Keta." For each Deity, addressing it. "To thee the Sun. I offer this portion etc." with this and the like mantra charu oblations of cooked rice boiled in sweet-scented vapour, should be offered. Kusumani cha, in this expression by the word cha, has been expressed that akshatas also according to the respective colours should be given. Gandhascha, in this the word cha is indicative of the lamp to be included. In balayascha, the cha includes naivedya. The word eva 'also' indicates that it is necessary. In deyascha, the cha brings in the betel leaves as meaning an accession to the fruit. In mantravantascha by the word cha is included the four offerings measured by four handfuls (298, 299).

The Author mentions the mantras Yâjñavalkya, Verses 300, 301.

With the mantras $\widehat{A}krshnena^1$ he should offer to the Sun. With $ImamDevah^2$ to the Moon. With Agnir $m\hat{u}rdh\hat{a}$ $divahkahut^2$ to the Mars, With $Udbudhyasva^4$ to the Mercury. Thus are the Rks in the order of the enumeration stated. (300).

With Brhaspate atiyadarya to the Jupiter. With Annát paris'rutah to the Venus. With S'anno devī to the Saturn.

1. This Mantra is for रवि (Sun). The full Mantra is.— आकृष्णीन रजसा वर्तमाना निवेश्यं च ।
हिरण्ययेन साविता रथेना देवी याति भ्रवना विषश्यन्।

- Trans:—"Throughout the dusky firmament advancing, laying to rest the immortal and the mortal. Borne in his gold chariot he cometh, Savitr, God, who looks on every creature".
- 2. With this Mantra he should throw the fire stick into the fire in the honour of the RIH (Moon). (See. Vâjasaneyî Sambitâ IX. 40).
 - 3. This Mantra is for मंगळ (Mars). The full Mantra is:—
 अग्निर्माधी दिवः ककरातिः पृथित्या अयं । अपार्नेतार्माजिन्वति ।।
 - Trans:—"O Agn, brother, made by strength, lord of red steeds and brilliant sway; take pleasure in this land of mine". (Rv. VIII. 44.).

 - 5. This mantra is for ut (Jupiter). The full mantra is:-

बृहस्पते अतियद्यों अहां युमदिभाति कर्तुमञ्जनेषु ।

यद्दी यच्छवर्सेन प्रजातनदस्मासुद्रविणं धेहि चित्रं ॥ R. V. II. 23. 15.

- Trans:—"Bṛhaspati, that which the foe deserves not, which shines among the folk, effectual, splendid. That son of land, which is with might refulgent—that treasure wonderful thou bestow upon us."
- 6. This mantra is for and (Venus). See Vajasaneyî Samhitā XIX. 75
- This mantra is for जानि (Saturn). The full Mantra is:— र्शन्त्री देवीरिमेष्ट्रय आपो मवंतु पीतये । श्रीयो रिमम्नवंतु न: ।। (R.v. X. 9.4).

Trans: "The waters be propitious to us for drink; Goddesses for our aid and bliss; Let them stream to us health & strength".

10

15

With $K\hat{a}nd\hat{a}t^1$ to the Rahu. With $Ketum\ krnvan^2$ to the Ketu likewise. (301).

Mitâkṣharâ:—The mantra Âkṛṣhṇena rajasâ vartamanah and the rest, in all nine mantras should be understood to be for the Sun and the other planets in the order of enumeration. (301).

Viramitrodaya 300-301.

In the homa to be hereaftr described, and in the paja and the bali oblation, the Author mentions the mantras for the Sun and the rest in respective order

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 300-301.

Akrshnena rajasa, Imam deva &c., Agnirmardha divah kakut &c. Udbudhyasvagne &c., Brhaspate atiyadarye &c., Annat parisrwah rasam &c., S'anno Devirabhishtaye &c., Kandathandat prarohanti &c., Ketum krnvanna &c., these Rks. yathasankhyam, 'in their respective order of enumeration', 'have been declared', prakirtitah. By the word tatha, and the word cha, the mantras stated in each S'akha or school of Vedas as the result of special arrangements in those S'akhas are intended. By the word eva, are excluded the mantras of other s'akhas (300, 301)]

Now the Author mentions the Samidhs
Yajñavalkya, Verse 302.

For the Sun Arka, for the Moon Palâsa, for Mars 20 Khâdira, for Macury Apâmârga, for Jupiter Pippala, for Venus Udumbara, for Saturn S'ami, for Râhu Dûrvâ, for Ketu Kusa. Should be the Samidhs (for the planets in respective order). (302).

1. This Mantra is for राहु. The full Mantra is:—
कांडान् कांडाल्यरोह-नी परुष: परुष परि । एवानी दुवें प्रतन्त सहस्रोण शतेन च ॥ (V. S. XIII 20).

Trans:—"Upspringing from thine every joint, upspringing from each knot of thine; thus with thousand, Durva, with a hundred do thou stretch us out."

2. This Mantra is for केतु. The full Mantra is:—
केतुं कुण्वन्त्रकेतवे पेशों मर्या अपेशसे । समुपद्भिरजायथाः ॥

Trans:—"Thus making light where no light was and form O men, where form was not; wast born together with the Dwnas".

35

Mitakshara:—Arka, Palasa and the rest in the order of enumeration are the Samidhs for Sûrya and the other in their respective order. Moreover, these should be fresh, moist, unbroken, with barks and of the length of a span.

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 303.

For each one, one hundred and eight, or twenty-eight even, should be offered as oblations, moistened with honey, clarified butter, with milk, or curds. (303).

Mitâksharâ:—Moreover, beginning with the Sun and the 10 rest to each one should be offered 108 fire-stricks or, 28 for each as may be possible, either with honey, clarified butter, or with curds, or with milk, being besmeared, samidhs of Arka etc., should be offered as oblations. (303).

Viramitrodaya

While pointing out the special kinds of Samidhs for the several grahas, the Author mentions the particular rules about the number of oblations for each

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 302, 303.

For the Sun and the others, in the order for each ashtasatam, 'eight and hundred' i. e. eight plus one hundred, ashtavimsatirva, or 'twenty-eight', should be made besmeared with honey, ghee, or with curds or with milk, should be offered into the fire as oblations. The number of the samidhs also indicates by implication the number of oblations too. According to the reading of the traditionals, before the clause "kshirena &c., chaiva samanvita," Apamargah, well-known as chavachadi. The word indicates that in all graha homas this number is necessary. In the ayutahoma and the like, along with the ghee, sesamum, paddy, barley, milk, and the samidhs, the oblations to be made should be of an equal number, under the maxim samam syat, 'equal shall be' &c. Or, even there the number of the samidhs must have been mentioned. With ghee and the like are to be completed the required number such as ayuta or any other, according as may be procured.

By the use of the word atha, 'thereafter', after the oblations with samidhs for one graha are completely over, should be the samidh oblations of another graha—thus the Author indicates the order. By the word cha, in the Ayuta and other sacrifices, the addition of ghee and other articles is indicated. The use of the word tu twice is to supplement the foot of the stanza. In the Chintâmaņi, however, in the chapter on Graha homa, particular kinds of samidhs, as set out in other smṛtis, have been stated thus: "One thousand and eight, or one hundred and eight, or twenty eight, or eight, for each one should be offered as oblations. Of a span in length, without tops, also not dried, of the paláśa tree, the wise should select the samidhs for all performances, and always. Even for all the Gods, one knowing the great truth, the pálâs'is." These (for their details) should be ascertained from those places. (302, 303).

* Page 89. The Author now mentions the foods Yaiñavalkya, Verses 304, 305.

10

To each planet in due order should be offered Gudau-danam, Páyasam, Havishyam, Kshīrashāshtikam, Dadhyo-danam, Havih, Chūrnam, Mâmsam, Chitrânnam, respectively, in the order of the planets, to the twice-born, the twice-born should give dinner according to his means or according as secured, after having honoured them according to the rules. (304-305).

20

Mitâksharâ:—Rice mixed with raw sugar is gudaudanam. Pâyasam, milk-rice, viz., rice cooked in milk. Havishyam, sacrificial food such as the hermits' food. &c. Kshīrashāshṭikam, the shāshṭika¹ rice mixed with milk is called Kshīrashāshṭikam; rice mixed with curd is called Dadhyodanam. Havih, clarified butter mixed with rice. Chùrṇam, powder, powdered sesamum mixed with rice. Māṃsam, meat, i.e., eatable meat mixed with rice. Chitrânnam, various kinds of Odana, i.e., boiled rice of various colours.

25

30

These Gudaudana &c., should be offered in due order intending them to be for the Sun and the rest, should be given as meals to the Dwijas, i.e. Brāḥmaṇas. The number of Brāḥmaṇas to be according to the means. In the absence of Gudaudana &c., as he can procure, cooked rice &c., which after having washed the feet of the invited Brāḥmaṇas vidhipūrvakam according to the rule, and satkṛtya, after having honoured them i.e. after respectful greetings &c., he should give. (304-305).

¹ Rice obtained from paddy which becomes ripened into a crop within sixty days.

Viramitrodaya.

While stating the ball articles, the Author states their appropriation

Yâjñavalkya Verses 304, 305.

S'aktitah 'according to means', if means exist, this gudaudana &c. 5 for the Sun and the other grahas in the order respectively. If qudaudana be not available, then according as may be procured, ghee, milk-pudding, or the like, or of one kind only to all the grahas according to rules, having abandoned as a Bali, that also should be offered as a meal to the Brahmanas after doing honour to them. Kshirashashtikam, is the shashtika rice mixed with milk havih 'cooked rice with ghee', charnam, 'cooked rice mixed with sesamum powder.' Chitrannam "Sesamum, rice, and green bins, the goat's milk and also blood, and taken by the ears and the nose, is known as Chitrannam" technically described. The rest is well-known. By the use of the word eva, 'only', when means permit, the Author points out the necessity of the articles mentioned. By the word cha, 'and', the Author permits other articles stated in other Smrtis. Thus, "Gudaudanam, one should give to the Sun; to Soma, the clarified butter and milk-pudding; to Mars, the masura meal, the milk-pudding to Mercury, the son of Soma, curds and rice to Brhaspati 20 or Jiva, and to Venus, ghee and cooked rice; to Saturn-one with a slow pace; The kṛṣara, and the goat's meat to Rahu: the Chitrannam to the Ketus, and one should worship with all eatables". (304, 305).

The Author mentions the Dakshina

Yâjñavalkya verse 306.

A milch cow, a conch shell, a strong bull, gold, cloth, a horse, in respective order; a black cow, and a goat, these are declared to be the dakshinas. (306).

Mitâksharâ:—Dhenuḥ, a cow i. e. a milch cow; sankhaḥ, 30 a conch shell, is well-known; anadvân, a strong bull, who can bear burden and is strong; hema, gold; vâsaḥ, cloth, of yellow colour hayaḥ, a horse, grey; Kṛṣhṇâ gauḥ a black cow. âyasam, iron, i. e. weapons made of iron. Chhâgaḥ, a goat, is well known.

These, i.e., the cow and the rest in the respective order intending them for the A'ditya and the rest are for Brahmanas, dakshinah smṛṭaḥ, declared as dakshinas, by Manu and others.

This, moreover, when it is possible. When it is not possible, any thing as may be procured may be given, even a trifle, according to capacity. (306).

Viramitrodaya

The Author mentions the dakshina for the graha-yajña

5

Yâjñavalkya. Verse 306.

Cows and the rest respectively in the order, as dahshinds for the sacrifice to the Sun and other grahas, one desirous of securing the favour of those grahas should give to the twice-born—thus is the connection with the last verse. By the word tatha, 'also', it is stated that when these are not possible, gold should be used as dahshind for all. The word wai, 'indeed' is a complement to the foot of the stanza (306).

15

It has been stated before that all the planets should be worshipped by a person desirous of quiet. There the Author mentions a particular rule

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 307.

For whomsoever a planet is standing in a bad place, that person should worship him with great care. By Brahmâ a boon has been given to them thus "when honoured, you will honour." (307).

20

Mitâksharâ—Yasya, of him, of the person, a particular planet, yadâ, when, dushtaḥ, i.e. in a bad place, e.g., is in the eighth place, &c., sa, he, tam, him, i.e. graham, at that time yatnena, with great care, i.e., particularly, pūjayet, should worship, since eshâm, to the planets, Braḥmaṇâ, by Braḥmā in ancient times varo dattaḥ, a boon was given.

'When Pūjitāh, you are honoured by securing what is desired and warding off what is not desired, the worshipper you should honor"; (307.)

30

Viramitrodaya.

One desirous of quiet, should perform the graha-yajña.' By this text when possible, it has been stated that all grahas should be worshipped; when, however, it is not possible, the Author says

25

30

Yajnavalkya, Verse 307.

Yasya, 'of whom' i. e., of the man yo graho yada dushthah 'when a particular planet is badly placed' i.e., occupies the eighth or a like place, he, that man, at such a time should worship that graha by collecting together all the accessories stated above. The word Cha 'and' is used in the sense of tu, 'however'. By this, any of other than the one hadly placed, the necessity of special worship is excluded. Small worship however, of the other grahas should indeed be made: Vide this text: 'He, however, who is always troublesome to one, with small means that 10 wise man should with effort worship him, and do honour also to the rest.' The Author states the reason for the statement that "By the worship of Grahas quiet takes place". Brahmaneti, by the Brahma etc.' When you are worshipped you will honour the worshippers and will give them satisfaction by securing to them the objects desired in the form of the Santis etc. Thus, eshâm 'to these' i.e., to these grahas, Brahmand varo dattah 'By the Brahmâ, the boon was given'. This is the meaning. (307).

In general, and in reference to the twice-born the S'antika and the Paushtika performances have been detailed. There, of a king annointed with the coronation bath, is a special duty as the 20 Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 308.

Upon the planets are dependent the rise and fall of monarchs, so also the existence and non-existence of the worlds. Therefore the grahas must be worshipped first of all. (308).

Mitakshara; -Narendranam, of lords of men i. e. of the annointed Kshatriyas. Grahâh pūjyatamâh, planets should be highly honoured. Now, moreover, by others also should they be worshipped so it looks. The Author gives the reason for both by saying "The prosperity and adversity of all living beings grahadhīnah, is dependent upon planets, therefore, by those who are entitled should these be worshipped."

Moreover, of the world, viz., consisting of the immoveable and the moveable, bhavabhavau, existence and non-existence, i.e., the origin and destruction, is dependent upon the planets. Therefore, if these planets are worshipped, then the births and deaths will take place in their own time. Otherwise, at the proper time of birth, there may not be birth, and there may occur untimely, a death. And the monarchs being the lords of the world and being entrusted with the weal and woe of the beings under them, and with their prosperity and protection, should highly honour the Grahas. Thus, therefore, of them, more particularly is the duty in regard to the S'ântis, &c.

So says Gautama

"The king is the master of all, with the exception of the Brahmanas." In regard to the king "He shall protect the classes and shall lead orders in accordance with justice. And those who swerve away, he shall lead back (to it).'

Having thus mentioned a few duties he (Gautama) goes on What also the astrologers and interpreters of omens declare 15 [him] he shall, also, take heed of that. For some declare, that the acquisition of wealth and its preservation depend upon them.

Thus having mentioned the cause and reason for the performance of S'anti and Pushti ceremonies, he goes on 1.

"He shall perform in the Hall-fire the rites ensuring prosperity which are connected with expiations (S'ânti), punyāḥa swastyayana festivals, a prosperous march, long life and auspiciousness; as well as those that are intended to cause enmity, to subdue (enemies), to destroy (them) by incantations, and to cause their misfortune."

Thus are S'antika and other rites set out. (308). Here ends the chapter on Graha S'anti.

1. Ch. XI. 17.

Śrikâmah Śântikamo va Grahayajñam Samâcharet Vriśtyayuh putiškâmv Tathaiv, abhicharanuapi Compare this with the verses 93, 2 of the Matsya Purâna:— Śrikamâh Śântikamo vo Grahayajñam samârabhet Vridhyâyuh pushtikâmo va Tathaivābhicharan punah. 20

25

^{2.} The whole of this chapter is an abridgement of chapter 93 of the Matsya Purâna. It is clear that this portion of the Yâjñavalkya Smriti is posterior to that Purâna. The opening verse of this chapter is a verbatim reproduction of verse 2 of the Puràna. The first verse here is:—

20

35

Viramitrodaya

In the matter of the worship of the Grahas for the performance of Santi etc. although all have a right, still, they should be particularly worshipped by the king for the purpose of the prosperity of the kingdom. So the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 308.

Narendranam, 'of the Lords of men' i. e., of the annointed Kshatriyas, Uchchrayah, 'rise' i. e., wealth etc. and patanani, 'falls' i. e., deprivation of them. Grahadhinah, 'are in the power of the Jagatah, 'of the world' i. e., of the mass of mankind which must be protected bharabharau, 'existence and non-existence' i. e., birth and death, grahadhinam are within the control of the planets. Therefore the king, in the interest of the acquisition and preservation of wealth of himself and for the benefit of the people under his protection, the Grahas must be specially worshipped, as they are to 15 be worshipped by others even more than that they must be worshipped by him. This is the meaning. (308).

> Here ends in the Commentary on Yainavalkya On the Chapter on S'anti.

CHAPTER XIII.

Of the Duties of a King.

Having described the general duties of a house-holder in general, of the particular gentleman house-holder who is endowed with the qualities of being appointed, &c., the Author now mentions 25 the special duties

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 309-311.

The ruler of men (a king) should be of great enthusiasm, vast aims, remembering the deeds, serving the elders, disciplined, endowed with equanimity, of good family, truthful in speech, pure, (309), non-procrastinating, 30 of strong memory, non-petty-minded and not-carping; religious, without bad habits, intelligent, brave, and a knower of secrets, (310), guardian of his weak points, wellversed in the science of metaphysics, and similarly also in the rules of punishment and in polity, and in varta and so also in the three-fold sciences called Trayi so should be the ruler of men. (309-311).

15

20

25

Mitâksharâ:—Constant and continued application to an undertaking commenced as a means of securing objects in life is energy, one whose energy is great is mahotsâh, of great enthusiasm or energy.

One who gives much and can see into the real object is a sthuladars'I, of vast aims. One who does not forget the obligations and injuries made by another is a kṛtajña, one remembering the deeds. One who serves the elders in austerities and knowledge and the like is vṛddha sevaka, one serving the elders.

One endowed with the quality of discipline is a vinīta, 10 disciplined; by the word Vinaya are described all that bundle of duties of a Snâtaka, mentioned before, and which are not inconsistent (with the duties of a king). Such as "Never should one resort to a risk, nor wantonly speak unpleasantly &c Sattvasampannah, endowed with equanimity, in prosperity or in adversity free from elation or dejection; from the mother's, as well as from the father's side nobly born is kulina, of good family; satya-vak, truthful in speech, who is by habit always truthful in his utterances. s'uchih, pure, endowed with both external and internal purity. (309).

One who makes no delay in commencing the acts which must be done, or in completing those which have already been commenced is adirgha-sūtraḥ, non-procrastinating; he who never forgets the the things he has learnt is smṛtimân, of strong memory; akṣhudraḥ, not petty minded, who does not hate good qualities; aparusaḥ, not carping, who does not proclaim the faults of others; dhârmikaḥ, religious, i.e., who is endowed with the duties of his class and order; one who has no bad habits, Avyasanaḥ, without bad habits.

The vyasauas or evil habits are eighteen, as says Manu². 30

"Hunting, gambling, sleeping by the day, censoriousness, women, inebriety, (an inordinate love for) dancing, singing, and

^{1.} See Chapter VI; pp. 330-369. Vol. II; Part I.

^{2.} Ch. VII, 47, 48.

10

25

music, and useless travel, and that born of lust are the tenfold set of vices.

"Wickedness, violence, treachery, envy, slandering, spoliation of property, reviling, and assault by speech and also on the body, and also that produced by wrath is the eighth vice."

Out of these the following seven are the most pernicious as says Manu.¹

"Drinking, dice, and women also, and hunting, these four (which have been enumerated) in succession, he must know to be the most pernicious in the group that springs from love of pleasure.

"Doing bodily injury, slander by speech, and the seizure of property, these three he must know to be most pernicious in the set produced by wrath. Among the eighteen vyasanas these seven are the most pernicious."

Prâjñâh, intelligent, having the capacity of understanding deep and recondite subjects; sûrah, brave,
* Page 91. fearless; rahasyavit, a knower of secrets, one dexterous in concealing things which ought to be concealed. (310).

Sva-randhra-gopta, guardian of one's weak points. In the seven constituents' of his own kingdom that through which an outsider can enter is one's weak point. He who protects these weak points, i.e., covers them up.

A'nvikshikī, in the metaphysics, i.e., the knowledge of self, in the A'tmavidyá; dandanityâm, the rules of punishment and polity, so necessary as a means for the acquisition and protection of wealth; vârtâyâm, in the Vârtâ, i.e., in the rules of agriculture, trade, and the tending of live-stock which are the means of accession of wealth; Trayyâm, in the three-fold lore consisting of Rk, Yajus,

^{1.} See Ch. VII. Verses 50-51.

^{2.} सप्ताङ्गम् राज्यम्—See Verse 353 infra. Also see Manu Ch. IX. 14.

^{3.} According to Nârada আন্থিমিকী means the science of dialectics i.e., the Nyâya, Sânkhya & so form.

^{4.} वार्ता:—Buhler translates this as "the theory of various trades and professions".

15

20

25

Sâmans. Vinitāh, well-versed, i.e., made accomplished by experts in each. As says Manu.

"From those versed in the Three Lores; the science of polity also, from the experts in that; the Anvikshikî from the scholars of metaphysics, and the trades and professions from the people."

Narâdhipaḥ, the ruler of men, 'a king annointed in government', should be as above; is the connection everywhere.

Viramitrodaya

Having mentioned the general duties of a house-holder, and while describing in detail the government of a kingdom with its seven parts, the king, particularly known by the description of the lord of men, of this king, the householder, the Author states special duties by an entire chapter

Yājñavalkya, Verses 309-311.

Kulînah 'high born' i.e., born in a Kshatriya family. Narûdhipah, the supreme protector of men', when annointed as a king, he must have great energy etc. This is the meaning. One who has great energy i. e., the means of accomplishing worldly objects, i. e. the continued application to particular acts, one who has this, is mahotsahah, 'of great energy'. Sthulam, i.e., liberal; laksham, 'mind' i.e., the subject of his desire as a donation being given to the Brahmanas and others; one, of whom is this, is sthula-lakshah 'with a liberal vision'. Krtajñah. 'grateful', i.e., forgetful of injury done by others. seniors, i. e. superiors in knowledge, age, and austerities, of these the servant i. e., one who serves these, is vrddhasevakah. Vinītah, Satvam. 'restrained' i. e., who has subdued his organs. 'equanimity' i. e. absence of excessive elation or depression in prosperity or adversity, one having that, is Sattwasampannah. Satyawak 'truth-speaker', i.e. who never speaks anything which is false, i.e. which is not permitted by the S'astras. S'uchih 'pure' i.e. possessing external and internal purity. In the matter of commencing acts which must necessarily be performed, and of not delaying the completion of those begun, is, Adirghasútráh, 'non-procrastinating'. Smrtimán. 'with good memory', not forgetting things useful for the kingdom. Akshudrah. 'not petty-minded'; averse from the hatred of good qualities. Aparushah, 'not harsh' i. e., devoid of any harsh speech, not sanctioned by the Sastras. Dharmikah, 'religious', who by habit observes the duties of Varnas and As'ramas. Avyasanah, 'not addicted to bad habits', i. e. not addicted to hunting, dice, drinking and the rest. Prajnah, 'well-versed', by hearing historical accounts etc., S'urah, 'brave' i. e. fearless. Rahasyavit, 'knowing the secrets.' Swarandhram, 'one's own weakness', i. e. of his kingdom, consisting of the seven parts, that part which is likely to be the entrance door for the outsider, tasya gopta, one 5 protecting that', Anvikshikyam, 'in metaphysics' i.e., the science of logic. Dandanityam, 'in the science of polity' i. e. politics. Trayyam, 'in the three lores' in the form of Rk, Yajus, and Sana Vedas. Vartayam, 'in the Varta' i.e. in the form of agriculture, merchandise and the rest; there vinītah, 'well-versed' i.e., made proficient by experts in it, as says 10 Manu: "From the scholars of the three lores the three-fold learning; the science of polity from experts in it; the science of metaphysics from the philosophers; and the Vártå (the people's transactions) from the people". By the use of the word eva at several places the necessity of many of these qualities; by the use twice of the word tatha, 'also' and by the 15 use of the word cha 'and', has been indicated the inclusion of the internal qualities of a king mentioned by other Rshis. It should be understood that by this has been detailed the parts of the kingdom of a ruler. (309-311).

^{1.} Oh. VII. 43.

25

30

Having thus mentioned the internal attributes of an annointed king, the Author mentions the external attributes

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 312.

He should appoint ministers who are talented, nobly descended, steady, and pure; with them, he should hold counsel of the Kingdom; with the Brahmana; thereafter, himself. (312.)

Mitākṣharā:—The king possessing the qualities of great energy &c., mantriṇah kurvīta, should appoint ministers. How qualified? prājñān, talented i.e. experts in discriminating good from bad; maulán, nobly descended, i.e. descended in the line of their own family; sthirān, steady, viz., who on occasions of joy or grief remain unperturbed; s'uchin, pure, viz., who are uninfluenced by motives of Dharma, Artha, Káma or fear.

These, moreover, seven or eight, should be appointed, as 35 says Manu.

^{1.} Oh. VII. 54.

10

"Descended from a noble ancestry, versed in the sciences, brave, skilled in the use of weapons, and descended from good families, ministers, he should appoint, seven or eight in number, after they have been well tried."

Having thus previously appointed the ministers, taih sārdham rājyam, along with them the kingdom, such as making treaties, declaring war, &c., he, should chintayet, hold counsel, all together as well as severally. Afterwards, after ascertaining their view, with a Brâhmana Purohita, expert in the knowledge of all S'âstras and their meanings, he should hold consultation about the matter, and then, tatah, swayam, himself, according to his own reason and understanding, think over the matter. (312).

What kind of a Purchita should he appoint? so the Author says

Yâjnavalkya, Verse 313.

15

20

25

30

He should appoint a Purchita, one who should know astrology, who is endowed with high qualifications, who is well-versed in the science of Polity, and also in Atharvaāngiras. (313).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Purohita, the family priest, in all acts with visible or invisible results, he is placed (Hitam) in front (Puratah), and thoroughly attached by donations, honour, and other respectful acts, he should appoint, kuryât. How qualified? Daivajnam, who knows astrology, i.e., who knows the evil influences of planets as well as the means of counteracting those influences; uditoditam, who is endowed with high qualifications, i.e., on account of his learning, high birth, and the constant performance of sacred duties, &c., as taught in the S'âstras, who is exalted, i.e., profusely endowed. Dandanītyâm, in the science of polity, i.e., in Politics, who is an expert, kusalam, and also, i.e., Atharva-āngirasa; i.e., in rituals relating to S'ānti, &c. (313).

Viramitrodaya.

Thus after having stated the internal qualities of a king, while pointing out the minister as part of the kingdom, the Author states the external parts ending with 'after having controlled them establish them in the right path1'

Yâiñavalkya, Verse 312.

Sa, 'he' i.e., the King characterised by the afore-mentioned qualities, prajnan 'well-versed' i. e. experts in discriminating profitable and unprofitable acts. Maulan, 'hereditary' i. e., servants by family continuance. Sthiran, 'constant' i.e. not at any time resorting to others. S'uchin, 'pure', i. e., possessing external and internal purity, mantrinah, 'ministers': prakurcîta, 'should make'. By the plural in the word 10 ministers, seven or eight should be made. As has been expressed, it is indicated that "Ministers seven or eight, one should instal after good examination". Taih, 'with these' i. e., with the ministers severally and all together (i. e., jointly) rajyam 'kingdom' i. e., acts useful to the king such as peace, war etc. Chintayet 'should contemplate' i.e. should consider (312).

Of what kind should the Brahmana priest be made? so the Author says

Yājñyavalkya, Verse 313.

Purohitâm, 'priest', in all undertakings, visible as well as 20 invisible, pleased before by donation and respectful treatment made him identify himself with oneself. Of what qualities? Daivajñam, 'knowing astrology', one who knows the evil influence of the Grahas, and the means of their abatement; uditaih 'by the exalted', i. e., as stated in the S'astra, by the study and practise of the dictates of the S'astras, dandanityam 'in the science of polity' i. e., in politics; 25 atharvangirase i.e., the incantations regarding sorcery and the special portion of the Atharva veda mainly dealing with Santikas. Kuśalam 'expert' i. e., well-versed. By the use of the word tatha, 'also' are included the three lores. By the use of the first cha is included the quality of purity stated as for the ministers, and by the second cha, the anvikshiki, 30 the science of metaphysics. (313).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 314.

For the purpose of performing S'rauta and Smarta rites, he should choose and appoint Rtwijas, and he should also perform sacrifices according to rules, giving large 35 presents. (314).

^{1.} Verse 361 infra.

15

Mitâksharâ:—The S'rauta rites such as the Agnihotra &c., the Smârta rites like Upâsanâ &c., for the purposes of accomplishing the performance, these rtwijo vrnîyât should choose Rtvijs; i.e. officiating priests; yajñâñṣcha, sacrifices likewise, such as the Ràjasûya and the like, vidhivat according to rules, bhûridakṣhiṇân, giving large presents i.e., only where large presents are given, should be performed. (314.)

Viramitrodaya

Moreover, S'rauti, i.e. Agnihotra etc., Smarti, such as the Mahadana etc. performance, for that, one should select and appoint a sacrificing priest. He should choose i.e. he should select Brahmanas who are accomplished with the capacity for those performances which can be performed by a Rtwik. By the word eva the necessity of choosing a Rtwik, and by the word cha the selection of the Purchita mentioned before, is included. So it is said.

The Author mentions the purpose for the selection of a rtwik. Bhūridakṣhinān, 'with profuse dakṣhinās' i. e. endowed with dakṣhinās according to one's capacity. Here the word eva follows the expression vidhiwat, Vide the text: "Without food it may destroy a kingdom, a rtwik without the rules; the yajamāna without the dakṣhinā; thus there is no enemy like a sacrifice". Yajnānšcha; yajnān, 'sacrificer' i. e. the subsidiary performances of a big sacrifice. By the use of the word cha is included the Pas'uyāga. (314).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 315.

And also giving objects of enjoyment and riches of 25 various kinds to the vipras, this is the inexhaustible treasure of the kings, that which is bestowed on Brâhmanas. (315.)

Mitâksharā:—Moreover, to the Brâhmanas he should give bhogân, enjoyments, that is pleasures, by 30 *Page 92 means of donations which are the means of getting these; vasūni cha, and riches such as gold, silver, land, &c., vividhâni, of various kinds, râjñâm akshayo nidhih, because this is the inexhaustible treasure of kings, most valuable, that which is given to the Brâhmanas. As the making of 35 gifts has been ordained as a general rule for all, and a donation necessarily follows, yet, for the purpose of establishing that for kings, etc., making of gifts is one of the principal duties, is its repetition here. (315).

20

25

35

Viramitrodaya

Moreover, Bhogańścha, 'pleasures' i.e., enjoyable pleasures such as house, bed, etc. Vasani, 'wealth' such as gold etc. By the use of the word cha twice are included medicines and immunity from harm. Here the author mentions the reason; among the Brahmanas whatever has been bestowed i.e., given such as a house etc., ayam akshayyo rajñam nidhih, 'this is the imperishable treasure-trove of the kings,' consequent upon the donation of a desired object. (315).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 316.

This gift is without any flaw, without any destruction. and untainted by penances. Near the fire, whatever is 15 offered as oblation in the Brahmana fire, is declared to be superior here. (316).

Mitâksharâ:-Moreover, agneh sakâsât, near the fire, than what can be accomplished by offerings into the Fire, than even the Rajasûya sacrifice with profuse dakshinas, vipragnau hutam s'reshtham ihochyate, whatever is offered into the Brahmana fire is declared to be superior here. Because this (gift) is askannam, without any flaw, is without any leakage, avyatha, without any destruction. without the killing of beasts &c., and prâyas'chittairadûshitam. is untainted by penances, viz. (therefore) devoid of the trouble of penances.

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions another reason. Agneh sakûśat, 'more than from the fire' i.e. in the performance to be accomplished by the fire. from oblations in these, Vipragnau hutam śreshtham, the oblations given into the fire in the form of a Brahmana is declared to be superior 30 iha, 'here' i. e., in the Dharmas'astra. The reason for the superiority is that such a gift askannam 'without a flaw' i. e., without leakage: Avyayam 'andiminishable', i. e., without decay. Avyatham-in the reading Avyathan 'without disease', devoid of the destruction of beings-Prayaschittaih adashitam, 'not contaminated by the taints of the performance of penances' (316).

15

25

30

It has been stated before that "one should give riches to the Brahmanas," In what method should one give? The Author states that

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 317.

What he has not got, he should seek to acquire by lawful means; what he has acquired, he should guard with effort; what is preserved, he should increase by moral ways; and what has been increased, he should consign to proper recipients. (317.)

Mitakshara:-For acquiring what he has not got, he should exert according to the rules of Dharmas astra; yatnena labdham, what he has acquired with effort, one should quard palayet, i. e. himself by constant supervision, should protect; what is so guarded pertaining to it, nītyā, by moral ways i. e. by engaging it in trade &c. he should cause it to increase; vrddham cha, and what has been so increased, pâtreshu, in proper recipients, i. e. proper in the three viz. Dharma, Artha and Kama, nikshipet, consign i. e. give away. (317).

Viramitrodaya.

While mentioning the highest fruit of a donation to a Brahmana, 20 the Author mentions the inclusion of wealth properly acquired among donable things Yäjñavalkya, Verse 317.

Dharmena, 'By law', i. e. by lawful means; dhanam, 'wealth', labdhum theta, 'one should wish to acquire', i.e., should try to make one's own; and the wealth 'which is acquired', labdham, yatnena, 'with effort', carefully, pâlayet, 'one should guard'; pâlitam cha, 'and what is guarded', nītyā, 'by moral means', i.e. by employing means of increasing, which are in accordance with morality, and not opposed to S'astra. vardhayet, 'should develop'; thus increased, the wealth, patreshu, 'to proper recipients', i. e., to the Brahmana, nikshipst, 'one should consign', i. e. give; this is the meaning. (317).

Verse 315 above.

After having donated to a proper recipient, what should one do? So the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 318.

After having made a gift of land or having created a corrody, the king should have a document drawn up for the information, in future, of good kings (who will come). (318,)

Mitâksâra:—In the manner as aforesaid, bhûmim dattwâ, having made a gift of land, by abnegating his ownership, kṛtvâ nibandham vâ, or having made a corrody, as in 'for one potful, so many rupees', or 'for one bundle Execution of a of leaves so many leaves', thus having created document.

a charge, lekhyam kârayet, a document should be caused to be drawn. With what object?

15 Âgâminaḥ, coming i. e. coming in future, such as are good and virtuous, nṛpatayaḥ, kings, may get information that by so and so was given, and by such and such a person was accepted Parijñânâya, for their information.

Parthivan, the King, lord of the earth. By this, it is shown that the lord of the land alone, is entitled to make a gift of the land or assign a corrody on such land, but not the person entitled merely to possession. (318).

It has been mentioned above that "he should cause the document to be drawn up." In what manner should it be caused to 25 be done? So the Author states

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 319, 320.

On a piece of a cloth, or on a copper plate marked on the top with his signet seal, having written (the names of) his own ancestors, as well as of himself, the lord of the 30 earth, (319).

Should cause to be recorded a royal order in perpetuity containing the extent of the accepted gift, and the detailed description of the donated property and its parts, bearing his own autograph and the date. (320).

20

25

30

Mitâkṣharâ:—Paṭe, on a piece of cloth, made of cotton, tâmrapaṭṭewâ, on a copper plate, i.e., or on a The method of tablet of copper, âtmanc vans'yān, one's inscribing on ancestors, i.e., great-grand-father, grand-father, the a cloth or a father; and by way of justifying the use of the copper plate. plural as being for a purpose, also a description of the family, i.e., its qualities of bravery, learning, &c., âmtmânam cha, and his own name. By the force of the word cha âmtmânam cha, and his own name. By the force of the word cha, 'and' in the text, (the name of) the donee, pratigrahaparimânam, the extent of the accepted gift, dânachchhedopavarnanam, the detailed description of the donated property and of parts, abhilekhya, having caused to be written.

What is accepted is pratigraḥa, such as a corrody, the proportion of the rupees, &c. What is given is such as a river and the limit, the extent with its measurements, and its description. Such as, "Of such and such a river to the south, this village, or field, on the east, by so much portion of such and such a village and its extention near town &c." All this should be well recorded.

* Page 93. dāna, the donated property, of that chchhedâh, parts by which it is separated, i.e., marked off,

The A'vâṭa, i.e., the limit such as the river, town, road, &c., being capable of fluctuation and there may be increase or decrease in (the area of) the land; to avoid that contingency, it is proper that in his own hand, i.e., written by himself in his own hand. "This is approved of me, of such and such a name, son of and so, what has been written upon this" with this it should be accompanied i. e. should contain;

By date i. e. of two sorts, one calculated from the years from the S'aka' king, and the other in the form of Samvatsara'; so

^{1.} Spec:—is the family name of the race of kings in which the great S'alivahana prospered. It also means an epoch or an era. But the term is specially applied to the Era of Sri S'alivahana which has a difference of 78 or 79 years between the Christian Era. Thus 1937 A. D. would correspond to 1859 Saka Era or 1858.

^{2.} संवत्सर:—This also means Era. It was formed by S'ri Vikramåditya, the celebrated King of Ujjain, whom tradition regards as the patron of Kâlidása. This Samvat Era is said to have commenced at 56 B. C.

10

also should contain the reference to the happening of solar or lunar eclipses &c.

With his own signet seal containing as the figure of an eagle, a boar, &c., marked on the top i.e. marked on the face of the document fixed i.e. finally fixed; a command such as recommending to the "future kings should show that better than a donation (of new) is the maintenance (of old gifts)" thus he should cause the Royal edict to be drawn.

The lord of the earth and not one having the right of possession of the land, and the Lord must be the one who can declare peace and war, and not any owner. Vide the following text:

"He who has the jurisdiction to declare peace or war, for such a one, should there be a writer, who under the Command of the king himself, should write out the king's command."

By the mere fact of the donation itself, the gift becomes established; still executing the Royal command in the form of the document is in support of the right to the entire income by an addition to the right of possession. (319-320).

Viramitrodaya.

There, in regard to a gift of land, and on that occasion, in the subject of a corrody or nibandha, the Author states a special rule

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 318, 319, 320.

Bhûmim, 'land', to the Brâḥmaṇâs and others, dattvâ, 'after having given', on this land such a tax should be taken, such and the like arrangement having made, âgâminam, 'coming', i. e. coming in future, bhadrâṇâm, 'of good and virtuous', i. e. straightforward, nrpatīnam, 'of kings', parijāānāya, 'for the information', lekhyam, 'a document', containing a recital in support of the donation &c., Kârayet, 'one should cause to be made'. (318).

In what manner should one cause it to be made? So the Author says. Pate wa, 'on a cloth or &c.'.

Pate, 'on a pata', i. e. on a cloth, tâmrapatte wâ, 'or on a copper plate', i. e. on a board of copper, swamudrayâ, 'with his signet seal', i. e. with his general sign, upari, 'on', i. e. at the top of the written document, chinhitam, 'marked', śâsanam, 'royal command' i. e. the document detailing the royal order about the donations &c.; âtmane vamsyan, 'one's own descendants', atmanam cha, 'one's own self also'; pratigrahasya, 'of the accepted gift', i. e. of the land to be donated', parimanam, 'measurements'; danasya, 'of the donation', i. e. of the donated land, chhede, 'piece cut off', i. e. of the acceptance after separation, upawarnanam, 'detailed description' such as: "For sixty 5 thousand years, in heaven resides the donor of a land; while one who cuts it off or abets it, for the same (number of years), shall reside in hell", this and the like sentences, demonstrating the resulting fruit, abhilekhya 'having written out', swahastachinhena, 'with the sign of one's own hand', and danakalalikhanena cha, 'with the writing of the time of 10 the donation', sampannam, 'containing', and therefore also permanent, i.e. incapable of being attacked with any doubt about its reliability, mahi patih, 'the lord of the land', harayet, 'should cause to be made'.

By the use of the word tu, 'however', is excluded the necessity of a document for any other donation. In the clause, $atmanam\ cha$, 'by the use 'of the word cha, 'and also', is included the person accepting. (318-320).

Now the Author mentions the place for the residence of the king

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 321.

20

25

30

35

Pleasant, fit for cattle, and which is good for a livelihood, and which is picturesque, he should dwell in such a country. There he should build fortresses for the protection of his people, of himself, and of his treasury. (321.)

Mitâkṣharâ:—Ramyam, pleasant i. e. delightful on account of trees like Champaka, As'oka, &c.; pas'avyam, fit for cattle i.e. which is good for cattle, which would be favourable for cattle-breeding, âjîvyam, good for a livelihood, i.e. on account of the abundance of tubers, roots, fruits, flowers &c. jângalam though this word generally means a country where there is a little of water, and which is full of trees and hills, yet here by the word Jângala is indicated a country where there is abundance of water, trees, and hills. That country, âvaset, he should dwell in; tatra, there, in such a country for the protection of his subjects and of the treasury, such as gold &c., and of himself, he should build a fortress.

That has six varieties as described by Manu': "A desert fortress, a land fortress, a water fort, a forest fort, one fortified by armed forces, and a hill fort; taking shelter of these he should locate and build up his town. (321).

^{1,} See Cb. VII. 70.

20

25

Viramitrodava.

The Author mentions the things which are necessary in the alministration of a kingdom, and which favour and are useful in the protection of the subjects

Yâiñavalkva. Verse 321.

Ramuam, 'pleasant' i. e. charming: paśaryam, 'for the beasts', i. e. useful for the beasts; ajivyam, 'fit for a residence, i. e. on account 10 of beets, fruits, and roots, fit as a residence by the people. Jangalam, 'a table-land', a country with profuse supply of water and hills: some say 'with a high level'. In a country like this, one should dwell, i. e. to say, in such country one should take his residence. By reason of the grammatical rule by which the prepositions Upa, Anu. Adhi, and Â. are used in connection with the root nas the accusative case has the sense of the locative. Tatra 'there', i. e. in such a country: jananam, 'of the people' i. e. of the inhabitants of one's kingdom; kośasya, 'of treasure', such as gold and the like; atmanascha, 'and of oneself' rakshanartham, 'for the protection'; durgani hurvita, 'he should build fortresses'. Fortresses have been mentioned by Manu? thus: "A desert-fort, a land-fortress, a water-fort, and a forest-fort, a fort consisting of armed men, and a mountain-fort; taking shelter under these, one should establish a town". By this, that part of the kingdom which is in the form of forts has been pointed out. (321).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 322.

In every one of these, skilful officers who are experts and pure, he should appoint, who are diligent in matters of income and expenditure. (322.)

Mitâksharâ: -- Moreover, tatra tatra, in every one of 30 these, i.e., in the matters concerning Dharma, Artha and Kâma, religion, wealth and pleasure (in these various departments). adhyakshan, officers, i.e., proper persons as exercising authority; Ho prakūryat, appoint, i.e., invest.

^{1.} Pāṇini I. IV. 48. a कर्मकारक.

^{2.} Oh. VII. 70. See also Kautilya 2nd Adhikarana, Chapters 24 and 25.

They say:—"In matters of Dharma, those who know Dharma; in matters relating to wealth, learned men; in matters relating to women, eunuchs, he should appoint; and low men in reprehensible acts."

What sorts of men? nishnâtân, experts, i.e., not devoted to any other occupation; kusalân, skilful, clever in those particular occupations; suchin, pure, i e., free from all the four sorts! of upadhâs.

A'yakarmasu, in matters of income, such as the places of the production of gold, &c., vyayakarmasu, in matters of expenditure, i.e., regarding ways, &c. of the appropriation of gold etc., udyatán, diligent, i.e., unfagged.

By the use of the word cha, 'and,' is indicated possession of other attributes like wisdom, &c., and so has it been said:—

"Wisdom, freedom from vices, absence of mistakes, zealous application in undertakings, an absolute absence of bad habits, 1 devotion to the master, this makes for fitness." (322).

Viramitrodaya

Moreover,

Yâjñyavalkya, Verse 322.

There for offices regarding religion, treasury, elephants, horses, and the like, and the harem, Adhyakshan, 'officers', i. e. persons having authority, prakuryat, 'one should appoint', i. e. should install. As they say,—"For religious duties, those who know Dharma; for money transactions, learned men; the eunuchs for women, and low men for reprehensible transaction."; heedrian, 'of what sort'? nishnatan, 'experts', i. e. having no other occupation; huśalan, 'intelligent' i. e. skilled in those transactions; śuchīn, 'pure' i. e. devoid of impurity on account of accepting another's wealth. By the use of the word cha

^{1.} उत्पा—Means a trial or test of honesty. This test is said to be of four kinds, viz., (1) Loyalty, (2) Disinterestedness, (3) Continence, and (4) Courage. The purport here is that the king should appoint such tried men who are of approved loyalty, i.e., who have stood the four tests mentioned above without any taint, and hence उत्पाद्धाः The four sorts mentioned above relate to चमें, अर्थ, ऋष् and भय. $33 Balambhatti (Âchārā) [Gharpure's Edition], p. 619.

20

25

are added the aforestated qualities of firmness &c. Aye, 'income' such as for the production of the gold etc.; karmante, 'for the completion of acts' i. e. for the carrying out of transactions begun. vyayakarmani, 'in the matter of expenditure' i. e. in the transactions where money has to be spent for necessary acts like forts etc. which are useful as means of protection. By the use of the word cha, 'and' is indicated the place for the protection where the income is kept. Udyatan, 'diligent' i. e. active. (322).

"The king should give to the Brâhmanas objects of enjoy10 ment and various kinds of riches" thus in a general way gifs from his own property have been mentioned.

The Author now mentions the high merit accruing to the kings for donating objects won by valour.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 323.

Than this there is no higher virtue for kings than what is acquired in war and is given to Brâhmanas that property, and immunity from harm to the subjects always. (323.)

Mitâkshará:—Than this a higher merit for kings does not exist yadranârjitam dravyam viprebhyo * Page 96. dîyate, that property won in battle is being given to Brâhmanas, yachcha prajâbhyo abhayadânam, and further to the subjects, an offer of an assurance of security from harm. (323.)

Viramitrodaya.

More than any other donation, the donation of wealth acquired on a field of battle, as also the donation of assurance of immunity from harm to the subjects, is the best; so the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 323.

Rane, 'in the battle' i.e. in a fight; Arjitam, 'earned'; yad dravyam, 'such wealth'; viprebhyo diyate, 'is given to the Brâhmanâs, and also that prajâbhyah, 'to the subjects', sadâbhayam, in the form of 'perpetual assurance of immunity from harm' i.e. for all times. Diyate, 'what is given', atah paratah uthrshio dharmo nrpanam, 'more

^{1.} See Verse 315 supra.

15

20

30

than this a better religious merit for the kings does not exist. By the use of the word cha, 'and', are added what is earned in a battle i. e. who have submitted themselves in battle and the like. (323).

"The wealth won in battle should be given", so it has been stated above. To one engaged in battle for the purpose of acquiring wealth, a calamity also is possible; thus there would be neither merit nor wealth; thus, than this an abstention is certainly better. To those who entertain such doubts, the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 324.

Those who in battles are killed, for the sake of land without turning their face back, fighting all the while with weapons which have no hidden traps, they certainly go to heaven just as the Yogins do. (324.)

Mitâkṣharā:—Ye bhumyâdyartham âhaveshu, those who for the sake of land &c., being engaged in battle, aparânmukhâh without turning away their faces i. e. facing the enemy, vadhyante, are killed i. e. are destroyed, swargam yânti, they go to heaven, just as those persons go, who are engaged in the practice of Yoga; yadyakūṭaiḥ âyudhaiḥ, provided with weapons which have no hidden trap i.e. not dipped in poison, &c. they fight as combatants. (324)

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 325.

All their steps are like sacrifices of those who though broken, do not turn away; (while) the king acquires the merits of those who are killed while running away. (325.)

Mitâkṣharâ:—Moreover, when his own forces like elephants, horses, chariots, and foot soldiers bhagneṣhu, are broken, anivartinâm, of those who do not turn away, padâni, the steps, kratutulyân, are like sacrifices, i.e., like that of an As'vamedhal. The Author mentions the offence of a contrary action. Vipaláyinâm, of those running away, i.e., while turning away their

1. अश्रोध :—A horse sacrifice. In Vedic times this sacrifice was performed by any king desirous of offspring; but in later periods it was performed only by kings desirous of being styled as 'the king of kings'. Its performance therefore implied that the performer was the supreme conqueror. The consequential fruit of an As'vamedha is therefore very great. One not turning away from battle acquires this fruit.

10

faces, hatanam, killed, raja sukrtamadatte, the king acquires all the merits. (325.)

Viramitrodaya.

The donation of what is earned in battle has been stated; that is not proper. For, by the text, such as, 'one should not resort to doubtful transactions,' a doubt may arise that one should not make battle, and this demonstration of what must not be done is just like a heinous act not approved of by the Sastra. Anticipating this objection, the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 324-325.

Aparājitāh, 'not defeated', aparāmukhānām, 'of those who have not turned their faces'; bhūmyartham, 'for the sake of land'; āhaveshu, 'in battles'; āhūṭaiḥ, 'free from tricks', i.e. with weapons which are free from any tricks, viz., which have not been poisoned; kryamāneshu, 'while making'; vadhyante, 'who are killed,' Yoginaḥ, 'they are Yogis' i.e. those who are given to the study of Yoga practices; swargam yānti, 'go to heaven'. As for the yogis, for them the heaven has been stated in the Bhagwdagitā¹.

"Having attained the regions of meritorious men and having resided there for a long time, in the houses pure of fortunate men one should return whose powers of yoga have ceased". Bhagneshu, 'broken i. e. defeated; swasainyeshu, 'among one's own forces', anivartinam, 'not returning' i. e. not turning their faces back, which are being given in battle, each one is equal to a horse sacrifice. This is the meaning. In the reading, Vinivartinam, 'returning from a broken army'. Bearing in mind the rule that a king should not run away in a battle, the Author mentions a fault of the runner away, Raja Sukrtamiti, 'the king merits etc. Hatanam, 'killed' i. e. of those who have been attacked with weapons in a battle. Vipalayinam, and therefore those who run away, Sukrtam, 'their merits' the opponent king, takes. The meaning is that of those who run away, their merits perish. (324-325).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 326.

"I am thine", one so declaring, a eunuch, one who is without any arm, one who is fighting with another, these, one should not kill; as also one who has turned away, or who is merely a spectator, or such like, in the battle. (326.)

^{1.} Adhyāya VI. 41. See also Adhyâya, II. 37.

Mitâksharâ:—Moreover, tavâham, I am thine, one who so declares, him, or klībam, one who is a eunuch, nirhetim, without arm, i.e., without any weapon, parasanga am, who is fighting with another, i.e., who is engaged in battle with another, vinivṛttam, who has turned away, i.e., from the battle-field, or yuddha prekṣhaṇako, who is a spectator in the battle, who is a looker on, even such a one na hanyât, one should not kill; thus is this connected with all clauses. By the use of the expression, âdi, and such like, are included the drivers of the chariots, &c. As says Gautama:

10

5

"No sin in slaying in battle, excepting those who have lost their horses, charioteers, or those who are without arms, those who join their hands (in supplication), those who flee with dishevelled hair, those who sit down with averted faces, those who have climbed on eminences or trees, messengers, and those who declare themselves to be cows or Brāḥmaṇas".

15

S'ankha also has said :-

"No one who is drinking, or who is eating, or who is taking off his shoes, or one who is not clothed in armour by one with an armour, not a woman, nor an elephant, nor a horse, nor a charioteer, nor a messenger, nor a Brâḥmaṇa, nor a king, one who is not himself a king, one should kill." (326).

20

Viramitrodaya

The Author mentions other rules for the kings in battle Yâjñavalkya, Verse 326.

25

Tavaham, 'I am thine', iti, 'thus', vadinam, 'saying'; klibam, i. e. 'eunuch'; nirhetim, 'without an arm' i. e. without a weapon; parasangatam, 'engaged with another' i. e. fighting with another. vinivrttam, 'turning away' i. e. from a fight which he had commenced. yuddhaprekshanakam, 'a spectator at the battle', i.e. who is there only as a spectator; by the use of the word Âdi &c. is included one who surrenders by holding a grass blade in his mouth. The prefix ka is used in the primary sense. The use of the word cha is with a view to include those who have been without a horse, and also the charioteer etc; that has been stated by Gautama¹ thus: "No fault in killing in battle, excepting those who are without a horse, a charioteer, one without a weapon, those who have folded their arms, one having dishevelled hair, those who have turned their faces, those who have sat on the ground, those who have climbed up the tree, a data, a messenger, and those who declare themselves as a cow and a Brahmana."

35

^{1.} Ch. X. 17-18.

S'ankha:—"Not one who is drinking water, nor who is eating, not one who is putting off the shoes; not one who is clad in an armour, by one who wears an armour; not a woman, nor an elephant, or a horse, not a charioteer, nor a messenger, nor a Brahmana, nor a king who is 10 not a king, should kill. (326).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 327.

Finishing the protection, rising up, he should inspect the income and the expenditure personally. After that having looked into cases, and after having bathed, he may 15 eat at his pleasure. (327.)

Mitâksharâ:—Kṛtarakṣhaḥ, finishing the protection, of the city and of himself, also having made arrangements for the protection, every day in the morning utthâya, rising up, swayameva âyawyayân pasyet, himself personally he should inspect the income and the expenditure. Tato vyawahârân dṛṣhṭwâ, after that having looked into cases, at midday time, snâtvâ, having bathed, kāmato, at his pleasure, at the proper time, bhuñjîta, he may eat. (327).

Viramitrodaya.

25 For a king who has commenced one of the routine duties of the morning the Author mentions other morning duties

Yajnavalkya, Verse 327.

Krita raksah, one, of whom the protection, i.e. a protective action both divine and human of two sorts, has been taken. One of this 30 character is kṛtarakṣhaḥ, 'of whom the protection rite has been performed', samutthaya, 'having got up' i. e. having refreshed; swayamayavyayau paśyet, 'himself should examine the income and the expenditure'; tato vyavaharan 'after that the judicial trials,' which will be explained hereafter, consisting of four parts viz. the plaint, the 35 answer, and the rest, up to the stage of success or defeat; dṛṣhṭwa, 'having determined' i. e. having considered; at midday, snatwa,

^{1.} i. e. the ceremony repeating the Raksha mantras &c.

10

25

'having taken his bath'; kâmato, 'according to his pleasure' i. e. at his leisure, bhuñjîta, 'he may take his meals,' excepting such as has been prohibited. (327).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 328.

The gold brought over by his agents, in the treasury houses, one should deposit. He should interview the spies thereafter, and the messengers he should send away, in company of his ministers. (328).

Mitäksharâ:—Afterwards hiranyādikam, gold, &c., vyâpṛtair, by his agents, i.e., appointed to bring gold, &c., ânîtam, brought over, after himself personally having inspected bhânḍâ-gâreṣhu nikshipet, he should deposit it in the treasury house.

After that chârân, spies, i.e., trustworthy, and who have returned (from their work), pas'yet, he should interview, and those who were sent into the enemies' kingdom for ascertaining news in the disguise as ascetics, mendicants, &c., and moving in secret, chârán dṛṣḥtwâ, having seen the spies, he may seat them at some place.

And, after that, he should interview dûtān, the messengers.

The Dûtas, i.e., those who openly are sent to 20

* Page 95. other kings and go and return from that place (openly).

They are of three kinds, Nisṛṣḥṭârthâḥ, Sandiṣḥṭârthâḥ, and S'ásanârthâḥ. Among these, the Nisṛṣḥṭârthas are those emissaries who are competent to explain themselves the purport of the king's message, in their own words appropriate to time and place. Those who merely repeat the errand in the words told are Sandīṣḥṭârthâs.¹ The S'àsanaharâḥ, however, are those who carry the edicts of the king.

These, who had been sent before and who had returned 30 mantrisangatah, being attended by his ministers, pasyet, he should see. Having seen these envoys and having heard their report, he should send them out again. 328.

^{1.} Somewhat like heralds and couriers.

Yājñavalkya, Verse 328.

Then, brought by the officers engaged for that purpose, gold and other things, Bhandagare, 'in the treasury house' i. e. in the treasury house he should deposit either himself or through his officers, as may be proper; by this has been pointed out that the treasury is one of the principal departments of an administration; tatah, 'then', chârân, 'spies', secret messengers of news who had returned, pasyet, 'he should see', and ascertain what they would relate. Mantrisangatah, 'being in the company of ministers', he should send messengers in accordance with 10 the strength or weakness of his enemies as communicated by the spies. He should despatch his messengers, with secret messengers for negotiations of peace or declaration of war. The plural in the word messengers is with the object of pointing out the three-fold division of messengers namely nisrshtartha, sandishtartha, and śasanahastah among these, one who himself is a spokesman of the affairs of his kingdom by proper regard to the country and time is known as nisrshtartha; one who communicates the verbal message to the other is a sandishtartha; one who carries the written communication of the king is sasanahasta. (328).

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 329.

After that, he may divert himself as he may like, alone or in the company of the ministers; and having inspected his forces, he should have consultation with the commander of the army. 329.

Mitâksharà:—Afterwards in the afternoon, swairam, as he may like, according as he wished, alone, in the harem, vihâri syât, he may divert himself, mantribhirwâ, or in the company of his ministers, who were in his confidence, skilled in arts &c., accustomed to wits, surrounded by these, also by women possessing beauty, youth and accomplishments. As says Manu.

35 "After taking his meals he may divert himself in the company of women in the harem; and having diverted himself, at his pleasure he should again discuss the affairs of the state."

^{1.} Oh. VII. 221.

10

20

After that, dressed in a special uniform, and adorned with flowers, sandal paste, and ornaments, having reviewed the forces consisting of elephants, horse (cavalry), the chariots and foot-soldiers, senápatinā saha, with the commander of the army, with the commander-in-chief, regarding the protection of these forces appropriate to time and place, he should consider, chintayet. (329).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 329.

Tatah, 'thereafter', aparanhe, in the mid-day, swairam, 'according as he liked' i. e. according to his desires, vihâri antahpuram purastrìbhissaha Ekâki kridâyuktah syât, 'he may divert himself in the company of women in the harem all alone in athava mantribhih, 'or in the company of ministers, such of them as had his confidence, and who were soft friends, he may divert himself. Tatascha, and after that, balanam, 'of the forces' consisting of the elephants and the horses, darsanam krtva, 'having taken a review', senanya, 'with the chief officer of the army' i. e., with the commanderin-chief, he should contemplate the proper ways about the preservation of his power by regard to the conditions of the country and time, as says Manu1: "After having had his meals, he may indeed divert himself in the company of women in the harem; having, according to his desire. enjoyed diversions, he should again resume the consideration of the affairs". By this the army referred to hereafter by the word danda, has been shown to be an important part of the political organization. (329)

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 330.

Then having finished his evening prayers, he should 25 hear the secret reports of the spies. Then with music and dancing he may enjoy his meals, and should read sacred books also, (330).

Mitāksharā:—Afterwards in the evening time, sandhyāmupāsya, having finished his evening prayers. Of that which as a general rule has been already ordained, a repetition again is that it may not be forgotten under pressure of business.

After that, in his interior apartments, chárânâm gûdhabhäshitâm, the secret reports of those spies, those whom he had already seen before, and had caused them to be kept seated in a particular place, with an arm in his hand. S'rnuyát, he should hear.

^{1.} Ch. VII 221

^{2.} See Verse 346.

As has been said by Manu.1

"Having performed his twilight-devotions, he should hear in the inner apartment well-armed, reports of secret reportes and the doings, of the spies.

After that, with music and dancing, having divreted for some time and entering a separate apartment, bhuñjîta, he may take his meals, vide the text.²

"Having gone to another secret apartment and bid those people go, he may go for the meals, enter the harem, along with women."

Thereafter, that these may not be forgotten he may, according to his capacity, repeat the sacred texts, swadhyayan pathet. (330).

15 Viramitrodaya

Having performed the evening prayers, from all the spies arrived after the afternoon, he should hear the secret reports, thereafter accompanied by singing, dancing, and sports and other diversions he should thereafter take his meals.

Swaddyayam, the sacred texts', i.e., the Vedas for the purpose of study, with a view to study, as appears from the use of the word eva. By the use of the word cha is included the hearing of music. (330).

Yájñavalkya, Verses 331, 332, 333.

He should retire with the sound of musical instru-25 ments, and wake up also in the same manner. Then he should think over the scriptures, after having awakened from sleep, and then also all other duties to be performed. (331).

He should dispatch his spies after that to his own 30 and to others, with honours. By the Rtvij, Purohita, and A'chârya being blessed with the benediction., 332.

^{1.} Ch. VII. 223.

^{2.} Manu Ch. VII. 224.

10

25

30

Having seen the astrologers, and physicians, he may give them a cow, gold, and land, and household accessories, and then to the s'rotriyas, houses as well. 333.

Mitâksharâ:—After that, tûrya, s'ankha, ghoshena, with the sound of musical instruments, like conch-shell, Samvis'et, he may retire, i.e., go to sleep; tathaiva, and in the same manner, i.e., with the sound of musical instruments and the like, pratibudhyet, he should wake up. After having arisen, alone, during the last quarter of the night, S'âstrāni chintayet, he hould contemplate the scriptures. Sarvakartavyatāscha, and also all other duties, viz., all the matters.

This, however, has been stated in regard to one who is in the enjoyment of normal health. But one not in good health, should appoint another for all these acts. As says Manu¹.

"These rules a king should observe when in good health, but, if 1 he be unwell, he may entrust all these to his chief minister." (331).

Afterwards, while still there, those in whom he had confidence swan charan, his own spies, having *Page 96. honoured them with gifts, honours, and other marks of regard, sweshu, to his own feudatories and officials in charge of provinces, and anyeshu cha, to other kings also, preshayet, he should despatch, for the purpose of finding out their plans of action.

After that, having performed the morning prayer, and offered his oblations to the fire, purohitartwigāchāryādibhirāsibhirabhinandito, being felicitated with the benedictions of the Purohita, Ritvijas and the A'chârya, Jyotirvido dṛṣhṭwā, and having seen the astrologers, and from them having assertained the positions of the planets &c., and having directed the purohitas &c., to perform the propitiatory rites and, vaidyañs'cha dṛṣhṭwā, and having seen the physicians, and having told them the condition of his own bodily health, and having directed, the prescription of remedies, gām, a cow i.e., a milche cow, Kānchanam, mahim cha, gold and land also, and naives'ikāni, household accessories, also such as may be useful at a marriage, viz. ornaments for a bride etc., grhāni cha, and houses whitewashed with lime, s'rotiyebhyo, to the srotriyas, to the scholars of the Vedas the Brahmanas, dadyat, he should give; this applies to each one of the above. (331-32-33.)

Viramitrodaya.

Turyaqhoshena, 'with the sound of the music' i. e. with the accompaniment of musical instruments, tathaira, 'in the same manner,' with the sound of music i. e. pratibudhyeta, 'he should wake up'. By the use of the word cha be may be awakened by the singing, by the praises of the bards and singers, swabudhya śastrani, 'by his own 10 efforts', and in accordance with the sastra, the bundle of duties he should 'contemplete' i. e. consider. (331).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 332 (1).

Then while yet there in his own place like the harem etc., sweshu, 'in his own' place like the harem, etc., anyeshu, 'of others' i. e. in the 15 foreign territory, he should despatch spies after conferring on them gifts, honors, and other signs of regard. By the use of the word cha are included the Srauta and Smarta performances viz. the offering of oblations to the fire and the performances of the sandhya worship. 332 (1).

Yajnavalkya Verses 332, 333.

20 Rtwiks, etc. as have been described before, with their benedictions, abhinanditah, 'pleased', greeted, jyotirvidah, i. e. the students of the stars i. e. jyotishikan, 'astrologers', vaidyan, i. e. medical men, seeing these, and from them having ascertained the condition of the planets, and of his body, and consequently having directed the performance of graha sacrifice, useful for the grahasanti, and the use of the 25 medicine, useful for bodily health, and having bestowed on the purchitas and s'rotriyas, gâm, kânchanam, mahîncha, 'cow, gold, and land also,' he should also give articles useful for a marriage, such as ornaments for the bride and the like, and also houses. By the use of the first cha, are included things useful for the performance of the upanayana and other rites, and by the use of the word tatha, also, are included Brahmanas other than the shrotriyas. By the second cha, are included the materials for the grahas. Moreover, these performances having to be performed daily, whenever "possible, oneself should observe them. When however, it is not possible, some of them may be got done by a 35 proper Brahmana. Yadaha as they say "this course of conduct should be perform when free from disease; if he be unwell, all this may be delegated to the chief of the ministers' (332-333.)

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 334.

Towards Brâhmanas forebearing; towards his friend, without duplicity; towards his enemies, angry; should be a king, to his servants and subjects, as a father. (334.)

Mitâkṣharâ—Moreover, Brâḥmaṇeṣhu, towards Brâḥmaṇâs, although insulting him, kṣhamî, forbearing, having for bearance; snigdheṣhu, towards friends, who were affectionate such as friends and the like ajimḥaḥ, without duplicity, not 10 crooked, krodhanorishu, he should be anyry towards enemies, bhṛtyawargeṣhu prajāsu cha, and towards the whole class of servants and subjects, by promoting their welfare and by removing what is injurious to them, pitâ, like a father, full of kindness and mercy, syât, he should be, this is to be connected with all, with 15 every one of the above phrases.

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions another duty of the king greater than all Yajñavalkya, Verse 334.

Raja 'a king', Brahmaneshu, towards the Brahmanas, even though they have committed an offence; kshamavan, 'forbearing;', snigdheshu, 'towards friends' i. e. to persons who are friendly, and relations. ajimhah; 'without duplicity' i. e. not crooked; arishu, 'among enemies', krodhanah, 'angry' i. e. by habit irate; bhrtyavargeshu, 'towards the class of dependents such as sons, servants etc.,' prajasu, 'towards the subjects' i. e., towards the citizens.—By the use of the word cha, those who have surrendered themselves to his mercy,-piteva, 'like a father' i.e., entitled to protect and control their manners and habits; syat, 'he should be'. (334.)

The Author mentions the fruit of governing subjects

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 335.

From their meritorious deeds he takes the sixth part by protecting them with justice; since the greatest of all 30 gifts is the protection of the subjects. (335).

Mitâksharâ;—Yasmânnyáyena, because by justice, i. e. according to the method in the s'âstra, prajâh paripâlayan, protecting subjects, puṇyât, from meritorious deeds, accumulated by the subjects who have been so protected, shadbhâgam, a sixth portion, i.e., the sixth part, âdatte, he takes, because, of all gifts like those of land and the rest, prajánám paripâlanam adhikam, protection of subjects is of greater fruit, therefore, towards subjects just as father, so he should be; is the connection with the past. (335).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 336.

By cheats, theives, men of bad livelihood and of violent deeds, and the rest, when troubled, he should protect his subjects; from the Káyasthas, particularly. (336.)

Mitâkṣharâ:—S'aṭhas, cheats, deceits, those who, by getting into confidence, take away the property of another by defrauding them; those who take away in secret are, taskaras, thieves, durvṛttâḥ, men of bad livelihood, such as jugglers, gamesters, &c. Sahaḥ, means force; by force whatever is done is Sâhasam. Where the Sâhasam is mahat or great, it is called Mahâsâhasam. Those who live by this—great force are called Mahâsâhasikas, of violent deeds, i.e., those who take away openly by force.

By the word adi, 'and the rest', are included persons who are hereditary conjurers, and live by that profession.

By these pīdyamânâḥ, troubled, i.e., oppressed, prajá rakṣhet, the subjects, he should protect. Kâyasthas, accountants as well as scribes. Oppressed by them the subjects, one should vis'eṣhataḥ, specially, protect, from their oppression. Because, they being the favourites of the king, and being excessively cunning, and because they are most difficult to be controlled. (336).

Viramitrodaya

With a view to point out the protection of subjects as a principal one among the duties of a king, the Authour mentions the highest fruit from the protection of subjects.

15

25

30

Yâjñyavalkya, Verse, 335 336.

Raja, 'king'; nyayena, 'by justice' i. e. by the path in accordance with the S'astra; prajah', 'subjects'; pari, 'on all sides', about; sarvatobhave, 'by all means', i. e. on all sides, namely by doing what is good, and by preventing what is bad; palayan, 'by thus protecting', krtat, 'from the acquired', punyat, 'meritorious virtue'; shadbhagam, 'the sixth part' i. e. one sixth portion, 'prapnoti, 'he gets, yatah, 'since', prajanam paripalanam, 'the protection of the subjects' is capable of yielding greater merit, meritorious rewards, than all other donations, i. e. the donations of a weighment'; therefore from the chatas i. e. cheats and the like, and in particular from the writers authorized by the king viz., kayasthas &c. when oppressed, he should protect the subjects, i. e. free them from oppression.

Châtas, 'cheats,' by deceipt taking away others' property; taskarâh, 'thieves', durvrtah, 'men of bad conduct' such as gamblers and the like; mahasahasikah, 'men of violent deeds', men who commit violent actions which would jeopardize the lives of others; by the use of the word adi are included those, who accept bribes and the cheats etc stated by Manu':— By the use of the word adi are included those authorised by the corporations. By this has been indicated the people hereinafter to be described as a part of an administration. (335-336).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 337.

Being unprotected, whatever little offences the subjects commit, from that verily goes to the king the half, inasmuch as he takes taxes from them. (337).

Mitâksharâ:-Arakshymânâh prajâh, unprotected subjects, yatkinchit kilbisham, whatever little offence like theft, adultery etc., kurvanti, commit, tasmât, from that, i.e. from the sin, ardham nrapateh, half to the king, goes as his share, yasmâdasau, because he the king, in consideration of protection, karân grṇhâti, takes taxes, from the subjects. (337).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author mentions the fault in not providing for the protection of the subjects

^{1.} This is the rite under which one gets himself weighed in silver and gold, and the amount is distributed as a donation. It is called বুৱাহান.

^{1.} Ch. IX, 258.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 337.

Arakshamanah, 'not protected', praja, 'subjects', yat kinchit, 'whatever a little', chouryadikam, 'such as thefts' etc., kilbisham, 'offences', papam, 'evil deeds', kurvanti, 'they perpetrate', tasmat, 'from that' i. e. from the sin, ardham, 'half', of the demerit, nrapateh, 'of the king', bhavati, becomes.

Here the oblative is in the sense of the genitive. By the use of the word tu, 'however', from the meritorious acquisitions sixth is taken off.

It may be said that by saying that the sixth of the meritorious 15 virtues and the half of the evil deeds accrue to the king, there is an incongruity, so the Author says:—

Asau, 'this', raja, 'king', rakshanartham, 'for protection', karam grahnati, 'levies taxes', tasmat, 'therefore', it is but proper that there should be a transmission of half the sin. In the case of meritorious acquisitions, however, even by the king engaging himself in the matter of protection of the subjects, no money payment is made; therefore a sixth of the meritorious merit is the quantity transmitted. (337).

Yājñavalkya, Verses 338-339.

Those who are placed in a responsible position in 15 his kingdom, of them, having known through the spies the conduct, the king should honour the righteous, and punish the opposite. (338).

Those who subsist on bribes, after having deprived them of their wealth, he should banish them; 20 *Page 97. after endowing, them with donation, honour, and with hospitality, he should always make the S'rotriyas settle (in his kingdom) (338-339), Mitâksharâ:—Of thos? appointed by the king on the posts of authority vicheshtitam, the conduct, i.e. the behavior châraih, through the spies, possessing the qualities described above, having properly known; sâdhun, the righteous, officials who are well-behaved sammânayet, he should honour, with donations, honour and hospitality; viparitân, and the opposite, whose conduct is bad, the king, after investigating fully into their misdeeds, ghâtayet, should punish them, according to the extent of their guilt, (338).

õ

And again, those utkochajivinah, who live by bribe-taking, should be deprived of thier wealth, and the king should banish them from his kingdom. While s'rotriyân saddânamânasatkâraih, the s'rotriyas, with grants, honour, and hospitality, he should sadaiva, for all times, vâsyet, induce to settle, in his kingdom (338-339.)

Viramitrodaya

Yajnavalkya, Verses 338-339.

In the kingdom, those who are employed in the matter of collecting rents by the king, their actions, all these, good or bad, having scertained through spies, those who are well behaved should be honoured by donations, honours and other respectful treatment. Those who act the other way i. e. who are ill disposed, the king should punish, when the offence deserves punishment, i. e. when the offence deserves corporeal punishment. Elsewhere, however, the punishment should be according to the offence. This is the purport. Therefore, the word tu is with a view to point out their degradation. It has been stated in matters of judicial administration such as deciding suits etc. the recovery of money should be by lawful means, upajivinah, 'those living by that,' i. e. those who have been appointed as officers, those, should be deprived of everything and should be banished i. e. should be driven out of the territory. S'rotriyan, 'learned men' i. e. students of the branches of learning. By means of honour and the like, he should induce them to reside always. Sammanazh, 'by good treatment' i. e. by salute, by standing, and by greeting, and by following them when departing, pleasing them in these ways. Satharah, 'honourable treatment' i. e. investing them as priests in sacrifices etc. (338-339).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 340.

Through unjust ways, the sovereign who from his kingdom increases his treasury, he not long afterwards, bereft of good luck, goes to destruction along with his kinsmen. (340.)

Mitâksharâ:—Yo, that sovereign, who swarâshtrât, from his own kingdom, anyâyena, through unjust ways, taking wealth increases his own treasure, so achirât, he not long afterwards, i. e.

15

25

30

10

15

Yájňavalkya Verses 340–342.

soon, indeed vigatas'riko, being bereft of good luck, with lost wealth, along with his kinsmen, goes to destruction. (340.)

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 341.

The fire arising from the heat of the sufferings of the subjects dose not cease without fully burning the family, fortune, and life also, of the king. (341.)

Mitâkṣharâ:—Prajânâm, of the subjects, pidanena, by suffering caused by robbers &c., yah santâpaḥ, that heat which arises through it, tasmât udhbhuto hutâs'ana iva, is like the blazing physical fire arising from that; by reason of its causing intense heat, the heap of misdeeds is expressed by the word hutàs'ana (the consumer of the oblations); râjñaḥ kulam s'riyam prâṇânscha, adagdhwâ, not without destroying the family, fortune, and life of the king. i. e. without leading to destruction nanivartate, does not cease. (341).

Viramitrodaya.

The king should not take money from the subjects by illegal means, nor should be trouble them by imprisonment or beating; thus intending, the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 340 341.

Anydyena, 'by illegal means', i. e. by punishing those who ought not to be punished and by recovering more taxes'; Svakośam, 'one's own treasury', i. e. wealth vardhayet, 'increases'. 'he immediately Sabandhavah along with his relations,' i. e. with the sons etc. deprived for his wealth and deposed from his kingship, perishes. By troubling, viz. by imprisoning and beating the subjects, and otherwise giving them trouble, that rage i. e. pain which is created from that, when intensely developed, the fire which is created in the form of anger of the subjects, or in the form of illegalities of the king, without burning the families of the king i. e. destroying the families of the king, does not abate. (340-341).

Yajnavalkya, Verse 342.

That very duty which exists for a sovereign for the protection of his own country, that very one in entirety, he incurrs when he brings under his sway another kingdom. (334).

10

20

30

Mitâkṣharâ:—For protecting his own people according to just laws, whatever duty exists for the king, all that for the reason to be hereafter stated, pararâṣḥṭram vas'am nayan, one bringing another people under his sway, i. e. assimilataing to his own, âpnotî, he incures, one sixth share of their merits also. (342).

Viramitrodaya.

Even when the troubling of other nations has been laid down as a necessity under pressure how can the obstruction of other's territories be proper? so the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 342.

Vaśam nayan 'after subjugating them,' he should merge them in one's own.

Moreover, with a view to subjugate a foreaign nation, ways which have been laid down such as troubling their subjects, killing, just as in the case of sacrificial beasts have been ordained, it is unobjectionable; this is the meaning. (342)

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 343.

In whichever country, whatever be the customs, laws, and family ursages, those verily should be maintained by him, when the country has come under his control. (343).

Mitâksharâ:—Moreover, when an enemy's country has come ueder his control, then he should not make an intermixture of the customs and laws of his country. Yasmin des'e, in whichever country, yaâchârah, whatever be the customs, kulasthitirvyawahâro wâ, or family usages and laws, as they were before, those should be maintained by him in the same state, unless otherwise repugnant to the S'âstras. By the expression yadâ vas'amupägata etc., when the country has come under his control, is shown that before the country coming under his full control, there is no rule (because it is in a state of war still). As has been said¹.

"Having obstructed the enemy, he should encamp, and his kingdom, he should harrass; and should frequently pollute the corn, water, and the fuel." (343).

^{1.} By Manu Ch. VII. 195.

20

25

30

35

Viramitrodaya

After subjugating, giving trouble to the subjects of that territory is against the ordinance; intending this, the Author mentions the duties of a king in regard to a nation which has been brought under subjugation

Yajnavalkya, Verse 343.

When this foreign country has been brought under one's own sway, then up to that time whatever the customs and the usages, such as marriage with a maternal uncle's daughter &c. were prevailing in the country, these customs and usages in that country should be maintained. In a particular country whatever may be the usage as to public transactions such as the levying and recovering of taxes, that should be matained in the same manner at that place. (343)

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 344.

Based on mantra as the kingdom is, therefore the mantras should be kept well protected; so that, of it, the acts, should not be known, until the appearance of their results. (344).

Mitâksharâ:—As "along with them, should contemplate the kingdom". thus has been stated before.\
*Page 98. mantramulam râjyam, a kingdom is based on mantra, tasmânmantram, therefore the mantra, with efforts, should be made as well surakshitam, very carefully gaurded, yathâ, so that, asya, of him, i. e., of the king karmanâm, of acts, such as peace, war, and the like, âphalodayât, until the appearance of results, others should not know the mantras. (344).

Viramitrodaya.

Moreover,

Yājīyavalkya, Verse 344.

Mantrah, 'secret Counsel,' will be stated hereafter tannulam, based on that' i. e. dependent on that, is the stability of a kingdom. Therefore all counsel should be made with perfect secrecy. The Author explains how it should be kept carefully guarded. In such a way:that the result of the king's actions, such as peace, war, etc., should be known to none excepting those who have been admitted into confidence until the accomplishment of the result. (344).

^{1.} See Verse 312.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 345.

An enemy, a friend, a neutral, an adjoining one, the one next to him, and the one beyond, should be thought of in due order by means such as friendship and the like. (345)

5

Mitâksharā:—Moreover, arih, enemy; mitram, a friend, an aliy. One different from both these, is udâsinah, a neutral, unconcerned. These three again are three-fold: Born, Artificial and Natural. Among these is a 'born enemy' such as, half brothers, uncles, and their sons etc. 'An artificial enemy' is one of whom some wrong has been done, or by whom some wrong has been done. 'A natural (enemy)' is the ruler of an adjoining country. "An inherent friend' is a sister's son, a father's sister's son, a mother's sister's son, and the like. 'An artificial friend' is one who has done a good turn, or towards whom some good has been done. 'A natural friend' is the ruler of a state next beyond the adjoining state.

15

10

Free from the characteristics of inherent and artificial, friends and enemies, is an inherent 'unconcerned' and an 'artificial unconcerned'. A 'natural unconcerned' is the ruler of the country which is intervened by two other kingdoms.

20

The enemy is fourfold on account of its division into (1) Yâtavya, who is to be harassed, (2) Uchchhettavya, who must be extirpated, or uprooted, (3) Pidaniya, who is to be troubled, and (4) Kars'aniya, who is to be humbled. There, a ruler of an adjoining country, is yâtavyah, to be harassed. The king who is addicted to vice, who is weak in force, who has became averse to worldly business, who is without fortress, has no allies, is not strong, Uchchhettavyah to be uprooted. One wanting in Mantra and force is Pidaniya, to be troubled. One who has powerful allies and strong forces is Kars'aniya, to be weakened. As says a text:—

30

25

"A complete extirpation by harassment, controlling the forces, and weakening, they say, is by exacting penalty from his treasury, thus it has been said."

15

20

25

A friend is two-fold: One who is to be strengthened, and one who is to be weakened. One weak in money and forces is Bṛṇhaṇīyam, to be strengthened. One strong in finance and forces is Kars'aniyam, to be weakened.

Anantarah, one adjoining, Tatparah, the one next to him, and Parah, the one beyond. The Author mentions, a natural enemy, a natural friend, and a natural neutral respectively. A close neighbour is a 'natural enemy.'

The one next to him is a 'natural friend' or ally. The one still beyond, 'natural neutral'. The rest being well-known, have not been described here, again.

This Mandalam kramasah chintyam, circle of neighbouring powers should be thought of in due order, i. e, their intrigues should be got known, and having known, Sāmâdibhirupāyaih to be described later on, he should adjust by means of negotiations and the rest.

Thus, in front, in the rear, and on the flanks, three each, and himself the one, thus this circle consisting of thirteen kings, is called the 'royal circle' in the shape of a lotus. In the above enumeration the unconcerned are included. Pārṣhṇi-grāha, Ākranda, Āsāra &c. and are included in the enemies friends, and neutrals Their difference in terminology has been mentioned in other works and so have not been separately stated here by the Lord of the Yogis. (345).

Viramitrodaya

The Author mentions the mantra itself

Yājnavalkya, Verse 345.

Anantarah, 'neighbour', the king of a country which is closely contiguous to one's own region, and who is on inimical terms, tatparah, 'one beyond him', i.e., the king of a country which is closely contiguous to the country of the enemy, is a friend, and the king of a country which is closely contiguous to the region of a friendly king, is indifferent. These three in their order when situated, on the East and the rest of the directions making up in all twelve, the whole group would make up a circle of twelve. That circle should be so arranged that by means of the expedients of peace and the rest, they should be incapable of doing any harm to oneself, the king should consider these ways by delibration, in short viz. such and such a one should be brought under control by such and the like means should be thought over. This itself when done with deliberation is meant by the word mantra. This should be remembered. The enemy and the rest of the foreigners situated on the rear are included among these, and therefore the Author has not separately mentioned them. All the mandalas have been also dealt with there, and for fear of polixity have not been mentioned here. (345).

30

"By peaceful negotiations and other means," so has been 10 stated before.

Now the Author mentions these means

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 346.

The means are Sama peace, Dana, presents, Bheda, division, and Danda, force of arms as well. When properly 15 employed they lead to success, while force of arms is the last course when any other is not possible. (346), Mitakshara:—Samah, peace, i.e., pleasant talk; danam, presents, such as of gold and the like; bhedah, division, i.e., causing splits. That consists among the neighbouring kings of causing enmity with each other. Dandah, force of arms, i.e., causing injury. By secret and open means commencing with the deprivation of property leading upto killing.

These Sâma and the like means by a blockade, etc., these, however, according to country, time &c., samyak prayuktâh, when rightly employed, siddhyeyuh, should succeed. Among these dandastwagatikâ gatih, the force is the course when any other is not possible,—as long as any other mode is possible, it should not be employed. Moreover, this is in regard to those who are to be harassed (pīdaniya), or who have to be weakened (Kars'anviya), With regard to those against whom an attack has to be led (Yâtavya), or one who has to be extirpated (Uchchhetavya), force alone is the principal.

These (modes) Sâma, &c., are not only applicable in regard to the affairs of state, but also they are the resorts * Page 99. for every day dealings of the people. "Study, O child, study, I shall offer you modakâs; or I shall give these to another, and pull out thy ears.1

Viramitrodaya.

While mentioning sama and the other means, the Author states the result of the mantra

Yājnavalkya, Verse 346.

Sama, 'peaceful negotiations' and the other means; samyak, 10 well'. i.e., in accordance with the rules of the mantra; prayuktah, used i.e., brought in practice; sidhyeyuh, 'become successful,' i.e., have their fruits realized. But among these, danda is an inevitable course invariably associated with the impossibility of any other course, and therefore 15 is the last means. Therefore, if other means exist, danda, i.e., punishment should not be used. This is the substance.

Sama, 'negotiations', i.e., pleasant talk, etc., danam, 'gifts', i.e. of gold, etc., bhedah, 'split', i.e., among the enemy and the neighbouring kings, creating mutual enmities; dandah, 'punishment', i.e., killing by attacking kingdoms and the like; by the use of the word cha, 20 four times, in an indiclinable form, it has been stated that the four means according as may be possible, independent of each other, are some times intertwined with each other, may be used for the production of result. (346).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 347.

Alliance and war, as also marching, camping and seeking protection, and bifurcation; these expedients he should employ appropriately. (347).

Mitâksharâ:-Moreover sandhih, alliance, i. e. making an adjustment; vigraha, war, i.e. doing an injury; yanam, marching, i.e. advancing against the enemy, asanam camping, indicative of contempt, or indifference; sams'raysh, protection, i.e. seeking protection of a stronger one. Dvaidhi-bhavah, bifurcation, i.e. his own forces dividing in two.

^{1.} Here the four feet of the verse illustrate all the four modes; thus: first a gentle approach, Sama, then an offer, dana, then threat that others may get the benefit, bheda, and lastly the threat of punishment, danda.

Etân, i. e. these alliance and the rest, guṇân, expedients, yathâvat, appropriately i.e. by regard to place, time, power, friend, &c., kalpayet, he should employ. (347).

5

Viramitrodaya.

Moreover

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 347.

We should not do any harm to each other, such mutual adjustment is sandhi i. e., peace; vigraham, 'split' i. e., war; yanam 'attack' i. e., setting out towards an enemy; asanam, 'camping' i. e., remaining indifferent; sanśrayah 'shelter', taking shelter of a powerful king; awaidhibhavah, 'split', i. e., making two powerful opponents follow oneself by separate talks and other means. As they say: "Of two powerful enemies as opponents, carrying on one's own negotiations with them, one should behave in a course of duplicity like the eye of a crow, without being found out".

These have been technically known as the six qualities, yathavat, 'according as stated', and having regard to time, country, capacity, and friendship and the like, one should employ i. e., make use of them severally. By the use of the word tatha, 'also', has been indicated that what is stated in the preceding word is good. By the use of the word cha has been shown the non-feasibility of these means. (347).

The Author now mentions the (proper) times for marching

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 348.

25

When rich in corn and provision is the enemy's country, then should one march; and also when the enemy is weak and when, one himself has spirited men and animals. (348).

Mitâksharâ:—Yadâ, when, pararashṭram, enemy's 30 kingdom, is sasyaih, with corn, such as rice etc, guṇaischa, and also in provision, such as accessible water, fuel, fodder, &c. upetam, rich (with corn &c.,) and when the enemy is hinaḥ, weak in forces &c.,

30

âtmā cha hṛshtavâhanapūrushaḥ, and one himself has spirited men and animals.

Vâhnâs are horses, elephants and the like. These and Puruṣhas (make the compound) 'animals and men.' Hṛṣhtâḥ 'spirited' are the animals and men, of whom, he, as aforementioned. Tadâ at such time, pararâṣḥṭram, enemies' territory, in order to absorb it into his own vrajet, one should march against. (348)

Viramitrodaya,

Ignoring the details as regards the time of peace, etc. The Author mentions the time for an attack

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 348.

Sasyaih, 'with crops', such as paddy, etc., gunaih, 'provisions', such as water, fuel, etc.; pararashtram, 'enemy country' when it is full of it, and when the enemy is wanting in the matter of conveyances, etc., and when oneself is armed with efficient conveyances and warriors, at such a time one should set out for a conquest. By the first cha is added the enemy's friend. By the second cha is included one's own friend. (348).

If by reason of the rise of beings being under the control of destiny, if when destiny is favourable, then of itself verily the enemy's kingdom and the rest will come under control;

An objection if however it is not (propititious), then notwithstanding human efforts, it will not be so; hence it is futile indeed—this trouble of marching against an enemy &c.

25 To this the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 349.

In providence and in efforts of men rests the fulfilment of efforts. Of these, providence is the manifest, and human effort of the former birth. (349).

Mitāksharā:—Karmasiddhih, the fulfilment of efforts, i.e. getting the fruit in the shape of either as desired or not desired. That not merely daive, in destiny, vyavasthitâ, rests Purushakâre, but also in human effort. Seen in the world, such being the like experience and the uselessness of medical and other sciences also.

Moreover, in the absence of human effort the destiny also is of no use, and so the Author says Tatra daivan, there the destiny, etc. since the acquisitions of the former birth is itself called destiny. Even from small human effort may arise great fruit, therefore Abhivyaktam paurusham paurvadehikam, the manifestation of human efforts of the previous birth is Karma i. e. destiny. Therefore, in the absence of human effort, destiny has no use, and so in the human effort exertion should be made (349.)

10

5

Now the Author mentions other opinions Yâjñavalkya, Verse 350.

Some, on account of destiny, or on account of accident; on account of time, and on account of human effort, or in combination; some expect the resulting fruit, 15 these with keen intellect. (350.)

Mitakshara:-Kechit, some, the fruit, in the form of what is desired or not desired as resulting from daivat, destiny, alone. Others swabhavat, on account of an accident, i. e. of itself it happens, and it does not stand in need of any cause, Others kalat, on account of time; while some purushakaratah, on account of human effort alone. The Author gives his own opinion:

20

Of destiny &c. sanyoge, in the combination i.e. by a concatenation of the three results fruit; thus kusalabuddhayah, men of keen intellect, such as Manu and the rest, think. (350.)

25

By means of any one of these separated by itself, fruit is not obtainable; So the Author shows by an illustration: *Page 100. Yâjñavalkya, Verse 351.

As verily by one wheel alone of the chariot there can be no motion; even so, without human effort, the destiny 30 does not succeed. (351).

Mitâksharâ:—Here nothing is obscure. (351)

Viramitrodaya.

It may be said:

Indeed, the mantra, the application of the means or the operation of the six measures are useless; since the prosperity and adversity of beings is under the control of destiny. So the Author says.

Yâjñavalkya, Verse, 349, 350, 351.

Daire 'in the divine influence'; purushakare, human efforts,' harmasidhihih 'accomplisment of acts, i.e. the acquisition of of the results of actions; vyavasthita 'has been declared' by adjustment, 10 vabhedena 'or has been particularly stated.' tatra, 'there' i.e. between these tw paurvadehiham, 'pertaining to or in the from of invisible results pertainining to the last birth is known as daira, 'luck', while that which is manifest in this body, and which is visible and being executed such as the fight etc. in the form of other activities of men is known as pourusha, 'human efforts.' The use of the word cha, is inclusive of time and inherent qualities stated hereafter. Their characteristics being plain have been ignored. (349.)

Yâjñyavalkya, Verse 350.

The Author points out the double sidedness of the disputants by 20 kechit etc. From merely divine dispensation or luck some expect results, i. e. they assume that the sesulting fruits are entirely dependent upon luck alone, and some to inherent nature, without any cause, expect the result.. This is the connection everywhere, kethit kalat, 'some from time' i. e. time alone; and some however to human efforts alone, such as the mature results of a sacrifice and so on. Some however, of keen intellect i. e. who are endowed with mature thinking, by a combination of time, luck, and human efforts i. e. by a reciprocal union of all these expect the result. It should however be seen that by regard to the inherent nature of a thing its results are realized. So in the Matsyapurana "Luck, human 25 efforts and time, Oh the best of men! these three are for the man who is learned, intended for a fruition." By the use of the experience of the keen in intellect has been shown that the proposition which has been stated is the last that could be deduced, and therefore the Author confirms it by an illustration. The word : hi is used in the sense of cha, and is connected 30 with the word daira by that the 'time' is included. Na sidhyati, 'does not fructify', i.e., does not produce results. This moreover has been stated, as it is useful to the context. In reality, however, it should be remembered that each one by itself without a reciprocal combination can never reach accomplishment. (349-351).

'That the enemy's country should be marched on 'has been mentioned above'. Acquisition is three-fold: the acquisition of gold, the acquisition of land, and the acquisition of allies. Among these the acquisition of allies is the highest. Therefore, to get it, an effort should be made. The means to get it, is speaking the truth. Therefore the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 352

As the acquisition of allies is superior to the acquisi- 10 tion of gold, or of land, therefore, he ehould strive to secure it, and scrupulously maintain the truth, (352).

Mitâskharâ:—As hiranyabhumilâbhebhyah, than the acquisition of gold or land, mitralabdhirvarâ, the acquisition of friends is better, therefore, tatprâptyai yateta, one should endeavour to secure it i.e. should make an attempt. And by conciliation and the rest Satyam cha rakshet, he should maintain truth, Samâhitah, scrupulously, i. e. with utmost care, because on truth is founded the acquisition of friends. (352).

Viramitrodaya.

25

30

15

While pointing out that part of administration known as 'a friend', the Author declares the necessity of their acquisition

Yajnavalkya, Verse 352.

Hiranyalabhat, 'more than the acquisition of gold', and more than the acquision of land, the acquisition of a friend is superior. Therefore in the acquisition of that, i. e., in securing a particular friend, one should endeavour. Therefore the Author mentions the principal duty namely samahitah, 'with care' i.e., always diligently. Whatever promise has been given to a friend, one should keep it truly, i. e., he should maintain it in its true aspect. In short there should be no inconsistency with what has been promised. The plural in the expression bhumilabhebhyah, 'acquisition of land, which is indicative of adi i. e., etc., is with a view to include the acquisition of ministers etc. (352).

^{1.} Verse 348.

Now the Author mentions the seven constituent parts of a kingdom

20

Yájňavalkya, Verse 353.

The Lord, the ministers, the people, the fortress, the treasury, the Rod, as well as the alies, these are the Prakṛtis or constituents; (hence) the kingdom is said to have seven limbs. (353).

Mitâksharâ:— Possessing great energy &c., 'as aforementioned' thus characterised is the Lord of the earth, Swâmi;

Amâtyâh, the ministers i.e., the advisers, Purchitas, and the rest.

Jano, the people, i.e., the subjects, like the Brâhmanas and the rest.

Durgam, the fortress i.e., the Dhanvadurga and the like; kosahh; the treasury i.e., accumulation of riches like gold and the rest; dando; the Rod i.e., the army consisting of the four-fold forces, viz., elephants, horses, chariots, and infantry. Mitráni, the allies, of three kinds, inherent, artificial, and the natural. Etâh, these, the Lord and the rest are the Prakṛtis, constituent lements of a kingdom; thus Râjyam, saptāngam, a kingdom is Saptânga stated to have seven parts. (353).

20

Viramitrodaya.

The seven parts have already been stated; while stating these again in brief the Author mentions the duties of kings after their acquisition

Yājñavalkya, Verse 353.

Swāmi, 'the king' i. e., Lord of the earth characterised by the possession of qualities such as great energy etc., tadavāpti, 'and the acquisition of that' is intended to be the special acquisition; amātyā, 'ministers' including the Purchita etc., janāh, 'the people', i.e., subjects known or indicated by the word rāshīna, nation; durgam, 'fort', such as the desert fort &c.; kośaḥ, 'treasury' i. e., accumulation of gold etc.; daṇdyo, 'force', that by which punishment is administered, viz., the collection of elephants, horses etc.; mitrāni, 'friend' in the form of natural, inherent, and artificial; etāḥ, 'these' prakṛtayaḥ, 'elements,' are the basic principles of a kingdom. Possessed of these seven elements alone is a kingdom known as a kingdom with seven parts. (353).

^{1.} Verse 309.

15

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 354.

That, having obtained, the king should use the Rod against evil-doers; for in the form of the rod justice (dharma) itself was created formerly, by Brahmâ. (354).

Mitakshará: - Tat, that, i.e., the kingdom of such a type, prápya, having obtained, durvrtteshu, against the evil-doers, like cheats, knaves, scoundrels, stealers of other men's properties and wives, and those who injure others. Nṛpaḥ daṇdam patayet, the king should use the rod. Hi, for, dharma, ena, danda rupena, dharma himself in the form of Danda, purâ, formerly-the word 10 Danda has here its etymological sense—Brahmana nirmitah, Danda has term This Brahmâ. etymological significance. Vide this text of Gautama: "The word danda Punishment is that which chastens; so they declare, with that, -those who are not chastened, one should chasten"

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 354.

That kingdom with seven constituents, having acquired durortteshu, 'to the evily disposed' i. e., those intending the deprivation of others' women and others' wealth, dandam, 'punishment' according to their guilt i. e. in the form of deprivation of the entire property, or of 20 capital punishment, nipatayet, 'should inflict', i. e., should administer.

It may be asked, indeed, of a king whose principal duty is to keep the subjects pleased, how can punishment and its infliction be possible? so the Author says 'dharmo hi' 'dharma etc., Hi, 'since', it is in the form of danda or punishment, formerly by Brahmâ, was created. These, moreover, 25 have been stated by regard to the indentity of the receptacle and the thing contained. Keeping the people content by behaving according to dharma itself involves the infliction of punishment, while pampering the people is not part of the duty of a king. This is the substance. By the use of the word eva, 'only' the Author points out such as have come in as instruments to be regarded as only subordinates. By the use of the word tatha, and cha, and by their mutual combination the Author intends the fulfilment of the original rule.

Ch. XI. 28.

15

Yâjñyavalkya Verse 355.

That to wield equitably is not possible by one who is greedy or has not formed his mind; but by one who is true of promise, is pure, well-assisted, and wise. (355).

Mitâksharâ:—Sa, that, the afore-mentioned daṇḍa, lubdhena, by the greedy one, i.e., by one who is miserly; akṛtabuddhinâ, by one who has not formed is mind, i.e., by one fickle-minded; nyâyataḥ, equitably, i.e., according to justice; netum, to wield, i.e., to use, it will not be possible.

By what kind of a person, then? So the Author says, 10 satyasandhena, by one who is true to his promise, i. e. by one who is not unfaithful; s'uchinâ, by the pure, i. e. by Page 101 one who has conquered the sixfold group of enemies; susaháyena, by one who is well assisted, i. e. by him who has the allies above-mentioned; dhimatâ, by the wise, i. e. by one expert in the rules of what is politic and what is non-politic. To wield the rod according to the rules of Dharma. Such a person has the power. (355).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 356.

According to scriptures, when employed, the whole 20 world of Devas, Asuras, and men, that (rod) gladdens; but otherwise, it produces wrath (throughout) the world. (356).

Mitâksharâ:—Sa, that, rod according to the modes mentioned by the S'astras, when utilising them, along with the Devas, Asuras and men this entire world jagadânandayet, gladdens, causes delight; anyathâ, otherwise, by a transgression of the rules of scriptures if employed, it might enrage, prokopayet, the whole world etc. (356).

Not only by unrighteous punishment, there is the enragement of the world, but on the other hand, to the person employing it, there is loss of the visible and the invisible (fruit); so the Author proceeds

30

25

^{1.} The six passions,

10

25

30

Yâjñavalkya Verse 357.

The unrighteous punishment destroys the heaven, fame, and all the worlds; the proper punishment, however, for the king, procures heaven, glory and victory. (357.)

Mitaksharâ:—Again by transgressing the sacred law and actuated by greed &c., the punishment which is imposed, that, by reason of the sinful motives, destroys heaven, glory and, worlds, However, when made by reason of the religious motives, it becomes the cause of securing heaven, glory and victory. (357).

Viramitrodaya

That punishment should be administered according to the s'astra, otherwise the King would be to blame, so the Author says .-

Yajnavalkya Verses 355, 356 357.

Sa, that, in the form of dharma; dandah, 'punishment'; alubdhena. uncovetuously', i.e. absolutely without any greed; krtabuddhina 'with a firm mind', i.e. with a firm idea; satyasandhena 'by the truth abiding', i.e. whose declarations are meticulously maintained; 'suchina, 'pure', jitarishadvargena, who has conquered all the six evil influences; susahayena, 'with good assistance' i. e. having good efficient ministers; dhīmatâ, 'possessing good intellect', knowing the rules of morality; rajña, 'by the king', nydyatah, 'according to the rules of justice. Netum, ' for carrying', i. e. for reaching, s'akyah, 'is possible'. Similarly, with the abnegation of avarice &c., and according to rules of law, susahayah, 'properly assisted' dandayet, 'should punish'. This is the substance.

In the Mitakshara, however, the reading adopted is, 'that it is not possible for one to carry according to the rules of justice who has not a firm mind', and a different meaning of this clause has been expounded: and the second half, satyasandhena ctc. treating it as different sentence. has been expounded. (355)

For one employing the punishment in that manner, and in a manner opposite to that the Author expounds, desirable and undesirable results, while yathasastram, 'according to s'astra etc. i. e. in accordance with s'astra i. e. without transgression of what is stated in the s'astra what is administered, that danha which is so administered gladdens 35 the whole world entirely as is together with gods, demons, and the human beings. Anyatha, 'otherwise' i. e. by transgressing the limit

10

15

10

15

20

of danda which is so administered and has been explained before, he might enrage the world i. e. he might make it angry. (356).

Evam cha, in this manner, that prosperity is the result of the love of the people' and the like, having stated these, the acquisition of a twofold result from idenating property according to the prescribed ways, and its opposite, the Author also states another result.

Swargah, 'heaven' such as is characterised by the text namely where 'no pain' is experienced, etc., a special kind of happiness; kirtim, 'reputation', i.e., reputation for goodness; lokah, 'people', i.e., in the form of subjects; tadvinaéam, 'its destruction', i.e., of a king who acts contrary to these, viz., administering punishment by illegal means, there occurs destruction of the people on account of a defeat in battle and the incidental result of the deprivation of power as a ruler, is inferred by the word tu. (357).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 358.

Even a brother, a son, or a venerable individual, a father-in-law, or the maternal uncle, as well, are not immune from punishment by the monarch, when from their duty they fall away. (358).

Mitâkshará:—Arghya, one venerable, i.e. who is deserving of respect, such as the preceptor and the rest, The rest are well-known. These, brothers, sons and the rest even, when fallen from their duties must be punished; what then of the others? Since one falling away from his duty, adandyo nâma, cannot go without punishment i.e., there can be none, nâsti.

This however is, except the father and the mother, and the like. Thus says Another Smṛti: "Immune from punishment are the mother and the father; snâtâka, the family priest, a hermit, wandering ascentics conducting themselves in accordance with the rules of s'ruti and morality, they are the authorities on Dharma," (358).

Viramitrodaya.

The Author states particularly about indifference in the matter of punishment.

Yājnavalkya, Verse 358.

The brothers and the rest are well-known. Arghyah 'venerable', i.e., deserving of respect, such as the preceptor, etc.; by the words api, and cha, are included the father and the rest; even the brothers, if swerving from their own duty, i.e., go acting against its dictates, rajnya, 'by the king',—nama, shows possibility—it is not possible for such persons to be immune from punishment. 'Even the brother' by this expression it is indicated what then of one who is a neutral or an enemy? (358).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 359.

10

He, the king, who punishes the punishable properly, and executes those deserving capital punishment, shall be deemed to have performed many sacrifices consummated with rich gifts, (359).

Mitâkṣharâ:—Moreover, yaḥ, he who, daṇḍyân, fit to be punished (a king) who punishes the punishable on account of these having fallen from their duty, and who are deserving of punishment, samyaḥ, properly, i. e., according to the rules of S'astras, inflicts punishments such as verbal reproach, and the rest, daṇḍayati, punishes, and who vadhyân, those, fit to be executed i. e., those who deserve death, ghâtayati kills, by that king, consummated with many gifts, are kratubhiriṣḥṭam, the sacrifices deemed to have been performed. He accumulates the fruit of bahudakṣhiṇakratu i. e., of sacrifices in which large gifts are given. This is the meaning.

It should not be supposed that on account of the mention of the fruit, the enforcement of punishment is a kâmya duty, for in the non-observance of it, a penalty (prâyaschitta) is laid down. As says Vasistha:

"For discharging one deserving of punishment, the king shall fast for one night; for three nights the Purohita; a Krchchra for the Purohita for punishing those and who ought not to be punished; and for three nights, the king." (359).

It has been said that "In the case of the guilty a proper punishment should be administered" and the detection of the guilt is not possible without a judical trial. Therefore, for the ascertainment of that, the king himself in person should daily hold judicial proceedings. So the Author says

^{1.} Vasistha-Dharma sutra (XIX, 40 and 41).

20

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 360.

Thus bearing in mind, the king, equal to sacrificial merit, separately, the judicial proceedings personally should attend in the company of the councillors, every day. (360).

Mitâkṣh'arâ:—Iti, thus, in the mode aforementioned, kratutulyam phalam, fruit equal to the sacrifice;

Page 102. by punishing those deserving of punishment the loss of heaven and the like, and thus properly sanchintya, bearing in mind, pṛthak, separately, i.e. in the order of the varnas, sabhyaih, by the Councillors possessing the qualifications mentioned hereafter, parivṛtah, surrounded, pratidinam, every day, the king swayam pasyet should, surrounded by the Councillors, himself decide; vyavahârân, judicial proceedings, according to the method to be described later on with the object of finding out the guilty and the non-guilty.

Viramitrodaya

The result of inflicting punishment is the acquisition of heaven; therefore the Author mentions the source of danda namely the judicial trials, and says that a judicial trial should be held by a king

Yājñavalkya, Verses 359, 360.

Yoraja 'that king;' dandyan 'who deserve punishment' i.e. who deserve to be punished excepting capitally; samyah 'well' i.e. in accordance with S'astra; dandayet, 'should punish' of course excluding the corporeal punishment; vadhyan 'who deserve to be bodily punished, i.e. those who have incured a corporeal punishment; samyah, 'well' i.e. in accordance with the procedure stated in the Sastra, 30 kills them, by encircling them with grass and faggots and then burning them. By the use of the word cha is included the dispelling of doubts of those who felt any doubt and did not do anything. By that the king will have secured the merit of performing the sacrifice where profuse dakshira such as hundreds of thousands of gold coins have been distributed; in short, the king obtains the merit of securing the result of that character which is produced from such sacrifice. Somewhere the reading is 'the dakshina which is given by a student after completing his study', there the meaning is 'those who have distributed the dakshina in profuse quantity.' (359).

ŏ

25

30

Bearing this in mind, viz. that the result is equal to surrounded by the performance of a sacrifice, i. e. in their company; swayam, 'himself', the judicial trial in the form of plaint and answer. prthak 'severally'; pratyaham, 'every day', pasyet, 'should investigate' i. e. take into consideration with a view to a decision. Swayam, 'himself' this should be, when it is possible; otherwise the course stated in the text1: "Is not able to attend himself owing to absorption of business etc." will be stated in the next chapter. This very arrangement is stated in the following text of Brhaspati also:

"The king should examine the causes, or the chief justice, or the twice-born; after placing before them the parts of justice, and in accordance with the opinion of the sabhyas and the dictates of the

"Of a king whose decisions about dharma are made by a śúdra, śastra". Manu² also: of that king the kingdom perishes like a cow sunk in a mud helplessly." Vyasa:-"he who, abandoning the twice-born, examines actions in the company of the low-born, his subjects are enraged, and his power and treasury perishes, By this the assistance of a sudra is also excluded. (359-360).

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 361.

The families, castes, the S'renis, the Ganas, and the Jânapadas also, when deviating from their duty, the king having chastised, should establish therein the right path. (361).

Mitâksharâ:—Kulâni, families, such as Brâhmaņas and the like; játayah, castes, such as the Mûrdhavasikta and the rest; srenayah, quilds, like those of betel-sellers and the rest; Ganah, Ganas, associations, groups, viz horse-dealers and the like; janapadâh, people, communities such as the artisans and the like. swadharmachchalitan, swerved from their own fallen, raja, the king, according to the gravity of their offence, viniya, having chastened, i.e., punished, pathi, in the (right) path, to their own duties, sthapayet, should establish. (361)

I. Yajñavalkya Vyawahâr Verse 3.

^{2.} Oh. VIII. 21.

30

Viramitrodaya.

After the punishment is administered to the kulas etc. the Author mentions the duties of a king in that connection Yajñyavalkya, Verse 361.

Kula 'groups' collections such as of Brahmans etc; jati, 'castes', such as the Murdhabhishikta and, other mixed castes; śreni, 'associations' i. e., collections of tradesmen etc; ganah, 'assemblies of men'; janapadah, 'people', such as agriculturists, artists etc. The use of the word cha includes other residents in one's territory not specifically 10 mentioned. These, when swerving from their own duties i. e., acting contrary to their own dharma, viniya, 'having brought under control' i.e., after punishing them according as they had deserved, pathi, 'in the way', i. e., in the proper path, the king should establish. In short, he should make them perform their own daties. (361).

15 'Punishment towards the evil-doers should be employed' thus has been said. That punishment is two-fold, bodily and pecuniary. As says Nârada:

"Punishment is thus pronounced to be twofold: bodily, and pecuniary punishment. Bodily is known to be commencing with 20 beating and ending with death. With a Kâkini and the like, begins the pecuniary punishment ending with one's entire property as well."

Although two-fold, still, according to the nature of the crime, it becomes manifold.

"Bodily is declared to be ten-fold, while pecuniary punishment manifold." 25

There, by the word 'the pecuniary punishments' are to be pronounced Kṛṣhṇala, Mâṣha, Suvarṇa, Pala &c,. These however, in different provinces are of different measures; thus in order that for the same kind of offence there may not arise in different provinces different kinds of punishments, a fixed standard of measure for Krshnala, and the like, in matters of penal law should be fixed. In order to show this, the Author says

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 362, 363, 364 (1).

In the sunbeams as they shine through a window a particle of dust is called a Trasaranu; these eight make a 35 Liksha; these three make a Rajsarshapa. (362).

^{1.} App. 53 and 54.

20

15

20

30

35

These three make a Gaura-sarşhapa; six of these make a madhya yava; these three make a Krshnala; these five make a Masha; and these when sixteen make a Suvarna. (363.)

Four Suvarnas make a Pala; or five even, so it is declared. (364).

Mitâkṣharâ:—In a sunbeam entering through a window, a particle of dust which is seen, that is called trasarenuh by the Lord of Yogis, and the like, who are the seers of truth. Te ashtâu, eight of these, viz., these eight Trasarenus make one Likshâ the egg of a louse born of sweat tisrah, these three, i.e. the three likshas make one Râjsarshapa or râjikâ The Râjasarshapas when three, make one Goura sarshapa. The meaning is clear. Gaura-sarshapâh shat, six of them make a yavomadhyah, a middle size barley i.e. a barley seed which is of a medium size, neither too thick nor too thin. By this it is inferred that the Gourasarshapas also may be of medium size. And likewise the Rajasarsapas even.

By the expression 'of a medium size' the words "mustard" &c., are not only mere terms denoting a measure but also they are terms denoting the substances measured thereby; these should be so construed. As the barley measuring one prastha is denoted by the word prastha, similarly, any substance such as mustard &c., which is measured, now being here, shall be denoted by the word Sarshapa. But by taking the words sarshapa &c., as mere denominations for a measure, and on account of the impossibility of measurement by annihilating the Trasarenus measures, transactions about measures like Krshnala and the rest would not be possible thereby. There, a medium size mustard may also be thick, thicker, thickest, or, thin, thinner, thinnest; and in different provinces it may have different standards of measures; so (to obviate this) it has been stated as a rule, that in matters of penal regulations, the medium size of mustard &c., should be taken. Te yavâh madhyamâh, those yavâs of middle-size, trayah, when three, make one krs'hnala. Those Krs'hnalas, when five, make one Mâshah. Those sixteen Mâshas make one Suvarnah. Those Four

^{1.} Cf. marathi Likha. (लिखा).

^{2.} The black mustard.

^{3.} The white mustard.

10

20

Suvarnas make one Palam. These are the tables thus given. Or five (Suvarnas) make one Palam, so has been stated by Narada and others. There, by taking a Krs'hnala as being

*Page 103 equal to three thick barley-corns, it follows that a Kṛs'hṇala is equal to one-sixteenth of a Vyāwahārika Niṣhka.¹

With five of them (Kṛs'hṇalās', a Maṣha. With sixteen Maṣhas, a Suvarṇa. This (Suvarna) is also equal to five legal or customary Nishkas. These Four (Suvarnas) make one Palam, (or in other words) twenty Niṣhkas make one Palam.

Where, however a Kṛs'hṇala is taken to be equal in weight to three thin barley-corns, then of the legal Nishka Kṛs'hṇala becomes a thirty-second part.

In this alternative a Suvarna is equal to two and half 15 Nishkas, and a Pala equal to ten Nishkas.

When, however, a Kṛṣ hṇala is measured with a middle-sized barley, then, the Kṛṣ hṇala is the twentieth part of a Nishka, and Suvarṇa equal to four Nishkas, and Pala equal to sixteen Nishkas. Similarly, in the case where five Suvarṇas are taken as being equal to a Pala, there, twenty Nishkas make a Pala. Similarly, in other cases also, where a Kṛṣ hṇala is taken to be the fortieth part of a Nishka, there a Suvarṇa is equal to two Nishkas, a Pala is equal to eight Nishkas, and so on.

All this is to be inferred from this very Sutra² according to 25 the customs of different people.

Having thus demonstrated the measure of gold, now the Author mentions that of silver

Yajnavalkya Verse 364 (2), 365 (1).

Two Kṛs'ḥṇalas make one silver Mâsha, these sixteen 30 make one Dharaṇa. Ten Dharaṇās verily make a S'atamâna Palam. (364)(2).

^{1.} Vyāwahārika Nishka is the legal or customary Nishka used as a measure, and which is equal to 16 Kṛṣhṇalâs. It is just as taking a rupee which is equal to 16 annas.

^{2.} The Sutra is that four Suvarnas make a Pala (पूलं धुनर्जाश्चन्नार:), and a Suvarna is equal to eighty Kṛs'hṇalas (अशीतिकृष्णलं धुनर्जम्).

A Nishka is four Suvarnas. (365) (1).

Mitakshara:-Dwe Krshnale, two Krshnalas, above mentioned make a Rupya mashah, silver Masha, relating to silver. These silver Mâshâs when Shodas'a, sixteen, make a Dharanam. Purana, of this even, is the other designation: "Sixteen of these make a silver dharana, or purana." thus has been said by Manu.

Das'abhirdharanaih, by ten dharanas, S'atamanam palam, are measured a S'atamâna Pala. So it is to be understood. The above-mentioned four Suvarnas form one silver Nishka. [364-365(1)].

10

15

20

5

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 365 (2).

A Kârshika is a copper pana. [365 (2)].

Mitâksharâ:-Of a Pala, the fourth part is a Karsha is well-known among men. Measured by a Karsha is karshikah. &c. A transformation of copper is tâmrikah, made of copper, a copper coin. A modification of copper weighing one Karsha is called Pana, which is also called Karshapana. As says Manu!: "A karsha for copper is a kârshâpaṇa, or Paṇa". By taking five Suvarṇas as making a pala, then twenty Māshas make a Paņa. In that case the statement "a Masha is said to be a twentieth part of a Pana" becomes valid for business purposes. By taking four Suvarnas as making a Pala, however, sixteen Mās'ās make a Paņa. In this alternative. though the words 'a suvarna', 'a pana' or 'a karshapana' have the same meaning, still the words 'paṇa' and 'karshapaṇa' are copper coins only.

25

Thus have been described the measures for gold, silver, and and copper as they are necessary for penal purposes. Of the measures of bronze, ritika (brass) etc , which form part of the every day transactions of people, this same measure should be understood. (365) (2).

The Author now mentions the terminology of his own law 30 Yâjñavalkya, Verse 366.

One thousand and eighty Panas is the highest punishment, and is called Uttama-sâhasa; half of that is the middle, or Madhyama-sâhasa; half of that (again) is declared to be the lowest, or Adhama sâhasa. (366).

^{1,} Oh. VIII, 136,

Mitâksharâ:—Of Paṇâs, the thousand, i.e. thousand Paṇas; one of which that is the measure is Panasâhasraḥ. Along with eighty, this is sâs itiḥ; that Daṇḍaḥ the measure of which is thousand Panas with eighty more, is the amercement Uttama sâhasaḥ should be called Uttama-sahasa. Tadardham, half of that, viz. half of one thousand eighty Paṇas is Madhyama, middle i.e. five hundred and forty paṇas daṇḍaḥ; of this, measures middle sahasa, or Madhyama-sâhasa; tadardhamadhamaḥ, half of that is the lowest viz. half of five hundred and forty Paṇas i.e. two hundred and seventy Paṇas is the a amercment for the lowest Sahasa, which is called Adhama-sâhasa, declared by Manū and others. As to what Manu¹ has said viz²:

"One hundred and fifty Panas are declared (to be) the first amercement; the middle one, five; and one *Page 104. thousand as the highest." that alternative course has reference to offences committed unintentionally. (366).

Viramitrodaya.

Punishment will be laid down as of four kinds. Therefore a part 20 of the punishment being dependent upon the knowledge of the money measure, the meaning of the technical terms are being given

Yâjñavalkya, Verse 362-366.

Jale, 'in a jali' i.e. in a window, 'sarya marichi', 'rays of the Sun', yadrajah, 'the dust' there that which is actually being seen, 'sa shma, 25 'in the form of soft dust'. So says Manu²:—"That is known as transfernu, when the sun's rays are passing through a window and its nite is, the soft dust that is seen, these that is known as the first of the mare ures, and is called trasarenu"

These Trasarenus, eight of these make up Liksha. These shown in scientific works as Rajsarshapa, (black med and). three such rajsarshapas make one Goursarshapa, (white must); six

^{1.} Oh. VIII. 138.

^{2.} Ch. VIII. 133,

Gaursarshapas make a Madhya, and which is known as Yava also. The word madhya also goes with Râjsarshapa; three madhya-Gold messures. yavas are known as Kṛṣḥṇalas; five kṛṣḥṇalas are called a Māsha; sixteen māshas make a Suvarṇa; four or five suvarnas are known as a Pala. As another alternative, five make a yava. By the use of the word api, 'also' another measure of Pala used in books of medicine is included.

In regard to the measures of silver, the Author mentions a special rule. Kṛshnala has been stated before. The two make Silver measures. a silver maṣha. Sixteen of these silver maṣhas make 10 a Dharaṇa; dharaṇa has another designation namely Purana. So says Manu!:—"These sixteen of these especially is known as Dharana also Paraṇa, the silver."

Ten dharanas make a hundred silver Palas. Suvarnáh have been formerly mentioned; four of these make a silver Nishka. Here by the use of the words, cha, tu, vå, are dispelled doubts about less or greater measure in the tables of measurements stated.

The Author mentions a special rule in regard to copper measures.

Tâmrikah relating to copper, a variety of it. KârCopper Measures. shikah, in the form of one fourth Pala and by 20 reason of its being known among people as Karsha is known as Kârshikapana; that also is known as Kârshâpana as otherwise designated. So says Manu²:—"Kârshâpana is known as a copper hârshika pana." Nârada:—"Kârshâpana in the southern part is in circulation as a silver. In the East it is associated with the panas and it 25 consists of sixteen panas," also, "Kânini is the fourth part of a Mâsha and of a pana".

Sashiti, 'with eighty', i.e., together with eighty panas; of the panas a thousand of the measure is 'a thousand panas'. That in the form of punishment is known as the Uttama sahasa, 'the highest amercement'; thus it follows that a fine amounting to one thousand eighty was as the Uttamasahasa, i.e., danda is the 'Highest amercement' Half of the uttamasahasa is declared as Madhyamasahasa, 'the Middl. amercement' in the śastra, and half of the madhyama sahasa has be leclared, i.e., stated as the Adhama sahasa, the 'Lowest amercement' it is said in the Smrtis. In Manu's however: "two hundred and fill fithe panas has been declared the 'first sahasa', five hundred is the Adle, and the uttama, i.e., he highest, is one thousand'. Thus has it n defined. (362-366).

.../

Oh. VIII. 137.

^{2.} Oh. VII. 137.

³ Ch. VIII. 139.

10

15

The Author now enumerates the kinds of punishments Yájñavalkya, Verse 367.

A reprimand, afterwards the reproof, then fine, and after that corporal punishment; these should be employed separately, or together, according to the nature of the crime. (367).

Mitâkṣharà: —Dhikdandah, reprimand i. e., rebuke by the words "fie etc."; vâgdandastu, a reproof, however, consists of harsh and imprecatory words; and dhanadandah, fine, consists in deprivation of property; as also tathâ vadhah, death, punishments commencing with the confinement of the person and ending with the taking away of life.

These four-fold punishments vyastâḥ, taken separately i. e., by one at a time, or samastâḥ, conjointly i. e., by two, three, or four at a time, according to the nature of the crime, yojyâḥ, should be administered.

In the above order, on failure of each former, each subsequent is to be employed. As says Manu:

"The reprimand should first be employed, reproof afterwards, 20 thirdly a fine, after that a corporal chastisement." (367).

The Author now mentions the points in the regulation of punishment

Yâjñavalkya, Verses 368.

Having ascertained the guilt, the place, and the time, as also the capacity, the age, the act, and the means, punishment should be given to those deserving punishment. (368).

Mitâksharâ:—Aparâdham jñâtwâ, having ascertained the guilt, in accordance with it, punishment should be fixed having regard to the place, time, age, act, and wealth (of the defaulter); in accordance with these, dandyeshu, upon those who are punishable, i. e. upon those deserving punishment, one should administer the punishment.

^{1.} Oh. VIII. 129.

10

15

25

Also after taking into consideration whether the elements of intentional or unintentional, whether it is the first offence or a repetition.

Although with regard to the king, this 'collection of duties of king' has been stated, still even for other castes also which are authorised to administer and protect the subjects and districts, this very law should be considered to be applicable to them also.

In the text "The duties of kings I will declare (and) show how a king should conduct himself," the seperete mention of the word Nrpa (protecter of men) indicates his capacity to levy taxes, and also his duty of protecting and the inevitability of the power to administer punishment. (368).

Here ends the First Book known as regards the 'Rules of Conduct of the Good' in the Commentary on the Dharmasâstra of Sri Yâjñavalkya, called the Easy Mitâksharâ.

The Composition of great Bhatta Vijnanes'wara, the Paramahansa Parivrajaka, the son of Sri Padmanabha Bhattopadhyaya of great glory.

"Of one bearing the surname Uttama, is this composition, his own, an exposition of Dharma S'astra, by Vijnanesvara 20 Yogin."

In this Book, Chapters, (1) Introductory (2) Of the Celibate Student. (3) On marriage. (4) Caste divisions .(5) Duties of a Householder. (6) Of the Snatakas. (7) Of the eatables and non-etables. (8) About the Purfication of things. (9i The Rules about Donations. (10) On S'râddha. (11) Of the Ganapatikalpa. (12) The Graha-S'ânti. (13) The Duties of kings. Thus Thirteen Chapters.

"This exposition of the S'astra treatise by the sage Yajnavalkya, for what learned person is this not ordanied? Although of measured words, still having profuse meaning, it sprinkles the nectar round 30 the ears."

May Prosperity be.

^{1.} See Manu. Ch. VII. Verse 1.

ŏ

20

Viramitrodaya.

Now while giving the divisions of the punishments, the Author mentions the alternatives about their application

Yajnavalkya, Verses 367, 368.

Dhik dandah, dhik, 'punishment' i. e. 'fie upon you', vak dandah, 'an abuse', i. e. harsh words, such as 'you are a sinner, 'I shall beat you'. and such like harsh words at random; dhana dando, 'monotory fine'. in the form of payment of money; vadhah, 'bodily punishment' in the form of the cutting off of the limbs, or of killing. By the word tatha, are included the imprisonment and beating. These punishments, either jointly or severally, each by itself, one, two, or three, according to the guilt, should be used for the guilty. The word hi is used respectively i. e. thereby the distribution of punishments would be according to the guilt. (367).

Not only that the punishment should be in pursuance of the guilt, but the conditions of the place, and of the offence also, should be followed. So the Author says :- aparadham viz. the offence. Whether it was done, once or often, whether it was of little importance or of great, whether the des'as, country, has been troubled or not; then 25 as to kalam time whether it was in famine time or in a time of plenty: balam, strength whether the bodily strength was great or not; vayah, age, such as infancy and so on; harma, 'act' such as, relating to agnihotri; location such as the slaughtering place &c. Of these, after knowing about the person who has incurred the punishment, after 30 giving consideration to it, for the guilty i.e. one should let the punishment fall on the offender i.e. he should administer the punishmeut.

Here ends the first chapter entitled the duties of a King,

Of the commentary of S'ree Yajnavalkya known as the 35 S'ree Virmitrodaya composed by Shrimant Mitramis'ra the best among the learned scholars of all the lores, the son of Parsurama Mis'ra with the special honour, the son of Hansapandita.

who was appointed by S'ree Veersinhadeva, the Sun blossoming the lotuses of the earth surrounded by the four oceaus, the 40 great king the son of Śree Maharaja Madhukara Sahayya whose lotus like feet are illuminated by the rays of the crest-jewels of all the dependent kings his fendatories.